This from Y. Frank Freeman, president, Motion Picture Producers Association, at the recent Quigley Grand Awards ceremonies, in Hollywood.

Also present to approve, and to say as much, were Walter Wanger, president, Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences; Frank Capra, president, Screen Directors Guild; Ralph Morgan, president, Screen Actors Guild, and Charles Brackett, past president, Screen Writers Guild.

The growing significance of the Awards project in Hollywood is thus indicated by the participation of such organizational heads to honor the job being done, on behalf of production, by the man in the field. In bringing the showmanship needs of exhibition closer to the production source of showmanship supply, the recent presentations mark the widest step yet taken to that end.

THEY ARE NOT TO BE IGNORED

Elsewhere in this section is an account of a "Hunchback" campaign taken from a routine report to his district manager by Emil Groth of the RKO 86th Street in a terrifically-competitive New York City neighborhood. Groth's promotions were set down briefly without any attempt at elaboration. Yet, this brevity could not conceal the ingenuity and work in the job done without the benefit of newspaper cooperation or exploitation aids available in other situations. In a section where theatres stand almost shoulder to shoulder, and with Broadway first-runs but a few minutes away, Groth carved out a noticeable campaign with a solid foundation.

The spotlight is also to be trained upon the ground covered by the big city neighborhood manager. Situations of this kind are important. In seating capacity and magnitude of operation they often dwarf the smaller city first-run. Too little is published about the ticket-selling endeavors of these neighborhood troopers. Despite the limitations of exploitation possibilities, they turn out a brand of showmanship that rates the stamp of high boxoffice approval.

THE TECHNIQUE DOES IT

Quite a few men we might mention offhand, could go far back in the files and brush off a handful of aged stunts for profitable working on current dates. That's no magic. In fact, it's been done right along, and more power to it.

In Guelph, Ontario, a few weeks back, Russ McKibbon, at the Palace, gave away a live baby on "A Child Is Born." It made the local headlines and even the Toronto papers carried the story. Business was terrific. Of course, the gag is eight years older than Methusaleh's granddaddy. But Russ polished it up till it ran like a streamlined flyer.

A workable stunt never dies. When it begins to fall apart at the edges, efficient designers of showmanship are ready to remodel the pitch for further long life at the boxoffice.

AN INVALUABLE AID

Brooklyn newspapers announce a publicity drive on behalf of that enterprising borough of New York City. The campaign is arranged by various lunch clubs with support from the local Chamber of Commerce. Nothing in the early releases indicates that Brooklyn theatres or theatremen have been invited to take part.

Correspondence now arrives from Detroit having to do with a similar civic project. Here the city's theatremen are expected to lend valuable aid in making a success of the campaign. Detroit has long ago learned to depend upon its showmen for inspiration in movements to advance community activities.

Round Table In Pictures

With $3.50 worth of logs and bark purchased locally, Round Tabler Sam Gilman of Loew's Theatre, in Harrisburg, Pa., formed the basis of his effective atmospheric front on "Northwest Passage" illustrated at right. Title was spelled out in rough hewn cutout letters atop boxoffice which carried the star's name and word "technicolor".

For the world premiere of "Road to Singapore" at the Florida, in St. Petersburg, Sparks' ad man, Walt Tremor, arranged a nautical lobby display; entire staff was dressed in naval uniforms during run. . . . Electric setup on "Raffles" at RKO Proctor's, in Newark, was arranged by Bob Ungerfeld, patrons invited to open drawer without ringing bell, tickets going to winners. Principle was a magnetic field set up around safe whereby anyone touching it broke the field which started a slight current, amplified by a relay, causing the bell to ring.

Contacting local merchants for his tiein on "Shop Around the Corner", R. Lee Kline at Warners' Orpheum, in Philadelphia, secured photos of girl employees, from which thumbnail cuts were made, and promoted newspaper for cut and space. Readers were asked to identify girls, guest tickets going to winners. For lobby setpiece the pictures were used with appropriate tiein copy. The benign gentleman in photo below is none other than Kline.

Guest Tickets Offered for Herbert Souvenirs

Topping the four leading broadcasts arranged for "Victor Herbert" at the Michigan, Detroit, was an interview with Victor Kolar, local symphony director, on his friendship with the famed musician. The conductor, guest at a special screening, directed a concert of Herbert melodies on the day after opening. Theatre was given entire back-page of program as a result.

Outstanding publicity tie-in was a story in Len Shaw's popular theatre column in the Free Press, offering guest tickets to readers presenting authentic Herbert souvenirs, such as theatre programs, ticket stubs, letters, autographed photos, etc. Record dealers were tied in for co-op ads and windows, bands featured Herbert melodies in advance, book stores used windows to advertise the Herbert biography, and leading shops a special Herbert handkerchief.

Campaign was put on by Manager Robert P. Corbin and Alice Gorham, of United Detroit Theatres publicity department.

Warfare Relics Featured By Corker for "Glory"

Through the courtesy of Major Anderson, U.S.A. and recently transferred to the University of Georgia Military Department from the Philippines, Moon Corker, L & J city manager, Palace Theatre, Athens, Ga., was able to plant an atmospheric window on "The Real Glory." Paraphernalia promoted from the Major included home made guns, arrows, spears, knives, homemade rugs with maps of the islands, etc., all allegedly confiscated from the Moro warriors in recent uprisings. Theatre blowups and title cards were also spotted in the window. Cooperating newspaper thought the window so attractive, reporter was sent to cover it and interview Major Anderson, carrying story following day.

Grimes Hosts Friend Of Victor Herbert

Locating a resident of Erie, Penna., who was a friend of the late Victor Herbert, Ken Grimes for that date at the Warner had the woman interviewed during half hour promoted radio program of the composer's music. Special letters calling attention to the opening were mailed to leading music organizations, full page of co-op ads was promoted from local merchants who incorporated song titles in each ad and lobby featured recording machine which played the Herbert tunes week in advance.

On "Gulliver's Travels," Ken held a coloring contest for kids which was tied to local paper, man-on-street radio program was held daily in front of theatre, schools were covered by distribution of heralds and for his lobby display, huge cutout of "Gulliver" was planted in conspicuous location.

"Are You Set For Spring?"

Hyatt's "Pinocchio" Marquee

A score of youngsters in "Pinocchio" uniforms were stationed atop the marquee of the New York Center Theatre by Manager John Kenneth Hyatt, as part of his exploitation on that date. Working in relays, the boys marched around the low marquee.

THE QUIGLEY AWARDS

Complete campaigns are not necessary. The Awards are based on single ideas or promotions—the "meat" of a campaign. This may be in the form of an individual contest, tieup, display, front-page story or what have you. All that has to be done is to send along that one idea with the usual evidence.

Members who desire to send along complete campaigns are invited to do so. If meant for the Awards, please make sure the top individual ideas or promotions to be considered are clearly indicated.

Theatremen who earn Fortnight Appointments most frequently in the two-week Fortnight periods will receive more consideration from the judges in the voting for the Quarter-Master Plaques, Medals and Citations. Thus entrants are advised to enter material in as many of the Fortnights of each Quarter as possible.

"Geronimo" Scenes Enacted By Localities for Seymour

Setting up a log cabin close to his theatre, Dwight Seymour at the Erie Theatre, in Hugo, Okla., received cooperation of localites and Indians from nearby reservation to enact such scenes as scalping, warriors attacking settlers' homes, war dances, etc., all as part of his advance exploitation on "Geronimo." Boys with cameras were on hand to shoot pictures, which were enlarged and displayed in lobby and about town week ahead of opening.

Since local prominents dressed in colorful Indian garb formed part of the little company making the pictures, much interest was aroused. Entire group in costume paraded about town, visiting newspaper offices and winding up at theatre opening night, where members of the Indian band gave a concert.

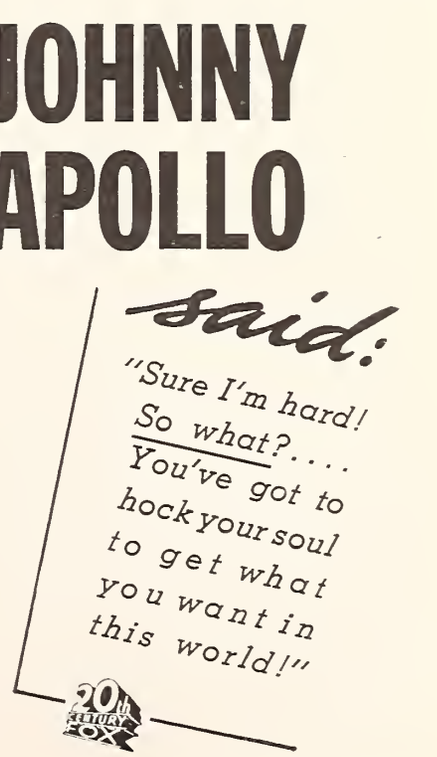
"Are You Set For Spring?"

New Promotes Prominents For Free "Oz" Kid Show

As a result of conversation held with four local prominents during which Larry New at the Windsor, Vancouver, praised his forthcoming attraction "Wizard of Oz" and expressed a wish that all kids could see it, the gentlemen in question agreed to shoulder cost of a free matinee for underprivileged children.

Since the identity of the donors was to be held in confidence, New's next step was a visit to his newspapers which brought human interest stories. In addition promoted sweets were available for the kids, who were transported to and from the show gratis by local transportation company.

"Are You Set For Spring?"



Dinerman Hosts Veterans

The military possibilities of "Fighting 69th" were further exploited by Dinny Dinerman, for the date at the RKO Albee, Cincinnati, Dinny arranging for drum and bugle corps representing different veteran organizations to appear each night during the first days of the showing. Legion posts and Disabled American Veteran units were tied in to the promotion, each plugged in the theatre's advertising and newspaper publicity. From 30 to 50 made up each outfit for the stage appearances.

Weekly Quiz Program Successful for May

Before leaving Schine's Hippodrome, in Corbin, Ky., for his post at the Paris, in Paris, Ky., Round Tabler Ed May put on a very successful Quiz program, with teacher from local high school acting as master of ceremonies. Held each Friday evening, patrons were invited to send in their questions and answers, to each whose queries were accepted, guest tickets were awarded. Cash prizes were awarded to those participating in the quizz and correctly answering questions.

For his "Balalaika" date, May secured the services of a popular high school senior, well known locally for her radio performances. Girl sang hit tunes at luncheon clubs, school assemblies, political rallies, etc., week ahead of opening. In addition, the girl announced title, cast and playdates.

QUIGLEY GRAND AWARDS WINNERS DETAIL HOLLYWOOD IMPRESSIONS

by RAY BELL
Director, Advertising, Publicity, Loew's Washington Theatres

A Quigley Grand Award is something infinitely more than the mere acceptance of a huge plaque. It is an event of significance; an occasion so crammed with memorable moments that it offers promise of a memory never to be erased from the mind of one fortunate enough to have had the experience.

That's precisely how I feel today, and that is a thought which I know will persist regularly and long. The thrill that was mine when news of my having been named for the Quigley Silver was first received is but a mere heart beat compared to the palpitations aroused by A-Mike Vogel's personally escorted junket in Hollywood. (This guy's name is open sesame in this fabled land.)

Ceremony Impressive

The sunshine, scenic splendor and even the unending parade of beauty (enough to make even the indifferent male a confirmed Californian) plus the magic of movie-making must take second place to the impressiveness of the ceremony of the annual Awards. To me it is as significant as though Mahatma Ghandi were suddenly to emerge as an Esquire fashion plate, to find seated about the festive table representatives of the vital crafts on whom movie-making and exhibition live and breathe. We're all aware of the differences which frequently arise between producer, actor, writer and others concerned with cinematic structure; and we're aware, too, that these differences are so enormous at times as to completely estrange the warring parties.

Therefore it is a refreshing experience to be part of a gathering in which estranged parties come together in harmony; a harmony that's been generated by the realization that the man in the field deserves and merits Hollywood's undivided attention and interest.

And, fellow-members, that's what your two representatives have earned. The presence at the Awards of Mr. Y. Frank Freeman, Walter Wanger, Frank Capra, Ralph Morgan, Charles Brackett, and others whose names are easily recognized as Hollywood leaders, indicates that Hollywood is in harmony on the importance of exhibition, and that it is in harmony in its desire to salute those exhibitors who go about the business of selling pictures as aggressively as they can.

I know of few occasions that would bring together such formidable people. Small wonder, then, that I keep emphasizing the thrill and satisfaction of the presentations.

Once you've got your hand on the Plaque it as as though you've been handed the key to Hollywood. For it immediately opens the pearly but closely guarded gates. I've been through the studios once before. But I was then just another guy named Joe Visitor. The magic of a Quigley Grand Award transforms things. Even those sets which shout "No admission under any circumstances" mean nothing. Even though studios whose product you do not and probably never will play in your city, bend over backwards to indicate their appreciation for exhibitor enterprise and sincerity. There's nothing these fellows omitted to make us feel at home, comfortable and happy.

I shall not attempt to chronicle in detail the studios visited nor the procedure of operation. Virtually every member of our industry knows that all too well. But what he may not realize is that picture making is an incredible undertaking. It is a hazardous undertaking, too. And one that is beset with obstacles, barricades and problems the like and regularity of which would drive to complete despair any other business. A visit must convince even the guy whose own wife terms a lout, that Hollywood is doing its job well and diligently and without cause for reproach. A visit convinces that the people behind the scenes and those who are part of the scene, know their business and that they don't deserve the criticism and abuse too frequently heaped upon them by others.

Praises Consistency of Effort

When you're faced with the knowledge of the million and one items that must be performed before a camera actually grinds you wonder not whether a picture will be good or bad, but how this manufactory turns out such an abundance of product and such a high and consistent excellence of product, too.

We in the field have got to doff our hats to the boys and girls who make it possible for us to butter our bread. After the closest observations I'm an enthusiast. Don't sell Hollywood short!

Before the final period I must reiterate. Being a Quigley Grand Winner isn't just a thrill. It isn't just a great personal satisfaction. And it isn't just a high honor. It's an event that comes probably once in a lifetime.

THANKS EXPRESSED BY AWARDS PARTY

For the warmth of the reception accorded the "visiting firemen" in Hollywood, Ray Bell and Lige Brien shout lusty thanks to Howard Strickling and Don McElwaine, to Harry Brand and Bob Doman, to Perry Lieber and Link Unkefer, to Cliff Lewis and Don Chatfield, to Bob Taplinger and Arthur Eddy, to John Joseph and Dave Lipton, to Johnny Johnson, to Lou Smith.

Warnerite Stresses Ingenuity of Set Making as Outstanding Reaction in Studio Visits; Finds Ideas for Theatre Use

by LIGE BRIEN
Manager, Warners Prince Theatre, Ambridge, Pa.

Previous Quigley Award winners have detailed their impressions of Hollywood. Without dissenting voice they have voted it a fabulous land and a place in which hospitality abounds for those who invade it carrying the Quigley standards! To all that has been said about it I add my affirmative vote.

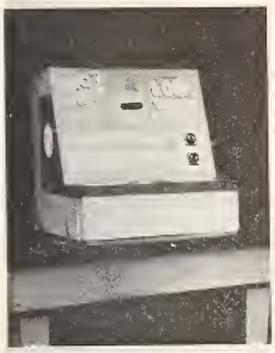
We would all instill into our theatre operations a happier note could we inspect the scenes behind the making of pictures. It is truly wonderful, this business of picture-making. Most interesting of all is the thoroughness, the detail with which skilled craftsmen go about the chores of creation.

Seemingly from nowhere are produced huge sets, homes, palaces, islands, cities. From the same source arise all of the furnishings and props vital to the completeness of screening. No detail is too minor.

Thoroughness a Watchword

As an illustration of the ingenuity with which authenticity is produced I was impressed by the sight of a laborer manufacturing cobwebs which were to add a touch of antiquity to a particular scene. From a simple yet queer-appearing contraption in his hand, rubber cement was propelled by a tiny electrical fan. This produced the finest cobwebs that could easily be accepted as the "McCoy." A trivial item, yes, but one that convinced me that thoroughness is one of the watchwords.

With every movie-goer a self appointed critic, taking fiendish delight in turning the spotlight on seemingly trivial errors, it becomes Hollywood's duty to make pictures as error-proof as possible.



This I think they do, and do very well. On every studio are unsung men and women of much genius who go daily about the business of bringing to life items which make production of pictures an art and a science. We theatremen can exercise some degree of ingenuity in "selling" our wares. But I am convinced that without the ingenuity of the skilled workers here we exhibitors would be less enterprising, would have less to seize upon as exploitable fare. I salute with as much gusto as I can summon the colossal craftsmen of the cinema.

Sutton's Confucius Contest

Based on the new Confucius fad was Henry Sutton's contest on "Invisible Stripes" at the Regent in Pittsburgh. For passes entrants were requested to write Confucius gags which included title of cast name such as: "Fellow who is smart enough to marry rich girl gets 'Raft' of money."

A TEASER ANIMATION

Working plan, below, explains peep-box animation, left, created by Manager R. M. Thomason, Princess, Bowling Green, Ky., for "City of Darkness." Copy alongside peep-holes reads, "Who? What? Why? Look Through Here!" To the sides of top peep-hole is placed copy reading: "Push this button and see the City of Darkness," and for the other, "Push this button to see the famous sleuth." Silhouette of Chan placed behind circle in plan and covered with white paper is not seen except when second button is pressed, when light reveals silhouette.

Groth's Candid Cameraman Aids on "Hunchback"

"Candid cameramen" apparently taking photos of passersby distributed tiein "Hunchback" cards as part of Emil Groth's campaign on that picture at the New York RKO 86th Street Theatre. Card carried copy to the effect that folks' picture was actually taken, but if they wanted to see the biggest picture of the year, not to miss, etc., etc. Giant 14-foot cutout of Laughton was used in lobby ahead and outside during run. Leading sandwich counters in neighborhood used imprinted napkins plugging the date, schools were circularized and shopping bags imprinted for various stores during engagement.

"Are You Set For Spring?"

Opening of "Whiteway" Celebrated at New Lex

With the opening of the new $70,000 white way lighting system in the area of the Lex Theatre, in Chicago, falling on a day when the thermometer was hovering around 15 below and ceremonies scheduled for outdoors, Round Tabler Ray Wheeler jumped in and persuaded the committee to go through with the arrangements and conduct the entire affair in the lobby of his theatre. By quick thinking, within an hour all arrangements were completed for the switch.

For "That's Right, You're Wrong," Wheeler promoted caps and gowns which were worn by his staff and clerks in cooperating stores week ahead. Staff covered high school distributing lucky numbered diplomas from Kay Kyser's Musical College, 50 of them being good for free admissions. Particularly effective was Ray's street bally with ushers in caps and gowns carrying various musical instruments and banner reading: "We are not members of Kay Kyser's orchestra, but," etc.

Gibson Programs Aid Rural Draw

With a limited seating capacity of 310, in the small town of Greenville, Mich., Round Tabler Charley Gibson, at the Gibson, gets a fine return from his originally conceived programs, extensively distributed in the rural drawing area from which 85 per cent of his patronage comes. The reasons the programs receive close attention, writes Gibson, are originality, attention-getting, localization, flexibility, attractiveness and low cost.

Charley gathers his own material from press sheets, mat services, reviews, trade and newspapers. Selected material is dummied, then photographed and printed by offset. The Round Tabler reaches for compelling copy for his front covers, using gags where appropriate. For instance, on "$1,000 a Touchdown," the cover was split for a foldover, each half being, respectively, a cartoon cut of Joe Brown's and Martha Ray's wide open mouths, which when folded together made up one still wider. Accompanying copy read: "Open wider, please, for the laugh of a lifetime." For a Jane Withers picture, Gibson used a burst-through front for Jane and the "Boy Friend," against a decorative background, to convey the action. On a Jack Benny date, the cover was stepped to show Benny on the phone talking to the other leads, with copy to fit.

Star Heads Featured

For romance picture, the theatreman goes more for close-ups of the stars from photos highlighted appropriately and with soft backgrounds. For a Spencer Tracy date, the cover was taken up with a large head of the star, alongside of which was placed his Academy Award stressed in copy box at bottom and cut of Award to balance. Copy is often localized, such as on "Young Mr. Lincoln," which showed Abe on donkey-back under the line "Riding into Greenville so that I can witness the story," etc.

Exploitation Tips From the Field

Ingenious stunt with a little different slant was arranged by Frank Steffy at the State, in Minneapolis for "Babes in Arms," through tieup with local confectioner, a giant bag of promoted candy coins were displayed in window and presented to person coming closest to guessing number of coins in bag. New twist to the stunt was that winner could name his pet orphanage, theatreman sending all the candy to the underprivileged children at the home, with the compliments of the winner.

With his date on "Bachelor Mother" falling during National Baby Week, Frank A. Millspaugh at the Palace in Gary, Ind., secured cooperation of main department store, which brought main window display consisting of baby togs and string of diapers across top with title letters on each leading into blowup of Ginger Rogers with playdates, cast, etc. Store also plugged the engagement in their ads and storewide.

For his "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" date at the Kentucky, Danville, Ky., Bill Yeakle promoted a full co-op page of ads. Each merchant tied his product to the picture with such tags as "Mrs. Smith buys at so and so when she goes to Washington," etc.

Folks in Columbus, Miss., were presented with kisses from Deanna Durbin recently when Burgess Waltmon at the Princess Theatre played "First Love." Through tieup with local confectioner, candy kisses were promoted and tied to tags which were imprinted with picture copy, playdates and cast and distributed in streets and stores.

As an institutional stunt pulled recently at his house, Harold Leand at the Revere, Revere, Mass., secured statements from various localites on their warm regard for his theatre. These statements together with cut and names and addresses were used daily to sell his house.

Compoboard "U Boat" planted on carriage wheels and appropriately lettered was pushed about town by one of Herb Righthand's ushers at the Island, in Hollis, L. I., in advance and during run of "U Boat 29." Righthand reports the bally as particularly effective and inexpensive.

Working with Earle Holden at the Capitol in Atlanta, Ga., publicist Terry Barry promoted the Police Department for an exhibition of firearms, etc., which was used for his "Crime Prevention" lobby display. With explanatory cards, and proper tiein copy the aggregation attracted considerable attention and word-of-mouth comment.

Reported as highly successful was the ticket sale contest arranged by F. W. Davis, at the Auditorium, Marshall, Mo., for "Gulliver" through the cooperation of rural schools. No student, resident of Marshall was eligible. Each teacher was accountable for the distribution of the tickets to children and prizes were awarded to those turning in the largest amount of cash.

Theatremen Stage Leap Year Shows

To be filed away 'til next Leap Year are the stunts put over for that occasion by Managers A. J. Kalberer at the Indiana, in Washington, Ind., and Will Harper at the Strand, in Trail, B. C. "Kal" through tieup with cooperating paper arranged for a "Leap Year Birthday Party" to be held on his stage, all localites celebrating their natal day on February 29th, being invited to attend the special show. Various promotions arranged by the theatreman for his guests included corsages for the ladies, cake and ice cream which was served on the mezzanine, etc. Paper tying in on the party covered it with stories and photos.

Harper on the other hand received much publicity through his ads and distribution of heralds announcing the award of a "gentleman" to girl holding lucky ticket purchased for his Leap Year show. Much secrecy was attached to the unknown male, teaser ads and gag copy playing up the stunt. At the conclusion of his show Will called the winner to the stage and presented her with a male canary bird.

Junior Chamber of Commerce Tied to "Drunk Driving"

Part of R. Mitcheltree's "Drunk Driving" campaign at the Capitol in Calgary, Canada, included tieup with the Junior Chamber of Commerce and permission from the Mayor and Chief of Police for the erection of white flags in different districts during the week's safety drive. In case of a fatality, the white flag was replaced with a black one for a period of a week.

Numerous merchants with programs on campaign and devoted window displays to the stunt. Letters were sent to all members of the Ministerial Association and members of the Board of Trade and a special screening was held for local police and club.

Hot off the press is the new house organ gotten out by the Springfield, Ohio, Chakeres Theatres, carrying message from General Manager Phil Chakeres. Under the direction of Mike Chakeres, handling the exploitation, boxoffice tips on putting over forthcoming attractions are featured for the benefit of the managers, who are encouraged to report on their activities. Not overlooking the assistants, a page will be set aside each month for outstanding work put on by these men.

MacEachron's O'Hara Search

Search for a local Scarlett O'Hara was instituted by Manager J. R. MacEachron of the Paramount, in Jackson, Tenn., as part of his publicity on "Gone With the Wind." Having been appointed chairman of the publicity committee in connection with the recent President's birthday ball, Mac ties the picture to the event by having winner of the contest presented with replica of Leigh gown, which she wore to the local festivities. Newspapers carried stories well in advance, during the search and night of ball, which was also covered by WMC, in all of which the picture was mentioned.

New York and Hollywood want your opinion

PARAMOUNT PICTURES INC.

TIMES SQUARE CHICKERING & ROAD NEW YORK CABLE ADDRESS FAMOUS

OFFICE OF ROBERT M. GILLHAM

February 14, 1940

Mr. Edward L. Reed, Manager
Strand Theatre
Providence, R.I.

My dear Eddie:

We have just screened DR. CYCLOPS - a most extraordinary and unusual picture - and I want to take a few minutes of your time to tell you something about it.

The Story is bizarre, novel, NEW! It concerns a crackpot scientist who has the diabolical power to reduce men and women, as normal as yourself, to the size of dolls, and holds their fourteen inches of quivering humanity within his dreaded grasp.

The Cast is comprised of unknowns, for if known stars were placed in the picture it would have destroyed much of their credibility. Don't be afraid of the performances, however, for these "unknowns" are real troupers and turn in acting that is without a flaw.

The production itself presents one of the most amazing technical accomplishments ever to come out of Hollywood, and this is saying a great deal, for Hollywood is always doing the amazing. The technique employed is so marvelous that the picture actually was made behind locked doors.

Now, Eddie, we have a problem. And the problem is to inform the public of the excellence of DR. CYCLOPS. Because of the unusual story and the lack of star names the people may be inclined to pass up this great picture. The release date is being held up until we can formulate publicity proper for the picture, and to attain this end we are anxious to have two or three preview runs in as many representative cities and from our experience on these runs really get up our campaign.

You have been particularly successful in your publicity in Providence and your Providence patrons have been most generous in their support of outstanding attractions. Would you agree, therefore, to a preview engagement of DR. CYCLOPS beginning Thursday, March 7th and advise us of the comments and reactions of your Providence audiences?

Please give this your earnest consideration and let me know as soon as possible of your decision.

With kind regards,

Very truly yours,
Robert M. Gillham

INDEX

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

NEW YORK, U. S. A

A Statement by
The Radio Corporation of America on TELEVISION

for the Home!

IT IS NOW POSSIBLE for the RCA to announce the extension of its plans, to provide, first, a regular television program service in the New York area; second, the offering to the public of receiving sets at moderate prices within the reach of the average American family; and third, the initial step in the construction of a television radio relay system as a means of interconnecting television transmitters for simultaneous service to and from other communities.

An improved program service has been evolved by the National Broadcasting Company, and is now available to residents in the New York area within the transmission range of the RCA transmitter atop the Empire State Building. As soon as network relays are erected, the National Broadcasting Company will provide a program service for other communities. This relay service also will be available to other broadcasting companies desiring to transmit television programs.

During the past ten months RCA Victor Television Receivers have been sold throughout a wide service area in and around New York City. The owners of those sets, some living as far as 90 miles from the transmitter, regularly see and hear NBC's television programs. They report fine, clear reception. They are enthusiastic about the technical performance of their RCA Victor Television Receivers, and the quality and entertainment value of the programs.

In order to provide every facility for the expansion of television service throughout the nation, RCA has licensed more than 45 competing manufacturers to use its inventions for the manufacture of television receiving sets. RCA also has licensed others in the industry to use its inventions in building television transmitting stations and manufacturing studio equipment.

In developing television and making possible the simultaneous transmission of sight and sound through space by radio, the Radio Corporation of America has translated many years of pioneering technical research, and the expenditure of many millions of dollars, into a public service.

In this evolution of an engineering achievement into a public service, it has been necessary for RCA to draw on its experience in all fields of radio. World-wide communication knowledge, development and manufacture of every type of radio apparatus, and the creation of a national broadcasting program service, each have contributed to the fundamental requirements of a television service for the home.

A great new industry, therefore, is in prospect which will call on the technical and financial resources of the radio industry. Television affords great promise in the creation of a new art and the utilization of every form of artistic talent, and is capable of an almost unlimited expansion of service to the public.

We urge, therefore, that the residents of the New York metropolitan area acquaint themselves with the interesting television program service now made available by the National Broadcasting Company. RCA Victor dealers throughout the area are ready to demonstrate the new combination television and radio receivers, which reflect in their price a reversal of usual merchandising methods. The prices at which these receivers are offered are based upon quantity production before volume sales have been realized.

Plans are under way for the construction of a television radio relay service between New York and Philadelphia. It is contemplated that similar connections with other cities will follow.

We invite the participation of the public in this effort of American private enterprise to create a new art and new industry, which should provide additional employment for the human and material resources of the nation, and contribute to greater prosperity and happiness for all of us in the years ahead.

ADJUSTMENT

WHILE our motion picture industry is giving such weighty consideration to governmental pressures, and having long thoughts and hopes about a consent decree in the anti-trust suit, we may look about and see that this is but a part of a general picture of adjustment now most conspicuously in process across the whole of American business.

The over-all scene is one of adjustment, rather than die-hard combat.

It is now more than obvious that the defeat of the N.R.A. with the demise of the Blue Eagle was but a skirmish, not a victory for the pre-existent order. Just incidentally the Supreme Court of today is not, by considerable, the same body that rendered the decision in the famed chicken case.

The successors to the N.R.A. are in reality Mr. Thurman Arnold and the Securities and Exchange Commission. One rules or seeks to rule, by lawsuits and courts, the other by rules and pointed suggestions about legislation. The list of successors might well include, too, the Administrator of the Wages and Hours Act, and the National Labor Relations Board. Looking back, it would seem to many that the much-resented N.R.A. in its day gave more promise of self-regulation than today's program.

Among the manifestations of adjustment in progress in the very significant sector of "downtown" finance are the two special instances: The House of Morgan becomes "J. P. Morgan, Incorporated," a limited company, and, somewhat more immediately to our interest because of his picture associations, Mr. Floyd Odlum's newly announced and somewhat extraordinary merger of his Atlas Corporation, an investment company, with Curtiss-Wright Corporation, an industrial concern.

These corporations, stripped of the verbiage of the able and facile explanations that accompany them, are large and astutely genteel processes of adjustment to the new order or, in other words, a "getting out from under," with a hope of continuing to do business.

THE motion picture, which lives by its sharing in payroll money paid to the many, is very much a party at interest in this process of the continuance of business—the success of the processes of adjustment.

It is meanwhile to be remembered that the customers, present and potential, are all still here, and that in some fashion, through and after phases of adjustment, they will be served. When the dust settles, it is likely to be found that the same people will be serving the same public, with much the same merchandise, for something closely resembling a profit.

Just the morning this goes across the desk come the tidings of a dividend on big Steel. That would appear to mean something encouraging enough to jingle every dime in the United States.

WHY we haven't the slightest idea, but this desk is on the publicity mailing list of the California Fruit Growers Exchange. Maybe they feel neighborly toward Hollywood. Anyway, simultaneously with Mr. Hays' report that films are bigger and better, we find that the parent navel orange tree, planted by Eliza Tibbets in 1873, is delivering a record crop "with .56 milligrams of vitamin C per cubic centimeter of juice." Apparently it's California's year.

NEW SOUND?

THE new system of recording and reproduction of sound evolved by the Bell Telephone Laboratories, to be demonstrated concert fashion at Carnegie Hall in New York in April, and presently to take to the road with Mr. Walt Disney's "Fantasia" feature cartoon, must, if successful, make eventual impact upon all theatre sound standards.

The official Bell release says: "There will be shown, for the first time, the possibility of reproducing every sound that the ear could have heard initially. The listener in Carnegie Hall will have the same spatial sense as to the source of the sounds as if he were sitting in the original hall, and in addition he will hear the music enhanced by variations of loudness and tone quality according to the interpretation of the original director."

This new evolutionary, and revolutionary, sound system has been on the way since 1933. If one is to take at par the contentions of its exponents, sound systems will have to be done over all the way from Hollywood stage to theatre screen, just as the F-M, or frequency modulation, system threatens to make over radio broadcasting and reception.

IT is in the nature of the inevitable that motion picture sound technique should show significant development and refinements of method. No very large step has been made for nearly a decade of sound pictures. There does, to be sure, remain a question as to whether or not the majority require and would importantly recognize more perfect sound rendition with "spatial" values. In radio, as the debates on the Armstrong F-M system have developed, there is a sector of opinion that today's radio sound is "good enough." That, however, has never so far been the policy of any department of the motion picture business. Presumably, if there is better sound to be had the motion picture will have to be having it, let costs be what they may.

The Disney "Fantasia" special sound roadshow presentation will be the first field experiment, of important clinical interest to all exhibitors.

Meanwhile, many sound reproduction systems now in service cannot deliver to the audience as much as the Hollywood recorders put into the prints.

FIFTY years ago last Wednesday the first long-distance telephone call was made. It was from New York to Boston. The telephone business was eight years old then. The Bell company was experimenting with the service of girls to supplant the profane young men who tended the switchboards. The girls were found to have better manners. In 1922 the dial system, which has no manners at all, was instituted.

This Week in the News

The Government

MORE AND MORE the long arm of the United States Government is felt by the motion picture business, by allied arts—and by many another industry—reaching out legislatively, administratively and judicially, to rule, regulate and interpret the manner of doing business, even actually participating in the business.

This week a stir in Congress over the divergence of relief funds to filming of Pare Lorentz' "Fight for Life," now being sold to theatres by United States Film Service, caused the House Appropriations Committee to recommend that Congress make no funds available after June 30th for the continuance of such documentary film production. See page 13.

Determination of the future complexion of a large part of the present industry structure continued this week to depend upon endeavors to arrive at a program of settlement of the United States Government's "key" New York anti-trust prosecution of the eight large companies, with both sides still sparring over the contents of a "consent decree," or its equivalent.

The company defendants have in circulation, widely, in production, distribution and exhibition, a tentative draft of a consent decree. It embodies the hope that important concessions on block booking may be traded off for a lesser pressure on divorcement of circuit operations from distribution.

First of the three non-circuit-owning defendants to break a non-committal attitude toward a "consent decree" settlement, it is understood, is Universal, which would cooperate with the other defendants if such a decree were for the good of the industry and did not impose too harsh a burden on Universal's operations.

And while all of this maneuvering for position continued, so did the pre-trial examination of industry leaders of company defendants. See page 14.

The United States Department of Commerce, last Friday, virtually took the industry apart statistically, in 12 pages of calculations on the industry's worth and operations. The document was sent to the press of the country. See page 70.

The same Federal Department also turned in one of the most detailed reports ever written on Hollywood's world tax bill. See page 16.

Telecasters, many of whom claim close kinship to motion pictures, as they seek film industry talent and product, were "stunned" over the weekend when the Federal Communications Commission rescinded its approval, given only two weeks before, of partial commercialization of television. The FCC is displeased with some television merchandising methods directed at the public purchaser of receivers. See page 31.

The United States Supreme Court on Monday gave the Federal Communications Commission a "free hand" in issuing licenses to radio broadcasters. See page 31.

The Federal Communications Commission continued hearings on arguments over the place in the broadcasting sun to be held by "frequency-modulation" in radio and television. See page 32.

The United States supreme court handed down an unprecedented decision, limiting claims in motion picture copyright infringements. See page 35.

The United States Internal Revenue Bureau reported that exhibitors' income in February was much better than January, as reflected by the $1,852,764 admission taxes received. See page 52.

The United States Securities and Exchange Commission ordered a public hearing to determine whether it should suspend or withdraw a registration statement of Educational Pictures. See page 77.

Scouting any idea that trade unions, including those in the motion picture business, enjoy a blanket exemption from the Sherman Act, the U. S. district court at Washington on Tuesday upheld the action of the Department of Justice in invoking the trust law against the AFL Teamster's Union, accused of restraining trade during a jurisdictional dispute. Some few years ago, a jurisdictional dispute between Hollywood studio unions led the IATSE to call out its projectionists at circuit theatres.

China to Export

THE PLAN of the Herman A. DeVry Corporation, Chicago motion picture projector manufacturer, to set up a $1,000,000 circuit of 500 16 mm film places in China, with the aid of Chinese money and business men, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, on February 24th, page 30, is to be extended internationally by taking Chinese films made by Chinese producers in China to North and South America. The project begins with the acquisition of distribution rights to both 16 mm and 35 mm films of United China Motion Picture Corporation.

Pictures

A FRESH CROP of plans came from distributors this week for concentrated showmanship on field premieres.

MGM selected West Orange, N. J., to open "Edison the Man," in mid-May.

Republic set "Dark Command" for Kansas City's Granada and Dickinson, April 4.

Paramount will take 300 exhibitors and newspapermen to the Albany theatre at Albany, Georgia, April 11, for "The Biscuit Eater."

Louisville will see the first public exhibition, on April 5th, of the Hal Roach-United Artists "1,000,000 B.C."

United Artists started planning the "world premiere" of Samuel Goldwyn's "Westerner," in Texas, on a date to be determined.

In each instance the opening will be accompanied by the same type of local fanfare given to so many "junkets" conducted of late into the interior for press, radio and box office attention.

And while the ballyhoo of field openings continues, so do holdovers and moveovers on product already playing.

"Gone With the Wind" this week reached its 1,224th opening in 1,095 cities. RKO reported holdovers in 150 situations for "Pinocchio." Paramount said "Road to Singapore" receipts were running as much as 74 per cent ahead of "Union Pacific," with $227,168 grossed at 38 initial dates during the Easter weekend, and 40 more key openings were set for the week. Fox had 39 holdovers for "Grapes of Wrath." RKO booked "Primrose Path" for 100 openings over the weekend.

Tour for Shirley

THIS, the first year after four-in-a-row in which Shirley Temple led MOTION PICTURE HERALD's Top Money-Making Stars find Shirley's close-managing Mother and Dad turning attention for the first time to offers made to their growing daughter for personal appearances at movie-stage theatres and elsewhere.

It took Shirley six years to reach radio; her parents finally "relenting" last Christmas Eve to a reputed $35,000 price for a single appearance on the Screen Actors Guild hookup; they turned over the $35,000 however, to the Guild's relief fund.

Now Shirley is said to have received an offer of $10,000 a week plus a percentage of gross receipts for a personal appearance tour to take in the New York World's Fair and theatres in the east. Among other places mentioned are the Hippodrome theatre in Baltimore, the City Steel Pier at Atlantic City.

Option Proposal

TWENTIETH CENTURY-FOX on Wednesday sent out its notice of annual meeting of stockholders to take place on April 16th at 2 in the afternoon at the corporation's headquarters in New York, for a twofold purpose: 1. Electing 12 directors as provided in the by-laws; 2. Considering and acting upon a proposal to grant to Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president of the corporation, an option to purchase not exceeding an aggregate of 100,000 shares of the common stock of the corporation.

The stock option for Mr. Zanuck is an inducement to enter into a new five-year employment contract at his present salary. The proposed contract is for a period beginning Aug. 22, 1942, and ending March 31, 1947. Mr. Zanuck's compensation last year was $255,000. Under the option agreement Mr. Zanuck would pay for the common stock whichever of the following two amounts is higher: $13 a share, or an amount which is $1 in excess of the average price per share at which the common was sold on the New York Stock Exchange on the day prior to the stockholders' approval of the option.

Granting of the option will be conditioned on the execution of the new employment agreement and upon the surrender by S. R. Kent, president, of the cumulative option held by him under his contract. Mr. Kent has agreed to surrender his option upon the stockholders' approval of the option to Mr. Zanuck.

The proposed option agreement may be changed or modified by mutual consent, subject to approval of the board. Mr. Zanuck on March 1st owned directly or indirectly 93,130 shares of Twentieth Century-Fox common stock and 55,284 of preferred; in addition 30,000 shares of common are held in certain irrevocable trusts for the benefit of Mr. Zanuck's family.

With the execution of a new employment contract with Mr. Zanuck, Joseph M. Schenk, chairman of the board will enter into a new employment agreement, also for an additional five years at the same salary. Mr. Schenk last year was paid $113,833.

Townsend Uses Film

LATEST of the political or social causes to turn to the motion picture to offer propaganda is Dr. Francis Townsend, proponent of a super de luxe "ham-and-eggs" plan for paying the aged or unemployed with governmental funds.

Theatres in 85 cities in the United States already have shown the first of a series of movie shorts featuring Dr. Townsend in "a message to the nation," and pressure for showings is urged in his weekly paper.

"Dirt Doesn't Pay"

THE American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers has added the regulation of song standards to its primary business of collecting royalties from theatres, broadcasters and other public performers of the music of its members.

With a warning that "dirt doesn't pay," the ASCAP management of John G. Paine and Edwin Claude Mills in New York has launched a campaign against salacious songs, and will discipline any of its members charged with writing those stag or smoker "hot blues" that have been used so much of late in coin-operated public music boxes. A committee of the society set up to stop the traffic in this sort of thing was ordered to penalize members by a fine, reduction of the rating by which they share in royalties, or expulsion from membership.

Reputedly behind all of this is ASCAP's desire to avoid attacks by public music groups, cultural interests or women's clubs whose sympathies are needed at this time for the society's defense of its position in the several courts and state legislatures where anti-ASCAP litigation or legislation is pending or threatening.

Joining ASCAP in its cleanup this week was the Music Publishers Protective Association.

In what might be described as "taking the hint," the Songwriters' Protective Association Tuesday resolved to set up an ethics committee, with power to discipline any member found guilty of "deliberately writing an obscene, lewd or lascivious song."

Triples in Chicago

THE CHICAGO BATTLE raging for years between Balaban and Katz and independent exhibitors over the question of double bills versus singles is getting hot. Last month Balaban and Katz tried a test of singles at several of their theatres and a dozen independents acted similarly. B & K declared the tests showed singles had failed to hold up, and returned to doubles, but the independents claimed otherwise, although they had to revert to duals because of the B & K competition. Extending the line of battle, nearly 20 independents now are playing triple bills with giveaways thrown in, in some places, and the situation daily is becoming more acute. The Howard theatre and the Revue, Admiral, Milford, Rivoli, Avaloe, North Center, Davis, Bryn Mawr and Buckingham are all tripling. All these are independent. Balaban and Katz triples at its Belmont, Crystal and Biltmore.

Estimating that doubles, triples, giveaways and other inducements at Chicago theatres cost $2,000,000 a year, both in costs and in admissions lost from those disapproving of them, independents in that city on Monday organized a committee to formulate a plan for the elimination of those and other "evils." The committee starts to work immediately, headed by Jack Kirsch, president of Allied of Illinois.

"Photogenicism"

TWO HUNDRED AND NINE Hollywood motion picture cameramen belonging to the American Society of Cinematographers turned for a brief spell last week from the glamour girls and boys of their work-a-day business to designate the ten most photogenic personalities "outside of films."

"Not entirely a beauty contest," as explained by Cinematographer Joe Valentine, the 209 chose:

1. Helen Wills Moody; 2. Paul V. McNutt; 3. Robert A. Millikan; 4. Dorothy Thompson; 5. Brenda Frazier; 6. Edgar A. Guest; 7. Mary Roberts Rinehart; 8. Lou Gehrig; 9. Osa Johnson; 10. Rex Beach. Osa Johnson is not "outside" of motion pictures, being presently engaged with Columbia Pictures in marketing "I Married Adventure," a feature which she produced from a book she published.

It will be noted that Hollywood's cameramen did not place either President Roosevelt or New York's Mayor LaGuardia, both considered "top" photographic subjects.

This week the Fashion Academy in New York named the 13 women in the USA who are "best dressed," named only one from the screen: Anna Neagle, Britisher, now in Hollywood working for RKO in "Irene."

ORGANIZED EXHIBITOR ACTION OPENS AGAINST ROOSEVELT'S 'NICKEL MOVIES'

Allied of Illinois Sees "Definite Threat to Theatres"; Heavy Taxes Suggested in Chicago and Denver

James Roosevelt's project for nickel-in-the-slot movies for taverns, cocktail lounges, and shooting galleries is meeting organized opposition from theatre owners, notably in Denver and Chicago. They see the enterprise as an invasion of the theatres' interest.

Heavy License Fees Proposed

The President's eldest son, one of Hollywood's newest suppliers of product to theatres, through his Globe Productions, United Artists release, intends to start installing the nickel machines within 90 days, but early opposition is developing, as witness:

Allied Theatres of Illinois this week resolved that the "juke" boxes are "definitely a threat to motion picture theatres."

Chicago, stronghold of Illinois Allied, has taken under advisement a $50 annual license fee for such machines.

Denver owners have petitioned the city council to tax them up to $200.

Censors are beginning to turn their attention to the subject, as in Chicago, where Harry Costello, lieutenant of Police in charge of film censorship, has declared that the 16mm films to be used therein must be submitted for approval.

Not that Mr. Roosevelt expects any censorship difficulties, for he told exhibitors in Chicago that he would seek "an okay from the Hays office." Nor does he feel that the machines would be competitive to regular theatres.

Exhibitors Meet Roosevelt

A "select group" of Chicago exhibitors met with and at the request of James Roosevelt in his suite at the Drake hotel last week to hear of his plans. One outgrowth of the meetings this week was the launching of a united attack by Allied Theatres of Illinois, Jack Kirsch, president. The organization passed a condemnatory resolution and Mr. Kirsch added that the matter of Mr. Roosevelt's machines would be brought up at the convention of National Allied in Chicago in June. He said he would bring up the matter at the convention if no one else did. He will also attempt to form a definite exhibitor policy in the meantime for combatting the idea, which he thinks is one of the most harmful exhibitors have been confronted with in years.

Disclosing the specific nature of early reactions of exhibitors to the nickel-in-the-slot movies is the Illinois Allied's resolution:

"That the Allied Theatres of Illinois go on record as being unanimously and unqualifiedly against any producer of motion pictures entering into the production of 16 millimeter film for so-called 'juke' boxes or slot machines inasmuch as these are definitely a threat to motion picture theatre business.

Exhibitors Protest

"That the producers be asked to lend their support in stamping out this evil by refusing to allow the use for this purpose of any actors, actresses, directors or personnel now used in the production of motion pictures.

"That this organization go on record, at this time, against the production of 16 millimeter—eight millimeter or any other size film, of motion picture features which have been released and/or shown in motion picture theatres, for use in non-theatrical competition."

ALLIED MEETING SET FOR APRIL 19

Jack Kirsch, president of Allied of Illinois, this week announced that the National Allied convention would meet at the Morrison Hotel in Chicago, April 19th, and continue for three days. Committees will be announced next week.

Mr. Kirsch said he would bring the question of "nickel movies" in bars and restaurants before the convention if no one else brought up the subject.

Mr. Roosevelt's meeting earlier in the week with the Chicago exhibitors opened with his statement that, rather than bring competition, he felt his nickel movies would enhance interest in feature length pictures. Exhibitors present told him they thought otherwise.

Mr. Kirsch brought forth the argument that the 16 mm films shown in Mr. Roosevelt's slot machines would possibly be three minutes in length to start with. But why wouldn't it be possible to show feature pictures on the machines as well, he asked. Plenty of 16 mm product in feature length size was currently available, he said. And why would the patron of a place have to pay for the films when the managers of the places where the machines were installed, especially taverns, would be glad to put in the nickels to keep the customers there?—as thousands of tavern owners now do with music machines.

Fears Demand for "Hot" Films

Alex Manta, head of Indiana-Illinois theatres, told Mr. Roosevelt he was of the opinion that salacious and objectionable films would be shown in the machines. Taverns, he said, would demand such type of entertainment. He felt that movies, like many of the record devices now used, would have to use "hot" material to interest the customer in such places. Such a policy would not, he thought, build good will for motion pictures.

Sam Myers, independent exhibitor and one of the recognized showmen in the Chicago area, said that with the slot machine movies, taverns would be in direct competition with theatres. He, also, believed that such machines would bring about the return of "stag films" of one sort or another.

Edwin Silverman, head of the Essaness circuit, was more lenient. He indicated that if slot machine movies had to come, exhibitors should combat them as they had premiums and other "evils" of the trade.

Sees Loss of Theatre Shorts

Jack Rose, of the Indiana-Illinois Circuit, expressed the thought that with the arrival of the 16 mm. short films for machines the production and exhibition of shorts for theatres would be overwhelmed and eventually be put out of business, except for newsreels. This, he thought, would bring a new tendency to inaugurate double and triple features in all theatres.

Charles Ryan, of Warner Brothers Theatres, said that with Mr. Roosevelt as a major producer it would be extremely difficult to call upon the women's clubs and civic organizations for help to combat nickel movies as competition. He though that the large companies should at all times be available to help the exhibitor fight off such "evils" as slot machine movies.

Walter Immerman, of Balaban and Katz, expressed himself against the idea from the standpoint that Hollywood talent should not be used in the films. They would be competitive if so made, he said, and if independent talent made the films, they would die of their own accord.

Roosevelt Replies

Mr. Roosevelt countered with statements that he believed the coin machine movies were not competitive; that they would take the money already allotted for phonographs; and that they would make patrons of taverns motion picture-conscious. He also pointed out that the film coin machines were coming and couldn't be ignored and that it was better to have the production of their films in the hands of a Hollywood producer than in the hands of an "outsider." He said the pictures he planned to make would be approved by the MPPDA and in no way would be salacious or objectionable.

He said that his deal with the Mills Novelty company for the making of the pictures was unsigned but he added that other music machine companies had equipment ready for the market and that the competition would be severe.

Mr. Roosevelt said 30,000 machines would be put on the market annually by all companies. He said that the showing of commercial films in the machines would possibly result if the audiences attracted by them so warranted. He also said that motion picture stars would not be used in the films for the shorts in order that real motion picture competition would not enter into the scene.

Final words from the exhibitors to the President's son were to the effect that with his prestige and name they hoped he would forget the slot machine business and devote all his efforts to the making of feature pictures. To do both, they felt, would find him at cross purposes.

Propose "Juke" Taxes

Proposed license fees for coin-in-a-slot motion picture machines was suggested this week in a letter to the Denver city council by Harry Huffman, Denver city manager for Fox theatres. Mr. Huffman intimated the machines might escape a just share of the supervision and other municipal expense unless appropriate charges were made. Acting on this the council license committee proposed that fees be made $200 for each operator, $50 for each machine placed by an operator, and $100 on each machine owned by an individual or company in his or their place of business.

The new nickel-in-the-slot movies projected by the Roosevelt-Mills interests as well as all "juke" boxes and similar devices face a $50 annual license fee in Chicago as the City Council seeks new sources of revenue. It is estimated such a levy locally will raise $500,000.

Meanwhile, jurisdictional dispute over the servicing of "juke" boxes is credited with inspiring police action in closing down on them in the Englewood district. Electricians' union claims sole jurisdiction.

Genet Gets Assignment

Ira Genet, who had been making a series of Vitaphone short subjects at the Brooklyn studio, which is now closed, will work under Gordon Hollingshead at the Warner coast studio. Charles Tedford, writer, has been shifted from the short subjects to the feature department and Owen Crump has been assigned stories and scripts in the short subjects department.

FIGHT IN CONGRESS OVER "FIGHT FOR LIFE" HITS U. S. DOCUMENTARY FILMS

House Committee Recommends No Funds Be Made Available; Lorentz's Salary To Be Cut; Loew's Rejects Film

A Congressional stir over "The Fight for Life," feature film about maternity in the slums, which Pare Lorentz and his "U. S. Film Service" produced for the U. S. Government, this week caused the House Appropriations Committee to recommend to Congress that no funds be made available after June 30th for the continuance of this branch of federal documentary-film activity.

Lorentz's Salary To Be Cut

During Committee hearings last week it was brought out that the salary of Mr. Lorentz, head U. S. documentary film producer, would be reduced from $10,000 to $7,500, to conform with salaries paid in the Government's Office of Education through which he has been operating, and it was said that in all probability he would resign.

And while arguments raged over "The Fight for Life" in House committee rooms, it became known in New York that the film, intended for regular theatrical distribution, had been rejected by the Loew Circuit, and had been condemned by the Maternity Association Center of New York for theatre exhibition, because it would bring "fear and terror."

"The Fight for Life," described as a studied indictment of childbirth conditions in the slums, is the first feature sound picture to be produced by the Government for theatre consumption, and so, by the charging of film rental for theatre exhibition, places Uncle Sam in the position of competing on a business-for-profit basis with motion picture producer-distributors.

From Relief Funds

Already the subject of wide controversy because of its treatment of childbirth, "The Fight for Life" this week became the cause of new argument when it was charged in Congress that it was produced with money diverted from funds earmarked for federal relief.

Albert J. Engel (Rep., Michigan), last Thursday charged that the U. S. Office of Education had supplied $178,000 of relief money to make "The Fight for Life" to show poor people in the slums eating from garbage cans, "after seven years of New Deal squandering of public funds."

Representative Engel declared that President Roosevelt had allocated $331,000 of emergency relief money for such film service.

"Actual Scene"

As a member of the House Appropriations Committee, Mr. Engel turned attention to a Committee report which showed that Thomas Atkins, a Government film production manager, had testified that the garbage scene was an actual "documentary scene" that had not been staged.

As a result of the attack on the diversion of relief funds to the Government's documentary film making, the Appropriations Committee recommended to the House that no funds be granted for continuance after June 30th, next, of either the film or radio services that were formerly part of the National Emergency Council as set up by the President and which are now divisions of the Office of Education.

The film and radio bureau which made "Fight for Life" was established by President Roosevelt by executive order, and could get the monetary support that is sought after June 30th only through Congress.

PAROLE PUBLICITY BRINGS ARREST

Garson M. Jaffa, theatre manager at Cortland, N. Y., was arrested this week on charges of publishing deceptive advertisements in publicizing a film on prison life.

The ads, appearing in the personal column of a newspaper, offered convicts the services of an expert in gaining paroles.

The House Committee's report said that, after consultation with parliamentary authorities, it could find no existing law that would authorize an appropriation to continue the work. The report further stated it had not passed on the merits of the activities and reserved judgment in that point, adding the Committee would consider merits only after Congress passed enabling legislation authorizing such activities. This was the first formal disclosure that the filming had no legislated authority.

The action of the Committee thereby deleted from the Security Agency appropriation bill items of $106,000 for the film service and $40,000 for radio.

Hearings before the Committee this week developed that the film service was financed this year by allocations of $75,900 each from the Works Progress Administration and the Public Works Administration, the two most extensive relief branches of the Government. This $168,500 paid costs of administration, while actual production activities were financed by another grant of $162,500 from the WPA, with which it financed two pictures: "Fight for Life" and "Ecce Homo—Behold the Man," and also for work on other films, now in work, dealing with rural electrification and agriculture.

Congressman Engel questioned committee testimony given by Arch Mercey, Assistant Director of the Education Offices's film activities, that the "Fight for Life" cost the Government $150,000. Mr. Engel told the House he had evidence it cost $178,000.

Asked by Representative Malcolm C. Traver (Dem., Georgia), chairman of the House subcommittee, why it was proposed to wait until July 1st to reduce the salary paid to Mr. Lorentz, instead of doing it now, Assistant Director Mercey expressed the personal opinion that Mr. Lorentz would probably sever connections with the Government "and quite a considerable investment which has been made for service and production would be seriously jeopardized."

Debut at "Art House"

The Government entered into the field of feature length exhibition when "The Fight for Life," with a running time of 69 minutes, received its first general showing at the Belmont Theatre, New York "art house" and exhibitor of foreign-language pictures. Previous efforts of Mr. Lorentz' United States Film Service had been confined to short subjects, principally "The Plow that Broke the Plains" and "The River."

The film, titled and adapted from the maternal welfare chapters in the work of Paul de Kruif, was prepared by Mr. Lorentz, who also wrote, produced and directed.

The picture, intended for general theatrical release, is described by George Gerke, head of the U. S. Film Service's headquarters in New York, as a dramatized effort to publicize a national problem and to acquaint the public with the resources on hand to meet the situation of maternity in the slums. According to Thomas Atkins, associate producer, the production is not one that would have been made by the Hollywood studios.

300,000 Feet for 7,000

It was estimated that upwards of 300,000 feet of film were shot for the 7,000 feet used in the final and finished form of the print still being shown at the Belmont Theatre. More than two-thirds of the scenes for the production were shot in silent form in and around the Chicago Maternity Centre.

Although the film is aimed at the field of general exhibition, no definite distribution schedule has been set. The picture's first playdate, the Belmont engagement, is a tryout. Sherman S. Krellberg, owner of the Belmont, is paying "a nominal rental fee," the exact amount of which would not be disclosed.

Despite the unsettled plans for exhibition, requests for bookings are said to have already been received from several cities and two independent distributors, whose names at present U. S. Film Service officials would not reveal, have indicated interest in handling the film.

"The Plow That Broke the Plains" and "The River" were distributed free by the government. "The Plow" played in more than 3,000 theatres. "The River" had more than 5,000 playdates. The purpose for selling the new feature length production, it is said, is intended to raise funds for defraying some of its production costs and the upkeep of prints.

The film, with its many scenes centered on childbirth, does not carry a Production Code Seal, nor has any application been received by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America to grant one. The omission of a Code number is explained on the grounds that the film, as being sponsored by the government, "does not need a seal." The production has been shown to the New York State Board of Censors for the purpose of that body's own information and not for obtaining the Board's imprimatur, that had not been required because it is considered an "educational." "Birth of a Baby," a picture similar in theme and treatment to "The Fight for Life," was barred in 1938 from any public place of amusement by the New York State Censor Board.

Called Questionable

The National Legion of Decency placed "Fight for Life" in the "separate classification" accorded certain pictures, observing that introduction of this kind of material on the theatrical screen for presentation to unselected audiences is questionable, and concluding that the possibility that the depiction of the dangers attendant upon childbirth may affright some audience members.

There were some who saw in the picture's "community medical service" aspects some possible relation to the Government's present Federal court attacks on the American Medical Association for alleged monopoly in restraint of trade by conspiring to impair or destroy the business and activities of Group Health Association, Inc., a local Washington non-profit cooperative group.

Latest to attack regular theatrical release of "The Fight for Life," on Tuesday, was the Maternity Center Association, of New York, headed by a board composed of well known clubwomen, philanthropists, doctors and other professionals.

Attempts to determine the box office performance of the production at the Belmont theatre "test" have been unsuccessful, both the theatre management and Mr. Lorentz' New York office at U. S. Film Service declining to comment.

MAJORS DENY CIRCUIT, DISTRIBUTOR COLLUSION

Freeman, Rodgers Cite Ethics, Company Rules in Pre-Trial Government Questioning

The Paramount-partner circuits, and the Loew circuit do not disclose to the Paramount Pictures and MGM Pictures sales departments the details of deals concerning rival picture company product, Y. Frank Freeman, Paramount production head, and William F. Rodgers, MGM sales chief, testified on Monday and Tuesday at the pre-trial examinations in the Department of Justice's New York anti-trust prosecution. Both executives agreed with other company executives in the pre-trial examinations that a picture company ordinarily does not obtain confidential data from its affiliated theatres.

Neil Agnew, Paramount sales manager, Wednesday testified that his company grants 20 per cent cancellation to 86 per cent of its exhibitor customers. The scale, he said, starts at 20 per cent for theatres paying an average rental of $100 a picture and ranging to 10 per cent to those paying over $250.

Calls it "Unethical"

Mr. Rodgers maintained that it would be "presumptuous and unethical" for a sales executive to inquire into the licensing terms which an affiliated chain obtains from other picture companies; and he further maintained that, at the meetings of picture company executives at the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America offices, in New York, no exchange of information on sales policies is made.

Loew's would not gain anything by finding out clearance and rentals details between its theatre chain and other production companies, Mr. Rodgers asserted, adding that he obtained, for MGM pictures, "what I think is a sufficient price for our films, without regard for what others ask."

Paramount's theatre department is forbidden by a "definite rule" to supply the company's sales department with information about theatre deals with other companies, Mr. Freeman said on Monday. He added that the sales department "observed" the theatre unit's wishes.

Mr. Rodgers expressed regret over the fixing of permanent clearance terms in some localities. New houses and new playing policies were causing some inconvenience, he testified, and he said he was endeavoring to change the situation.

Tells of Clearance

Clearance was first imposed at the desire of exhibitors who wanted protection against competitors, he said. On the governing of admission prices, he said that in 1924 provisions were inserted in the licenses covering admissions because some theatres had opened with "ridiculous admission prices," in some places as low as three cents.

Mr. Rodgers said that most of MGM's films were rented to the Loew chain in New York on a percentage basis. The rentals were fixed at the season's start, he said.

For a picture company to have theatre affiliates is "almost essential," Mr. Freeman told Mr. Wright in Monday's questioning. He declared that Paramount first acquired theatres because exhibitor associations had slashed the number of its outlets; now, he testified, theatres, distribution, and production are "interwoven."

Mr. Freeman retraced the difficulties which forced Paramount to acquire theatres. The company, then called Famous-Players-Lasky, in 1919 formed Southern Enterprises, Inc., in conjunction with the S. A. Lynch Enterprises, to counter exhibitor groups who were boycotting Paramount pictures. He said these associations were intent upon building up their own unit of distribution, production, and exhibition—a unit which would control the industry. This was a threat which Paramount met.

He denied there was an agreement among companies on terms for talent loanouts. He said, "You simply pay each studio what they would have to pay the star for the picture."

At the close of Mr. Freeman's testimony, the Government announced it might examine Adolph Zukor, chairman of Paramount's board, who returned last Monday from a two and one half month tour of South America.

Mr. Rodgers concluded his testimony Wednesday morning.

Neil Agnew, sales manager for Paramount, followed Mr. Rodgers to the witness stand.

Majors Ask More Answers

On Friday the major company defendants in the Government's New York anti-trust prosecution were to ask Federal Judge Henry Goddard (who tries the case, scheduled for May 1st) to order the Government to submit more detailed answers to defense interrogatories.

The bulky Government answers in 300 pages, submitted two weeks ago, were incomplete and unresponsive in several instances, defense attorneys charged in notifying the court, on Monday, that they would press for more data.

Last week from Pittsburgh it was reported that most of the approximately 500 prospective witnesses against the majors, listed by the Government in its answers, would probably be called to testify, as indicated by notifications to such exhibitors in the Pittsburgh area, by Government investigators.

The request by the majors for more information is generally regarded as a move to delay the case, though Judge Goddard has repeatedly declared he would tolerate no delay beyond May 1st.

Suits In The Field

The Indianapolis Amusement Company's anti-trust suit against the majors was dismissed "with prejudice at the plaintiff's costs," by Judge Robert C. Baltzell, in that city's Federal Court, last Tuesday. The counter-suit by the majors against the plaintiff was also ended, with costs assessed against the plaintiff.

R. R. Bair, former operator of his own circuit in the city, and now an executive of the Olson circuit, brought the action. It is understood a settlement, involving payment to him, was reached several weeks ago.

The Fox Midwest circuit and its executives last week, in Lincoln, Nebraska, Federal Court, asked for dismissal of the $234,000 triple damage anti-trust suit brought against them by Frank C. Hollingsworth. They pleaded a lack of property in that state, and of a representative in the state at the time Mr. Hollingsworth sued. The executives, all of Kansas City, are district officers Elmer C. Rhoden, R. G. Montgomery, Charles Shafer, and H. A. McClure.

Firms Chartered

The Rend Amusement Corporation, and Certified Film Producers, Inc., both formed in New York County, have incorporated in Albany, N. Y. Certified Film was incorporated by Annette Gustafson, Blanche Gutlohn and Marjorie Roth, and Rend Amusement by Jacob Leff, Harry Gold and Lawrence Levin.

Kentucky Amusement Tax to Be Lowered

Governor Keen Johnson of Kentucky on Tuesday night permitted a bill to lower Kentucky's amusement tax to become a law without his signature, as the ten-day period following adjournment of the legislature expired at midnight.

The new law, to become effective June 12, will exempt from the tax civic, religious or charitable productions presented in municipally owned park theatres.

The law also lowers the state amusement tax on admissions of more than 39 cents from one cent on each additional five cents, to one cent on each additional ten cents; and on admissions of more than one dollar, one cent on each additional 25 cents.

A bill to tax bank night awards offered in connection with any amusement, including bingo games, up to 15 per cent, was signed. This measure also becomes effective June 12th.

Nominate Bamberger for President of the Ampa

The nominating committee of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, New York, meeting in annual session, Tuesday, in New York, selected Leon J. Bamberger, sales promotion director of RKO, as official candidate for president, at the annual elections, April 11th. The nomination is equivalent to election.

Other nominations are: for vice-president, Lou Pollock, publicity and advertising manager for Universal, in the East; for secretary, Kenneth Clark, publicity director of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America; for treasurer, Edward Schreiber, of the Warner Brothers publicity department; for trustees, Vincent Trotta and Herbert Berg; for delegate to National Chamber of Commerce, Hal Horne.

Named to the board of directors were Martin Starr, Eli Sugarman, Lou Lifton, Paul Benjamin, Paul Lazarus, Jr., and the four nominated officers.

Rutgers Neilson, of RKO, was chairman of the nominating committee.

Retiring president of Ampa is Paul Lazarus, Jr.

MGM Holds Two-Day Division Meeting

MGM's district managers in the eastern, southern, and Canadian divisions met in New York City on Thursday and Friday, under the supervision of Thomas J. Connors, MGM's manager for those divisions.

Attending were E. K. O'Shea, New York; John J. Maloney, Boston; Robert Lynch, Philadelphia; Maurice Wolf, Boston; Charles E. Kessnich, Atlanta.

The men discussed the summer sales drive to be held in June, July, and August; "Gone With the Wind" sales; and other matters.

Pasternak Honored

Joseph Pasternak, Universal producer, was honored at a luncheon Monday by the Variety Club of Philadelphia upon his arrival from the Coast en route to New York. More than one hundred attended.

Kents in Florida

"ALMOST FORGOTTEN BUSINESS MAN" REMEMBERED AND DEFENDED BY HAYS

Annual Report Defends Present Structure of Industry, Urges Self-Regulation Extension to Trade Practice Problems

The "almost forgotten business man" of the industry finds a stout advocate in Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America.

In his annual report, published this week, Mr. Hays vigorously defended the industry as it is now constituted and assailed, just as vigorously, "those who would use the hatchet and saw of litigation or legislation to sever the necessary economic relations of production, distribution and exhibition." The industry, he said, "is too complex to be increased, like the amoeba, by division."

The report advanced the contention that self-regulation rather than litigation, even though it is now "stymied by uncertainty," is the answer to present problems; attacked "the new censorship movement" which, he said, "parades under the name of 'community selection'"; and commented on the problems induced by the European conflict.

Sets Audience at 80,000,000

In his defense of the "almost forgotten business man" Mr. Hays said it is he who initiates and guides good pictures with the will to make them, the capacity to gather the hundreds of necessary skills, the ability to find the required investments and the courage to risk vast sums on entertainment ideas which may or may not find favor with a weekly audience of "more than 80,000,000" in the United States alone.

Attacking advocates of theatre divorcement he said,

"An economic imperative for a constantly growing stream of better pictures is that there exist well-organized, highly experienced and successful companies that produce, distribute and exhibit pictures in a limited number of large and successful theatres which they direct or operate."

Such companies have an added incentive to substantial investment, more employment and greater enterprise, Mr. Hays pointed out, in the fact that only by producing pictures which please the public can they avoid a double loss—in exhibition as well as in production.

Trade Practice Code Stymied

It is the industry's process of self-regulation in production which has attained for it its present social importance, Mr. Hays said, and it must be by application of this process that the remaining trade practice problems, "especially the development of a complete system of conciliation and arbitration," must be solved. The fact that the process has not been applied to these problems he blamed, inferentially, on the Department of Justice which last year warned the industry not to adopt a proposed trade practice code.

"Action is now stymied," he said, "by the same uncertainty that affects other industries involved in legal proceedings. No industry is helped by the pronouncement: 'Try it—at your peril!'"

Mr. Hays cited facts and figures to show the progressive social improvement of the screen as the result of self-regulation. That pictures which rank among the best the industry has produced should be made during the current tensions, dislocated foreign markets and reorganization to meet the demands for lower costs is not only a tribute to a free screen which has reached its artistic maturity, he said, but proves that self-regulation has succeeded where censorship has failed.

"Subterfuge" Attacked

Without mentioning the Neely Bill Mr. Hays then attacked several of its provisions.

"It is ironic," he said, "that notwithstanding this record there should be an insistence on a subterfuge potentially more vicious than any form of outright censorship. The new censorship movement parades under the name of 'community selection'—except that self-appointed censors, not the community, are to do the selecting. Community selection, in the real sense, takes place every day in every theatre in the land. No picture can succeed which the public in any given city or town or village refuses to support.

"But what is now urged through misleading propaganda is really selection without the consent of the community. It would be group selection exercised before, not after, pictures had been offered to the public, and before public taste and public opinion had an opportunity to assert themselves. Under whatever name this is glossed such a method would set up an irresponsible censorship by pressure groups.

"Dictation even by well-intentioned groups as to what pictures shall or shall not be shown in any given theatre, not to mention dictation from groups with an axe to grind, would stultify the art."

"Shotgun Legislation"

Mr. Hays attacked the method particularly because, he said, the advocates of "shotgun legislation" were willing to destroy the whole sales structure as it is at present constituted to make the new censorship possible.

Referring to the cooperation of public groups, which he said have worked year after year through every means of education to marshal public support for better pictures, Mr. Hays said,

"The principle of such cooperation has never been to dictate to the producer what pictures he shall or shall not make, or to dictate to the theater manager what pictures he shall or shall not show for the approval of the people in his community. Intelligent appraisals of current motion picture production, distributed through wider and ever widening constituencies, enabled families everywhere to choose the character of entertainment they desired to support."

Foreign Situation Noted

Commenting on the production record of the year Mr. Hays said it was all the more impressive because while on the domestic side there was the imperative need for economy, the fear that investments might not be justified by events of the future and the proposals sponsored by those who would substitute destructive legislation for self-regulation, the European war came at a time when foreign receipts were a most important factor in the planning of production schedules. He rehearsed the fears of total loss in the European market which clouded the horizon for weeks after the outbreak of hostilities and outlined the improvements in the picture which have since been effected.

British Agreement Reported

Commenting on the negotiations which resulted in the present agreement with England for withdrawal of 50 per cent of the annual revenue he said,

"The representations made and the negotiations entered into in London on behalf of all American distributors, constitute as fine an example of cooperation as this industry has ever achieved—cooperation not only within the industry but that received from our own State Department in Washington and from the American Ambassador in London during the whole course of the difficult and complicated proceedings."

Classroom Films Distributed

The report said the industry was continuing its cooperation with educators in making films available for use in classrooms. During the year the advisory committee on the use of motion picture in education, a voluntary group of educators set up a non-profit organization known as Teaching Custodians, Inc. Companies which are members of the Association have made selected short subjects available to this organization "for distribution in the schools for classroom use during a three-year period with no financial return to the owners of the negatives. The distribution of these 16 mm. films for classroom use is now proceeding."

Mr. Hays also noted that recent motion pictures were not the least of the influences that have contributed to a public opinion which demands that the United States shall remain at peace. "It is significant," he said, "that some of our films which dealt with the subject of war were banned abroad because in the judgment of foreign censors they were anti-militaristic."

Touching on production statistics he estimated that 527 films in 1939 cost $110,822,033.

"Quality Must Stay"

Concluding Mr. Hays said,

"The fact that our studios were able to respond with even better pictures, which resulted in increased theatre attendance in the domestic market proves that economies can be made without sacrifice of quality. But quality there must be.

"It is equally important that the industry move progressively toward better trade relations. No activity in this direction is wasted if it clarifies the issues and brings into sight a solution acceptable to producers, distributors and exhibitors alike.

"Finally it is a satisfaction to note the increasing use and appreciation of the machinery of self-regulation. Many valuable literary, dramatic and entertainment values have been saved by the operation of our Production Code in eliminating the socially offensive and the improper. It is to be remembered, however, that our code machinery is not a fumigating plant into which material tainted in essence may be put and dramatically and socially desirable entertainment may be taken out. Good pictures begin and end with the purpose so to produce them."

MPPDA ANNUAL MEETING ADJOURNED TO APRIL 3

Will H. Hays' annual report was presented to the directors of Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., at their annual meeting Monday at the organization's headquarters in New York. The meeting adjourned early because of the absence of several members and is to reconvene April 3rd.

HOLLYWOOD'S WORLD TAX BILL ON FILMS AND TICKETS

THE greatest tax burden ever placed on motion pictures exists today, growing out of the international developments, principally, which led to the present warring conditions in Europe and the Far East, with Hollywood product the principal sufferer. Mounting armament bills requiring billions of dollars have brought scores and scores of import levies on almost every conceivable line of merchandise, and practically everywhere Hollywood films, along with others, have been hard hit.

In one of the most exhaustive projects of research ever conducted on the subject, the Motion Picture Division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, Nathan D. Golden, Chief, brings forth for MOTION PICTURE HERALD, a country-by-country analysis of world taxes on motion picture films, detailing the import taxes and customs duties, censorship fees and taxes, taxes on distribution, on theatres, on admission tickets in 29 countries in Europe, 27 in Latin and South and Central America, 24 in the Far East and eight elsewhere—88 in all. Excluded are certain import license restrictions applied due to the wars. In this first presentation, the countries of Europe are treated; the others will follow in subsequent issues.

In a footnote the monetary units are translated into American dollars, at Saturday's rate of exchange.

EUROPEAN COUNTRIES AND TAXES

"In other foreign markets, too, American films must continue to thread their way through a maze of trade restrictions, tariffs, embargoes, quotas, import licenses, exchange controls and numerous other devices for preventing imports.

"Duties and import taxes have been raised in the Argentine, Australia, Bolivia and England. Quota restrictions have been increased in Estonia, the Italian Africa Colony and Japan. New quota laws have been passed in Australia, Brazil, Greece, Mexico, Spain and Switzerland. New interior taxes have been adopted in Algeria, the Argentine, Brazil, Canada, Egypt, England, India, Siam and Spain.

"It is fortunate that our Government has recognized the importance of our films not only as a part of our total exports, but as the messengers of American commerce everywhere. As a result of the trade agreements concluded by the State Department, our industry has been definitely and favorably affected by the opportunities to negotiate against exactions, barriers and restraints in certain countries."

CRITICS TOSS HATS IN THE AIR!

Read every word of the Newspaper Reviews on this page and the next!

"Here is a superb Easter treat. Perfect fare for adolescent and adult alike. Excellent. 'Young Tom Edison', the best movie Mickey Rooney can ever hope to make; an enchanting, completely captivating picture. An abundance of warmth and pathos and excitement comes out of Edison's childhood. It's swell to know that Spencer Tracy right now, is screening 'Edison, the Man' for future release. We're impatient for it already." —Irene Thirer, N. Y. Post

"Grand and absorbing screen entertainment. As American as ice cream sodas. The story of success over discouraging obstacles. It left your reporter pretty impatient to see the next installment, with Spencer Tracy in the title role. Here, then, is a picture to see again and again. Fine performances by the entire supporting cast. Direction could not be improved upon, and the script is excellent."

William Boehnel, —World-Telegram

"Amusing, splendidly backgrounded and human in its dra matics. One thing is clear: Spencer Tracy as 'Edison, th Man' has a tough assignment ahead. 'Young Tom Edison' going to be a hard man to beat."—Frank S. Nugent, N. Y. Time

"Beautiful and great film about Edison's boyhood with new and even better Mickey Rooney. The life of this boy every minure as exciting as any gangster thriller. There a enough thrills, tears, laughs and excitement in this film t satisfy even the most jaded. A fitting tribute to the invento of the motion picture." —Lee Mortimer, Daily Mirr

"The top box-office draw in the country, Mickey Roone shows how an inventor gets to be that way. He does it e tremely well. 'Young Tom Edison' is quite a show."

HIGHEST PRAISE FOR M-G-M's HEART-STIRRING PRODUCTION!

"The No. 1 box-office attraction of the screen steps confidently and understandingly into the shoes of genius and walks about in them as though they had been made to his own measure. Mickey gives a truly fine performance. Effective use of dramatic suspense. 'Young Tom Edison' an inspirational film. Homespun, warm-hearted humor. Much laughter throughout the film." —Kate Cameron, Daily News

"Well acted, with comedy as well as melodrama to amuse audiences. A sequel is now in production, but 'Young Tom Edison' can stand alone." —Eileen Creelman, N. Y. Sun

"A grand show, and an exciting one—chock-full of humor, drama, history, and heart-pull—with freckle-faced Mickey Rooney essaying his first really big role."
—Jesse Zunser, Cue Magazine

"'Young Tom Edison' is the most engaging screen entertainment on Broadway today." —Herbert Cohen, Brooklyn Eagle

"That astonishingly versatile actor, Mickey Rooney, scores a decided triumph in his newest picture, 'Young Tom Edison,' demonstrating that he's as convincing in dramatic roles as in comic ones. An enormously entertaining biography. Mickey Rooney, giving the grandest performance of his career, can take most of the bows." —Rose Pelswick, Journal-American

COMMERCIAL TELEVISION IS DELAYED, FREE HAND TO FCC ON AIR LICENSES

Commission Rescinds Order for Part-Commercialized System Starting September 1st; Reopening Hearings April 8th

Its victory of one month ago apparently dissolving into defeat, the Radio Corporation of America (which hailed the Federal Communications Commission's February 29th order, permitting it to receive expense money for television programs, beginning September 1st) received the news, on last Saturday, that the commission had rescinded its order, and would reopen television hearings on April 8th, in Washington.

David Sarnoff, president of the RCA, which lately inserted large ads in New York metropolitan newspapers, expressed astonishment, and hinted at pressure upon the commission by smaller television companies, rivals to RCA.

Follows RCA Campaign

The FCC reconsideration apparently was dictated by the large advertising campaign of RCA. The FCC order of February 29th, issued after several months' hearings, in which spokesmen from all parties were heard, had been considered a part victory for the RCA, in that it allowed acceptance of more sponsors, and the opportunity to build a larger listening public, which would in turn attract sponsors; and a partial victory for the smaller manufacturers, because it did not "freeze" television standards, a procedure which would have given advantage to RCA and other large manufacturers more advanced in processes and product.

The commission's suspension, setting April 8th for new hearings, followed a lengthy and at times reportedly acrimonious session at which members of the FCC expressed their displeasure with advertising carried in newspapers and periodicals by RCA.

The suspension order flatly attributed the commission's action to "certain promotional activities in connection with the sale of television transmission and receiving equipment" engaged in by RCA "in collaboration with, for or on behalf of a subsidiary or subsidiaries of said corporation which are licensees of experimental television broadcast stations."

See Research Retarded

"Said promotional activities," the order held, "may be detrimental to the public interest by unduly retarding research and experimentation and the achievement of higher standards for television transmission."

In a formal statement explaining its action, the commission referred again to the RCA advertising and declared "the current marketing campaign of the Radio Corporation of America is held to be at variance with the intent of the commission's television report of February 29. Such action is construed as a disregard of the commission's findings and recommendations for further improvement in the technique and quality of television transmission before sets are widely sold to the public."

The commission called attention to the fact that its report made no provision for the establishment of television transmission standards and that it then had held there was need for further improvement in the technical quality of transmissions.

"The intent of the commission," it was asserted, "was to give the industry further opportunity to move forward in an orderly manner and upon a sound scientific basis without causing injury to the public and resultant injury to the new industry itself, particularly to other manufacturers cooperating in seeking to bring about video improvements through experimentation rather than crowding the market with present-day receivers which may soon become obsolete."

"Economic loss to the public," the report warned, would be occasioned by "premature purchase in a rapidly advancing field."

Fears "Frozen" Standards

"Not all types of television transmission can be received by any receiver," it was pointed out. "In the present state of the art it is impossible to decide what type of transmitter will be made standard. More research and experimentation will be necessary, and is being conducted, before any such standardization can be achieved.

"Promotional activity directed to the sale of receivers not only intensifies the danger of these instruments being left on the hands of the public, but may react in the crystalizing of transmission standards at present levels," the commission contended. "Moreover, the possibility of one manufacturer gaining an unfair advantage over competitors may cause them to abandon the further research and experimentation which is in the public interest and may result in crowding them into the market with apparatus at present efficiency levels."

Sarnoff "Amazed"

Informed at White Sulphur Springs of the action of the commission, Mr. Sarnoff declared himself "amazed" at the commission's attitude.

"We have spent more than $10,000,000 in the development of television and in trying to create a new art and a new industry," he said in a telephone conversation with representatives in Washington. "We thought that we were proceeding exactly in accord with the order on this subject recently adopted by the commission."

The matter was brought before the FCC by Commissioner Walker, who called attention to statements in the RCA advertising that television programs were available in New York.

RCA officials this week privately called the latest FCC action "politics," but were reluctant to discuss the situation openly, fearing FCC

FCC ACTION "BEYOND THE LAW": LAWRENCE

The Federal Communications Commission, by rescinding its permission to telecasters to commercialize television programs after September 1st, has "exceeded its powers and gone beyond the law," David Lawrence, Washington political writer, charged in his New York Sun column on Monday. "A big industry has been struck down, with the inevitable result that more unemployment will follow," he added.

Mr. Lawrence asserted the FCC had power from Congress to allocate wave lengths, but not to control sale or receiving sets. "It now seeks to grab that control," he said. Mr. Lawrence also criticized the manner of the rescinding, without hearing, in "a sudden decision."

U. S. Supreme Court Holds Commission Need Not Consider Possible Economic Injury by New Station

The United States supreme court on Monday gave the Federal Communications Commission a free hand on radio station licenses, thereby further strengthening the position of the Commission, which, over the weekend, acting along other lines, called off the permission it previously had given to telecasters to go ahead with commercial television, on a partial basis, on September 1st, as reported in column one.

Must Take His Chances

Laying down the principle that he who engages in radio broadcasting must take his chances in the economic field just as does a manufacturer or business man, the supreme court held that, in passing on applications for new stations, the Federal Communications Commission need not give consideration specifically to the possible economic injury which may fall upon an existing station by reason of the competition.

The court's opinion, delivered by Associate Justice Owen Roberts, reversed a decision of the District of Columbia supreme court holding that the commission had erred in failing to consider the possible economic injury which would be occasioned Station WKBB, Dubuque, Iowa, by the construction of a new station by the Dubuque Telegraph Herald, for which it had granted a permit.

"We hold that resulting economic injury to a rival station is not in and of itself, and apart from considerations of public convenience, interest or necessity, an element the petitioner (FCC) must weigh and as to which it must make findings in passing on an application for a broadcasting license," the associate justice declared.

Free Competition

The Communications Act, he said, "recognizes that the field of broadcasting is one of free competition." The commission is given supervisory control of programs, business management or policy and "in short the broadcasting field is open to anyone.

However, he added, this does not mean that the question of competition between existing and proposed stations is to be entirely disregarded and, he commented, the commission's practice shows that it does not disregard that question.

But, the opinion said, "if such economic loss were a valid reason for refusing a license this would mean that the commission has power to grant a monopoly in the field of broadcasting, a result which the act itself expressly negatives and which Congress would not have contemplated without granting the commission powers of control over the rates, programs, and other activities of the business of broadcasting.

At the same time the court warned, it does not follow that, because a licensee cannot resist the grant of a license on the ground that the resulting competition may work economic injury to him, he has no standing to appeal from an order of the commission granting the application.

In the instant case, however, Justice Roberts said, the commission's findings were sufficient to comply with the requirements of the law, and the station's attack upon them could not stand.

RCA PREPARES REPLY ON TELEVISION

reprisal, should it see the matter discussed in newspapers.

Preparations were made this week at the home offices of the company, in the RCA building, Rockefeller Center, to appear on April 8th with a vigorous defense.

Officials of RCA, the RCA Manufacturing Company, and the National Broadcasting Company were in virtual all-day session, on Monday.

In reply to the commission's charges that too much advertising might result in the sale of too many sets, which would become obsolete, and produce a public reaction, observers close to RCA noted that the FCC is at present hearing the case for "Frequency Modulation" broadcasters, and that, if the pleas of these parties were recognized, and they should be successful in operation, the entire apparatus of the present radio industry would become obsolete.

Three Millions on Research

Mr. Sarnoff said he was "going to try and find out what's beyond the order," and added:

"I'd like to know who is interested in holding up television. We've spent all these millions in research, and now maybe there are some people who would like to retard television until they have time to catch up."

"We have licensed 45 manufacturers to make receivers with our patented inventions," he said. "I don't think any fellow who has spent $10,000,000 in research has an advantage. I should think the other fellow who hasn't spent the $10,000,000 has the advantage. He's reaping where he has not sown."

It was noted that the "FM" broadcasters want channels in an area of the spectrum occupied by television. Mr. Sarnoff replied that neither his company nor television had connection with "FM," and that he knew of no indication from the FCC that it would award any television channels to "FM."

Set Sales the Issue

It was apparent, this week, that the officials of the NBC-RCA were perturbed mostly by the impedance of their promotion of set sales. Mr. Sarnoff remarked that the NBC had not made such concrete plans for commercialization of its programs on September 1st that it would be too upset.

The RCA advertising campaign consisted of a full-page advertisement, with a message signed by Mr. Sarnoff, appearing on March 20th in the New York Times and the New York Herald-Tribune, and accompanied by several co-operative dealer advertisements.

Said Mr. Sarnoff's message, in part:

"It is now possible for the RCA to announce the extension of its plans to provide, first, a regular television program service in the New York area; second, the offering to the public of receiving sets at moderate prices within the reach of the average American family; and third, the initial step in the construction of a television radio relay system, as a means of interconnecting television transmitters for simultaneous service to and from other communities."

Television Not a Threat: Seldes

Television's growth will be gradual, and it will have to be very good to compete with motion picture films, as entertainment, Gilbert Seldes, dirccior of television for the Columbia Broadcasting System, told the bi-weekly meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, last Thursday, in Jack Dempsey's Eighth Avenue restaurant, New York.

LOCAL NEWSREELS TO BE TELEVISED

The Don Lee television station, W6XAO, in Los Angeles, will receive newsreels of local events from its affiliate, KFRC, San Francisco, under a deal set with Mel Venter and Al Hunter, in charge of special events and news, respectively.

Mr. Venter and Mr. Hunter will select events to be covered with a camera and rush the completed films to Los Angeles where they will be televised.

"The scareheads in Hollywood who are afraid of television as a potentially strong competitor probably recall the turmoil with the coming of sound," Mr. Seldes said. "Television will be a gradual development, and no one will be unprepared for its coming."

Opinion on FCC Divided

Executives of television broadcast and equipment companies were divided in their appraisal of the latest FCC ruling, which suspended its previous ruling that television might begin limited commercialization on September 1st.

Because it "fits into their patent situation, certain people" want to standardize at 441-lines, Allen B. DuMont, president of the Allen B. DuMont Laboratories, of Passaic, N. J., charged on Monday. Paramount Pictures is financially interested in the DuMont company, which is experimenting with 800-line transmission.

Mr. DuMont agreed with the FCC implication that the selling of many sets by RCA, with its present standards, might impede selling of sets with advanced standards, by smaller companies. Said he:

"Why spend a lot of money on something you can't use? If 100,000 of the other sets were sold, it would be difficult to sell a different sort of transmission."

He said that RCA monopolizes patents for the 441-line image, but that the patent field was open for finer screened images. The adoption of the 441-line set as a standard last year, by the Radio Manufacturers Association, was opposed by his company, Zenith, and Philco, he noted.

The DuMont company has applied to the FCC for permission to erect a New York transmitter for the telecasting of a more than 441 line image.

The Philco company has been experimenting with a 661 line receiver, and transmitter.

The 441-line sets are good enough to commercialize temporarily, at least, G. W. Henyan, sales manager of transmitters and tubes for the television department of the General Electric Company, said on Monday. He expressed surprise at the FCC action. His company, he noted, makes receivers in accordance with the RMA specifications.

"You have to start some place," he remarked. "The Model T Ford would not do today, but it seemed adequate at the time. The same thing applies to television. If we keep holding it to the laboratory, we'll never get any field experience."

Mortimer Fogel, chairman of the Dealers' Group of the Electrical and Gas Association, made public in New York on Monday a letter of protest to the FCC.

FM Seeks Band Now Allocated To Television

Conflicting aims of the sponsors of television and the advocates of Major Edwin Armstrong's frequency modulation method of radio transmission came to a head this week when FM Broadcasters, Inc., submitted a specimen plan of wave band allocation to the Federal Communications Commission as that body began its second week of hearings on the new plan.

FCC Attacks Plan

The Commission found fault with the allocation plan, particularly in the prospective service to rural listeners. The FM Broadcasters came out for "wide-swing" transmission and plotted their plans on the basis of the 40 to 50 megacycle band. This now includes some Government services, some FM and the so-called television channel No. 1.

Three classes of stations would be required for national coverage it was said. Forty high power stations on six channels could cover the eastern half of the country while several stations could cover intermediate areas of importance to the west. Separation of stations on the same channel would be not less than 400 miles and of stations on adjacent channels 150 miles or more.

Witnesses for the Radio Corporation of America this week suggested that instead of giving frequency modulation additional territory in the 41-44 megacycle band, space be made for channels above 100 megacycles, where local services could be placed while stations of wider coverage could be accommodated in the presently assigned frequencies on the lower level.

Frank W. Wozencroft, RCA counsel, protested against any allocation which would deprive television of its channel in the 40 mc. band. "Naturally," he said, "ultra-high frequency sound broadcasting will be in competition with standard band broadcasting and only the public can determine which the public will prefer and for which it is willing to pay through the purchase of new receiving sets."

The hearings were concluded Thursday with the presentation of the views of various educational and other organizations interested in specialized broadcast services.

Winding up the presentation for FM Broadcasters, Inc., Henry P. Thomas, engineer of the General Electric Company, testified that observations indicate that a one-watt frequency-modulated signal is equivalent to a 50-watt amplitude-modulated signal at the receiver.

A possible pattern for distribution of FM stations for nationwide coverage was submitted to the commission by Paul A. De Mars, technical director of the Yankee Network.

The FCC last weekend revoked its previous permission to television to adopt limited commercialization September 1st and rebuked RCA for its settling campaign. See preceding page.

Warns Radio Management

James Lawrence Fly, chairman of the Commission, defended this action in an interview given immediately before the opening of the FM hearings He described some recent radio promotional material as "rash and reckless."

RADIO CHARGES ASCAP RAISED ITS ROYALTY FEES 900% IN NINE YEARS

Broadcasters' President Claims Revised Schedules Double Current Scale; Only on Big Commercials, Retorts Buck

The long awaited radio schedules of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, to supplant the present contracts expiring at the end of this year, and expected by some broadcasting interests to bring concessions in the Society's estimated $5,000,000 annual bill to radio, jolted the National Association of Broadcasters, when the conditions were disclosed to them last Thursday, after a meeting of the Society's board of directors the night before in its New York offices. The Broadcasters, through their president, Neville Miller, charge that the new fees are a "100 per cent" increase over present schedules, and that present schedules are 900 per cent more than those paid by the broadcasting industry in 1931.

Rates to Theatres Raised in 1934

A parallel to the present situation arose in 1934-35, when the Society raised its rates to the theatre owner. In 1934, after a period in which its rate to the theatre owner was a flat 10 cents a seat, it endeavored to raise its tariffs on a graduated basis, so that the operator of a 2,000 seat house, for instance, would have had to pay an annual license charge of $1,275. Those rates prompted a campaign against the Society by theatre owners. The result was a settlement, in April, 1935, for a less onerous scale, ranging from five cents a seat for a theatre seating less than 800 to 20 cents on theatres seating 1,600 or more. These rates represented a 50 per cent increase for medium sized theatres, and a 100 per cent increase for the large houses. The rates which ASCAP originally intended would have effected increases of from 20 to 1,000 per cent.

Annual fees that typical theatres have been paying to the Society the last five years are:

Theatre, Location	Capacity	Annual Ascap Bill
Music Hall, New York	6,200	$1,240.00
Capitol, New York	5,486	1,097.20
Roxy, New York	5,886	1,177.20
Stearns, Stearns, Ky.	315	15.75
Kiowa, Kiowa, Colo.	150	7.50
Chicago, Chicago	3,861	772.20
Grauman's Chinese, Hollywood	2,028	405.60
Ambassador, Washington, D. C.	1,200	180.00
Strand, Stamford, Conn.	1,419	212.85

On Saturday, from Phoenix, Ariz., where he has been vacationing, Gene Buck, president of the Society, called Mr. Miller's charges "pure bunk."

"Certainly there will be an increase in payments, but only on the big commercial broadcasts which can well afford it," Mr. Buck said. "Fees under the proposed contract would be collected at the source, when the chains make their terms with the advertisers. Hundreds of the small stations actually will pay less."

Miller Attacks Raise

The Society is scheduled to start negotiations with the Broadcasters on April 15th. These, meanwhile, have set up their own music source, in New York, Broadcast Music, Inc., with which they hope to achieve independence from ASCAP.

The new contract, if accepted, becomes effective Jan. 1st, 1941.

Mr. Miller declared the radio broadcasting industry already was making payments "at the rate of $5,000,000 a year" and that this is "five times as great as paid by any other industry."

"It represents over two-thirds of ASCAP's total revenue, and is an increase of 900 per cent over the sum paid by the broadcasters in 1931," Mr. Miller's statement continued . . . "Although ASCAP attempts to divide the broadcasting industry by making concessions to certain groups, the total amount of the reductions which it suggests is inconsiderable, compared to the total amount involved . . . (It) requires broadcasters to pay to ASCAP a percentage of all broadcasting revenue, even that obtained for programs which do not utilize ASCAP music . . . The broadcasting industry will be unified in resisting the demands.

"ASCAP is again attempting to take advantage of its monopoly of popular music, to impose an unfair method and rate of payment upon broadcasters, but ASCAP has this time overreached itself, and has made demands which the broadcasting industry must resist as a matter of life and death . . . These demands will strengthen Broadcast Music, Inc."

Recasting Classifications

The Society's negotiations on April 15th with the Broadcasters will be not only on the terms of the contract, but also on establishment of a basis for exact classification of radio stations into the three income groups on which the new rates are based. It is expected the conferences also will establish a formula for revising a station's classification as its revenue decreases or increases.

The ASCAP board said one reason for the new schedules was the great increase in the use of music by radio, since 1931, when the present contracts were signed.

John G. Paine, general manager, added:

"A survey of radio in 1936 showed that during the first quarter 10,000 radio programs used a total of 638,302 musical compositions under the control of ASCAP. . . . The last quarter in 1939 . . . shows 16,000 programs used a total of 2,169,503 musical compositions, a phenomenal increase in the use of music on the air.

Cites Receipts from Advertisers

"In 1932, advertisers paid radio approximately $25,000,000; in 1939, advertisers paid radio approximately $171,000,000. ASCAP's fees are based upon a percentage of radio gross receipts from advertisers. If radio's revenue is decreased, ASCAP's receipts decrease in proportion.

"Radio broadcasters were given a flat deal by the society in 1931, when the radio industry was in its infancy, under which agreement the broadcasters got their music for practically nothing. In 1932, it was found that the largest users of music on the radio were paying nothing or practically nothing for their use of music. Even today, sustaining programs pay ASCAP only a nominal charge for the use of our music."

Mr. Paine, while conceding that radio paid more than any other industry to ASCAP, said that 75 per cent of all radio programs used the Society's music."

Broadcast Music, Inc., entered the dispute late last week, with a statement that it was the consensus of its board that "the unwarranted attitude of ASCAP . . . demonstrates an increasing need for" its service, and added, "We don't feel there is any ground for compromise with ASCAP."

Mr. Miller, president of the Broadcasters Association, is also head of Broadcast Music, Inc. Merrit E. Tompkins was elected vice-president of Broadcast Music last week.

Committees Convene

Last Thursday, a special ASCAP radio committee, consisting of Walter Fischer, Irving Caesar, Oscar Hammerstein II, and Herman Starr, met with the following representatives of the broadcasting interests: Lenox Lohr, president, and Niles Trammel, vice-president, of the National Broadcasting Company; Alfred J. McCosker, president of radio station WOR and chairman of Mutual Broadcasting Service; Julius Seebach, Jr., vice-president of WOR; Fred Weber, general manager of Mutual; E. M. Antrim, secretary of Station WGN, Chicago; Edward Klauber, executive vice-president of Columbia Broadcasting System, Inc.; Walter J. Damm, general manager of Station WTMJ, Milwaukee; William Weisman, of Station WMCA, New York; J. H. Ream, of the Columbia Broadcasting System; P. W. Morency, of Station WFIL; Clair McCollough, general manager of the Mason-Dixon Radio Group.

Four radio groups are represented in the new ASCAP contracts: (1) The independent small stations, with gross annual business of $50,000 or less; (2) the intermediate stations, independent and affiliated, defined as such because of greater business, certain location, type

NEBRASKA APPEALS ON ITS ASCAP LAW

Judges Gardiner, Munger and Donohoe, the trio which knocked out Nebraska's 1937 anti-ASCAP law several weeks ago, went into a huddle Monday in Lincoln, after a rehearing of the case, to consider the appeal of William J. Hotz, special attorney appointed by the Nebraska attorney general to conduct the case.

Mr. Hotz said the court had made a mistake in reading into the law intent on the part of legislators who passed it robbery of the copyright owners' rights in sale of musical compositions. He said the lawmakers were only concerned with killing out monopolistic handling of American music.

Mr. Hotz tried to explain in court session that he believed, as did the legislators, that if publishers and songwriters put on the face of each piece of sheet music the price to be charged for all uses, collectible at time of purchase, the music makers would be better paid than after the vast ASCAP machinery grinds out its overhead and pays the dividends.

ASCAP lawyers, anticipating this, brought in testimony in court to show that the cost to an individual composer or publisher, policing the country to protect himself against infringement, would be prohibitive.

TERMS OF NEW ASCAP CONTRACT of program, service to the community, and general radio policy; (3) the large station, which by affiliation, prestige, location, and territory it serves "has an opportunity to make substantial profits out of its business"; and (4) the chain "which does not operate any radio stations as such (it may own stations; it may have a controlling interest in stations), but its primary business is not the operation of a station, but the sale of advertising."

Contract Provisions

The license contains the following provisions:

1. It is limited to non-visual broadcasting (television excluded).

2. Network programs must be cleared at the source.

3. Radio stations are divided into three groups paying license fees of 3, 4, and 5 per cent, respectively.

4. The percentages paid by licensees are computed upon the gross amount paid by the advertiser for use of the station's broadcasting facilities, with only the following deductions permitted:

(a) Fifteen per cent advertising agency discount, if actually paid;

(b) Amounts received from political broadcasts; amounts received from religious broadcasts where the amount paid is solely in reimbursement for the cost of lines, wire charges, and other similar charges;

(c) Certain costs of artists especially employed for a particular program and certain costs for news programs, athletic events and similar events, provided that the minimum sum allocated to percentage must not be less than the highest rate charged for a similar period of time over licensee's station;

(d) Amounts received from network for rebroadcasting programs which have been cleared at the source.

5. The sustaining fee of stations in the 3 per cent group is made nominal ($12 per year).

The sustaining fees to the stations in the 4 per cent class will be approximately 25 per cent less than presently charged. The sustaining fees to be charged to the 5 per cent stations are to be approximately the same as presently charged.

Stations in the 4 per cent and 5 per cent groups may recoup the payment of the sustaining fee after the license fee paid reaches a certain amount.

Contract for Networks

6. There is a separate contract for networks in which the network broadcaster agrees to clear all programs at the source and to pay 7½ per cent of the amount received by it from advertisers. The license will permit the deductions from the gross which are enjoyed by the individual stations and will contain the protective clauses for the Society that are required by the Society from the individual station. This rate may be reduced to 5 per cent in the case of such network operations as are made necessary because of local conditions.

7. The license to individual stations does not give them the right to rebroadcast programs containing ASCAP compositions which have not been cleared at the source. If such programs are broadcast, however, a sum equal to 10 per cent of the station's highest card rate for such a program is to be paid to ASCAP in lieu of treating the broadcast as an infringement of copyright.

8. If a licensee having a "single station contract" engages in network broadcasting, such licensee and the Society will agree to enter into the chain broadcast license agreement.

9. The Society has the right to restrict not more than 1,000 compositions at any one time. Licensee has the right to cancel if on 60 days' notice the number of compositions on the restricted list exceeds 1,000 and is not reduced to 1,000 or less during the 60-day period.

Other terms of the contract provide that, if a state passes anti-ASCAP laws impeding or preventing adherence to contract terms, in the Society's opinion, it may end its agreement with the station or stations in that state; that ASCAP gives licensees the same indemnity as in previous contracts; and that the contract's duration is to depend on the final agreement, and the wishes of the broadcasters.

The Broadcasters Association meets, in annual convention, on August 5th, in San Francisco.

Broadcast Commitments April 1st

ASCAP's submission of new terms to the broadcasters had not been scheduled so soon; it its understood, however, that its decision to introduce its contract terms now, for consideration, was impelled by fact that the commitments of station members of Broadcast Music, Inc., are due on April 1st.

Vice-President Tompkins denied, in a New York newspaper interview two weeks ago, that his organization represented a "war" on ASCAP. His organization, he said, was concerned only to "develop a new source of supply for radio—the thousands of undeveloped young composers not eligible for ASCAP membership."

"Radio can't get their material," he charged, and added: "Say, not all the world's genius is in ASCAP."

Gene Buck, in the same newspaper issue, replied that "for 15 years broadcasters have resorted to every known legal device to confiscate for their free use, the music of composers and authors all over the world," and added, "Now they've created BMI, to intimidate and terrorize us."

Film Company Organized

The Academic Film Company has been organized for the production and distribution of a series of two-reel subjects based upon important events in American history. The first subject ready for release is titled "Our Constitution" and portrays the causes and events leading up to the adoption of the Constitution.

The new company is located in New York headed by Milton J. Salzburg and Harold Baumstone. The production of the films is under the supervision of Max Alexander in Hollywood.

Censor Ban Fought

J. H. Hoffberg, president of Hoffberg Productions, Inc., has left for Chicago to fight the censor ban on Gabriel Pascal's production, "The Living Dead." The picture was banned by Lieutenant Harry Costello of the Chicago Censor Board as being too morbid.

Order Booking Licenses

On complaint of the department of labor and industrial inspection of Missouri, 35 Kansas City dancing schools and booking agencies have been ordered to obtain $50 booking licenses by Enos A. Axtell, assistant county prosecutor. The order is expected to affect radio station artists' bureaus.

War Effect Noted On Swiss Industry

War developments in Europe have lowered Switzerland's theatre receipts and product standards, according to a report to the Motion Picture Division of the Department of Commerce from the American consulate at Zurich. The mobilization of large numbers of men was reflected, especially in small towns and in rural districts, in lower box office returns. Only the large cinemas in the large cities were able to operate at a profit.

The Distributors' Association considered it necessary to request its member companies to alter their contracts for expensive films with especially hard-hit theatres and to arrange to supply them with less expensive films until an improvement in the situation makes it possible for such cinemas to show the more costly productions without financial loss.

Expect More U. S. Imports

In the first weeks of the war distributors had difficulty in obtaining a steady supply of films from the United States, as shipments were frequently held up by the British contraband control. It is understood that, while this difficulty still exists, less time is being lost in connection with the required formalities, the report disclosed.

"Germany was the only producing country," the report read, "which was in a position to supply films without interruption despite the war. However, for political reasons, many German films are regarded as unsuitable for exhibition in this country. It is generally expected that imports from the United States will increase."

The total length of imported films was greater in the fourth quarter of 1939 than in the preceding three month period, according to the report. American imports declined from 47.76 to 33.25 per cent, whereas that of other leading countries showed slight gains. France advanced from 17.18 to 22.98 per cent and Germany from 24.94 to 27.62 per cent. Italy advanced from 3.76 to 11 per cent. In the fourth quarter 156 features were imported or six more than in the preceding three month period. Sixty-six were from the United States.

Contingent Regulations

The comparatively new regulations governing import contingents provided specifically that distributors must apply for contingents for a calendar year not later than October 31st. Owing to the war, the Association of Film Distributors has arranged with the Film Changer to extend this date.

Several companies which are members of the Swiss Association of Film Producers have recently organized the Filmliga, a cooperative organization, the purpose of which is to further, with government assistance, exports of Swiss cultural films and short subjects. The organization plans: The establishment of a credit organization to facilitate the financing of production; central distributing organization for exports; mutual exchange of technical experience with a view to improving the quality of domestic films; negotiations with the authorities in an endeavor to overcome difficulties in connection with payments in certain export markets.

SUPREME COURT LIMITS CLAIMS IN COPYRIGHT INFRINGEMENTS

Affirms Decision of Appeals Court Awarding $117,500 in Sheldon-Barnes Suit for Infringement in "Letty Lynton"

Adopting the position that while complainants of copyright infringement are entitled to full compensation they are not entitled to profit from what may be added thereto in the infringing work, the United States supreme court in Washington on Monday affirmed a decision of the Second Circuit court of appeals awarding to Edward Sheldon and Margaret Ayer Barnes approximately $117,500 for infringement of their play, "Dishonored Lady," by MGM in that company's film production of "Letty Lynton."

Sought Damages and Profit

The "Letty Lynton" case was one of the most bitterly contested court battles ever to engage the motion picture industry in plagiarism argument, because, for the first time in the memory of copyright authorities, the plaintiffs not only sought damages from the producer and distributor of a picture but also profits accruing to exhibitors. They also filed actions against exhibitor customers of Metro.

The "Letty Lynton" case was the climax of 52 different plagiarism cases filed against producers in the two years ending in mid-1938, damages demanded running as high as $2,000,000 in a single case, brought by Delores Lacy Collins against Loew's on charge of plagiarizing "Test Pilot." At that time, the courts had awarded judgments in but two actions of the 52, one for $12,000, another for $10,000. Twenty-eight cases were listed as still pending, 11 others had been dismissed in the two-year period, eight were settled out of court and three were discontinued.

New Construction: Hughes

Through what Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes held to be a new construction of the law against infringement of copyrights, the supreme court Monday granted to Sheldon and Barnes 20 per cent cent of the $587,605 profits made by Metro-Goldwyn from the "Letty Lynton" motion picture.

The question was whether the award could be apportioned so as to give the copyright owners (Sheldon-Barnes) "only that part of the profits found to be attributed to the use of the copyrighted material as distinguished from what the infringer (Metro-Goldwyn) himself has supplied." Except that Justice McReynolds did not participate, the court unanimously upheld a circuit court decision as an equitable procedure.

Calls Court Sufficiently Generous

Disposing finally of the long-drawn-out litigation, Chief Justice Hughes, delivering the opinion of the Court, held that the circuit court had been sufficiently generous in awarding to the playwrights one-fifth of the net profits of $587,605. The district court, while commenting upon the excessiveness of the award, felt bound by precedents to grant the plaintiffs all of the profits, but was reversed upon appeal.

Monday's opinion made it clear that the supreme court agreed with the lower courts to the film company's contention that the material taken by infringement contributed in but small measure to the production and success of the picture, much of which was due to the popular actors, the scenery and the expert producers and directors used.

The court refused to agree to the playwrights' contention that no apportionment of profits can be had, where it is clear that all the profits are not due to the use of the copyrighted material, and the evidence is sufficient to provide a fair basis of division so as to give to the copyright proprietor all the profits that can be deemed to have resulted from the use of what belonged to him.

"Petitioners stress the point that respondents have been found guilty of deliberate plagiarism, but we perceive no ground for saying that in awarding profits to the copyright proprietor as a means of compensation, the court may make an award of profits which have been shown not be due to the infringement," the chief justice observed. "That would be not to do equity but to inflict an unauthorized penalty.

"Both courts below have held in this case that but a small part of the profits were due to the infringement, and, accepting that fact and the principle that an apportionment may be had if the evidence justifies it, we pass to the consideration of the basis of the actual apportionment which has been allowed."

20% Due to Play

Here, the Court said, there had been negotiations for the purchase of "Dishonored Lady" motion picture rights at a price of $30,000, but the lower courts had rejected that price as a criterion, as a bargain had not been concluded and the inferences were too doubtful. Also in favor of the playwrights, the Court did not consider the effect of the standing and reputation of the company in the industry and permitted it to be credited only with such factors as were bought and paid for—actors, scenery, producers, directors and general overhead.

Pointing out that the talent and popularity of stars is an important factor in the profit-making ability of a picture, that scenery and expert production and direction also were important, the Court referred to expert testimony given during the trial attributing to the use of the play but 5 to 12 per cent of the profits.

"But the Court below," this week's opinion commented, "was not willing to accept the experts' testimony 'at its face value.' The Court felt that it must make an award 'which by no possibility shall be too small.' Desiring to give petitioners the benefit of every doubt, the court allowed for the contribution of the play 20 per cent of the net profits."

The Court this week refused to consider the deductions allowed the company for costs, declaring that the questions of fact involved therein had been determined upon the evidence. The playwrights had contested a deduction of $922,141 which they claimed was a percentage of annual net profits of a Loew holding company paid to three individuals who contracted to produce films for the company.

The circuit court, Mr. Hughes noted, found that Metro-Goldwyn "worked over old material" in producing "Letty Lynton," and used as the general theme: "A wanton girl kills her lover to free herself for a better match; she is brought to trial for the murder and escapes." But, "not content with the mere use of that basic plot," added Mr. Hughes, the movie producers "resorted to" the copyrighted play.

Based on 1857 Trial

"Dishonored Lady" was based on the Scottish trial in 1857 of Madelaine Smith for the murder of her lover. An account of the case was published in "Notable British Trials" in 1927. The Sheldon-Barnes play was copyrighted in 1930. Metro-Goldwyn took the title of "Letty Lynton" from a novel of that name by Mrs. Belloc Lowndes, published in 1930, and so based on the story of Madelaine Smith.

For a time Metro-Goldwyn negotiated to buy the motion picture rights to "Dishonored Lady" and a price of $30,000 was fixed, but the deal fell through. Mr. Sheldon and Miss Barnes then sued for an injunction and an accounting of profits. They lost in the district court, but the Second Circuit court of appeals enjoined the infringement and directed an accounting.

In the next step, the district court awarded all the $587,604 profits to Mr. Sheldon and Miss Barnes, but the appellate court disagreed, saying one-fifth was enough.

NAZI PICTURES FOR SLOVAKIA

More than half the motion picture films exhibited in Slovakia theatres henceforth will be of German production, according to an agreement just concluded between the German and Slovak authorities, a dispatch to the New York Times said this week.

Under a law recently passed by the Slovak Parliament a distributing organization was created which will enjoy a monopoly regarding motion picture imports into Slovakia and will insure the purchase of a proportionate number of German films. Fifty-one per cent of its stock is owned by the Slovak Government, 40 per cent by Slovak banks and the remainder by German interests, the dispatch said.

Slovakia, according to Assistant United States Trade Commissioner Paul H. Pearson of Berlin, has been paying about $500,000 a year to foreign countries for film rentals.

National Decency Legion Classifies Seven Films

Of seven pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week, three were approved, three were listed unobjectionable for adults and one was condemned. The films and their classification follow:

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "It's a Date," "Oh Johnny, How You Can Love," "Viva Cisco Kid." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Free, Blonde and Twenty-one," "Men Without Souls," "The Outsider." Class C, Condemned: "Strange Cargo."

Shapiro Returns West

Victor M. Shapiro, who was in New York last week to attend funeral services for his sister, has returned to the coast to resume his publicity campaign for Ellis E. Patterson, lieutenant governor of California, who plans to run for senator.

AUSTRALIA EXPECTS REGULAR FLOW OF U.S. PRODUCT DESPITE WAR LAWS

Fear of Restricted Imports Allayed, Though Films Now Are in Semi-Luxury Class and Face Heavier Tax

by LIN ENDEAN
in Sydney

Original fears by the trade of a heavy restriction of imports of films from America have been allayed. Well-informed quarters say that while the war's effect may bring heavier taxation upon the industry, generally, there is no likelihood that the regular flow of product from the U. S. A. will be interrupted. In the licensing of imports from overseas, motion pictures have been, apparently without thought, placed in a semi-luxury category, next in line to the totally-prohibited luxury lines.

At most, it now seems, partial restriction is the only probable action by the Government if future conditions force a change. The Federal Government has been impressed by the emphasis of the industry's representatives on the national importance of the motion picture trade, realizing that drastic action would endanger not only the livelihood of 25,000 Australians employed directly in exhibition and distribution, and affect investments totalling nearly 40 million pounds ($150,000,000), but that a nation's people would be denied the entertainment relaxation that has the support of every section.

Radio Not a Factor

While most Australian homes have radios, it takes the broadcast of an event of rare interest to let theatre managements know that radio is in competition with them. Indicative, incidentally, of the strength of motion pictures against the networks is the fact that commercial buyers go for Sunday night time, or alternatively on week nights between 6-30 and 8, the Lux folk running their expensive hour's show on Sunday night only. Thus it is agreed that the screen has no challenge to its superiority in providing that relaxation, enjoyment and education that is now more necessary than ever in maintaining a healthy morale in a nation tangled in the grim maze of war.

Furthermore, as neither English-made nor local productions could hope to maintain sufficient supplies to meet the demand of our 1,700 odd theatres, the American product's freedom of entry is essential.

That is one side of the story, from our economic viewpoint. The other focuses on the position of the agents for the U. S. producer-distributors operating here. The Federal Government is putting on pressure with the object of conserving the financial position, seeking to limit the dispatch to New York to such a low percentage of the actual earnings, leaving the balance in this country for investment in war loans, industrial development and other sources, that distributors are worried plenty. New York has been asked for guidance, but at this writing the question is a real problem for local executives. It is believed that the Government's idea is to emulate that of England and concentrate on limitation of amounts to 50 per cent, based on the previous year's transfer on dollar purchases.

If that came about, it looks as if New York would receive approximately £10 of every £100 earned by the films in Australia, taking into account exchange depreciation and other levies not in the scene of yesteryear. It is not conceivable that sound trading could continue on such a basis, and someone's big job will be to point out this logic to the powers.

It is interesting to contrast the present exchange rate, with the dollar value 3.18 currently to the Australian pound, to that of normal conditions at $4.86 to the Australian pound. That shows the heavily depreciated value of 35 per cent in every Australian pound that is received in New York. England's pound has not such a high depreciation ($3.71 as of last Saturday).

Directly, the distributors also are weighted with a primage of ten per cent, sales tax of six per cent, a recently introduced one-penny per foot tax on local positives, and eight-pence per foot on the imported duping prints. All of this provides a sizeable annual revenue to the Government, is a point that may balance in the distributors' favor in bidding against peremptory legislation fashioned on the lines of English trading.

"We want to do our utmost to bear our share of the responsibility and sacrifice that all industry and individuals must make," is the substance of the distributors' comment, "but motion pictures are in a class that necessitates the most expert analysis and consideration before anything is decided that may cause havoc in the trade's routine." In the meantime everyone is marking time—awaiting New York's reaction.

Sound Equipment on Troopships

Australian and New Zealand troopships which recently went overseas were equipped for talking pictures. The local distributors of American product came through with gifts of films for screenings. Pictures for showing in local military camps also are being provided free. These gestures have won favorable comment, as have many other practical efforts and gifts in the interest of patriotic movements. The New South Wales trade is prominently identified with the Sydney Lord Mayor's Patriotic Fund, the manpower of theatres and exchanges being at the call of the Lord Mayor (Stanley S. Crick, for many years managing director of Fox in this territory) and being praised for their showmanship contribution towards the success of many big money-raising projects.

"General Knowledge Jack-Pots," a money distribution device created in the radio field, and booming, has spread to film houses. The idea is worked from the stage, with a "spot" picking out different members of the audience who are asked simple questions, the answering of which correctly entitles them to a fee of a named amount as a payment for mental skill. Giveaways and bank nights of the accepted order have been stamped out in Australia on complaint of being gambling, but, legally, Jack-Pots are acknowledged as a test of skill—and it's open go, with the lure of bigger and bigger amounts seeing competing managements bidding for the crowds that clamor at the box-office in the hope of a night's entertainment (double feature bill) plus a wad of easy money.

The project is scoring in city and suburban towns, going biggest with name-announcers taking time away from the "mike" to make personal appearances on the theatre's stage.

Protesting Sales Plan

Anticipating "Gone With the Wind," "Pinocchio" and "Gulliver's Travels" as a trio of attractions upon which the respective distributors will ask hiring terms at 50 per cent and over, one of the main items on the agenda of the Australasian Exhibitors Conference in New Zealand is the question of effectively resisting business dealing on such a basis. It is claimed by the independent exhibitors' organization that the boycott of "Snow White" last year was effective in Australia, though the film obtained wide release through circuit theatres and played to terrific business, and similar tactics are to be advocated by the more militant sections in the case of the pictures named.

The exhibitors' conference is a grouping of representative showmen's organizations, with their individual delegates empowered to make decisions that will embrace the operation of independent exhibitors throughout both Australia and New Zealand. The results of their deliberations are expected to have far-reaching effects in connection with several aspects of the trade's routine. Besides the percentage matter, an effort also will be made to induce legislation in the form of a film hire formula claiming "film importers are inclined to grossly exaggerate the barter system of film trading to suit their own ends."

Features of abbreviated running time are down for discussion, from the angle that they are a source of unsatisfactory program arrangement for theatres, that they occasion loss to the exhibitor and open the way for a menace of a three-feature bill. Charges of overloading of floater groups by distributors, and the framing of a formula to strike uniformity in the designation for the various groups of pictures and the actual proportions of each, are also to be tackled, together with a variety of other questions which the associations figure they can more vigorously approach as a national group rather than as individual units.

CALLS U. S. CENTER OF MUSIC CULTURE

America is now the center of music culture, Dorin K. Antrim writes in the March edition of International Musician, organ of the American Federation of Musicians. In 1885, he said, "this country boasted just three major symphony orchestras and only one-tenth of one per cent of the population had heard them. . . . Before the World War 17 symphony orchestras existed in the United States, including 10 of first rank. Now, according to the National Orchestra Survey, there are 270, with an increase of 130 from 1930 to 1938. Eighteen new orchestras were founded in 1932 alone. Of this total 17 are now classed as Grade A, but all are of symphonic size and play the symphony repertoire."

Set "Lothario" Showing

Leonard Goldstein has leased the Warner theatre, New York, and will reopen the house April 14th for a premiere performance and subsequent two-a-day showings of "The Great Lothario." The film is a revised version of "The Medicine Man," produced by Phil Goldstein for Tiffany Pictures in 1930. Astor Pictures will distribute the film nationally.

FILM BUSINESS SPURTS IN HUNGARY UNDER DRASTIC NEUTRALITY LAWS

Forced Halving of Imports to Keep Currency Limits Product from America to 55 Features from July, 1939, to July, 1940

by ENDRE HEVESI
in Budapest

The European War has forced the Hungarian motion picture trade to face a number of problems. Foremost among these is the government's foreign currency policy, on which the country's imports are largely dependent. For years distributors of imported pictures were kept uncertain whether the National Bank would grant them the necessary foreign currency for their next group of imports. Thanks to the government's careful hoarding of foreign credits and the country's satisfactory foreign trade balance, an agreement was reached last spring according to which the National Bank would release 32,000 pounds sterling ($128,000) for one year's film imports from the United States.

Imports Cut 50 Per Cent

Then the war broke out at Hungary's very door, and although Hungary remained neutral, strict war measures were enforced in economic life as well as in every other field. With all available foreign currencies needed for the purchase of raw materials of prime importance, the government again assumed complete control and introduced a far-going restriction of motion picture imports. After much discussion, imports for the 1939-40 year were reduced to 50 per cent of those of the preceding year.

Practically, this means importation of about 55 American features to Hungary between July 1939 and July 1940, with the National Bank releasing 70,000 for these films. This figure includes measures already arrived and censored in Hungary since July. Of French pictures, whose popularity still is steadily increasing, 26 or 27 are to be imported in the same period, whereas the number of British features will be reduced to three. As for German imports, the figure is still subject to discussion. A motion picture agreement to be signed by the two countries comes before parliament shortly. The number of German imports will depend upon the number of Hungarian features or German pictures made or dubbed in Hungary which Germany agrees to take over.

Negotiations with Italy Off

Negotiations to launch Hungarian-Italian film exchange brought no results. Hungarian producers hoped to find a good market in Italy where there is a distinct shortage of product. The license fee for each Hungarian picture in Italy would have amounted to between 70,000 and 100,000 pengoes ($14,000 to $20,000), a large sum, considering the fact that total expense of making a complete Hungarian feature film amounts to no more than 120,000 pengoes. However, the Italian plan was not to pay this in cash but in films imported from Italy. Since no Italian picture so far has proved a success in Hungary, no distributing company seemed minded to risk such a deal, and negotiations were broken off.

As for Hungarian production, after passing in the spring and summer through the worst crisis that this comparatively young industry has experienced so far, it is now in a distinct boom. Studios are working full time and there is a distinct improvement in quality as in quantity of home-made product. The reasons for this unexpected development are interesting.

Complete stagnation in the first half of the year set in when the bill known as "the Second Jew Law" came before parliament. The first such law, passed in May, 1938, stipulated that persons of Jewish race employed in all intellectual professions, office jobs, "white-collar employment," should not exceed 20 per cent of all persons employed, and should not get more than 20 per cent of all salaries paid. All persons employed in production, distribution and exhibition of motion pictures were to be members of various departments of the newly established Stage and Film Chamber, no more than 20 per cent of the members of whom were to be of the Jewish race.

Second Law Even More Rigorous

The Chamber was duly formed and enrollment of members began, but before there had been time for the law to take effect, a second and far more rigorous law was passed. According to this, participation of Jews was restricted to 12 per cent in all intellectual professions and office jobs. Incomes of all Jews employed must not exceed 12 per cent of the sum total of incomes. Additional restrictions have been introduced for those in the film and theatre business. In no motion picture undertaking can Jews act in any executive or managerial capacity at all. That is to say, Jews cannot be producers, production managers, artistic administrators, title-makers, managers of distributing companies, managers or booking representatives of motion picture theatres, and within a given short time, Jews must give up ownership or part ownership in licenses of motion picture theatres.

The determination of who is to be regarded as a Jew and who is not is partly racial and partly religious. Persons converted to the Christian faith before Aug. 1, 1919, who can prove that their parents and grandparents on both sides were born and have permanently resided in Hungary since 1848, are regarded as Christians, as also are persons converted before the date of publication of the law, and married to Christians. Certain other exemptions are made, as for World War veterans, but even persons benefiting by such exemptions are not admitted to executive positions in the motion picture trade.

Needless to say, the execution of this law brought about fundamental changes in trade and production alike. Producers and directors were almost exclusively of Jewish extraction; the business end of the trade was also primarily in Jewish hands. Branch offices of American companies distributing their own product were also compelled to comply with the stipulation of the law. This involved changes in the management of Twentieth Century-Fox, MGM and Warner local branches. No changes were required at the Paramount and Universal offices.

War Speeds Production

The law was expected to have a disastrous effect on business conditions in general and this uncertainty tended to cause capital to retire from picture production entirely for a time. Attempts to induce government intervention to finance films were nipped. Both studios were dark during the spring and early summer months, which usually mark the height of the year's production. It was only in August that a few producers started work and then, after the first anxious days at the outbreak of the war, as soon as Hungary's neutrality appeared assured, there came a sudden turn that set local production on its feet again. With imports reduced to half the figure of previous years, it was obvious there would be a great demand for home product. Capital ventured out overnight, and production began at top speed. It looks as if, in spite of the stagnation during the first half of 1939, production figures for 1939-40 will reach those of the past season.

There is no shortage of raw material. Kodak, Agfa and Ferrania, an Italian company, all continue to import the necessary raw film into Hungary, and the price has remained the same.

Strict Neutrality Required

Not even in the critical days of the outbreak of the war did the public's interest in pictures decrease. Audiences have not decreased. During the first war weeks many persons were drawn to theatres by their interest in the newsreels. These have been somewhat disappointed by the attitude of strict neutrality which the government maintains in this as in every other field. Expressions of approval or disapproval at the showings of newsreels are strictly forbidden by the police. The official Hungarian newsreel, compulsorily shown in every theatre, scrupulously keeps the balance between the belligerent nations, and particularly refrains from displaying war horrors or atrocities. For every German picture shown there is an Allied picture, and vice versa. Fox newsreels, usually shown here, used to come to Hungary from Berlin, but now come from the Paris Fox center. To make up for the plus in Allied pictures which reach Budapest by this means, Ufa newsreels, not shown here previously, are sent from Berlin every week but these are shown only in Ufa's own theatre, the Urania.

PROPOSED TRADE AGREEMENT OFF

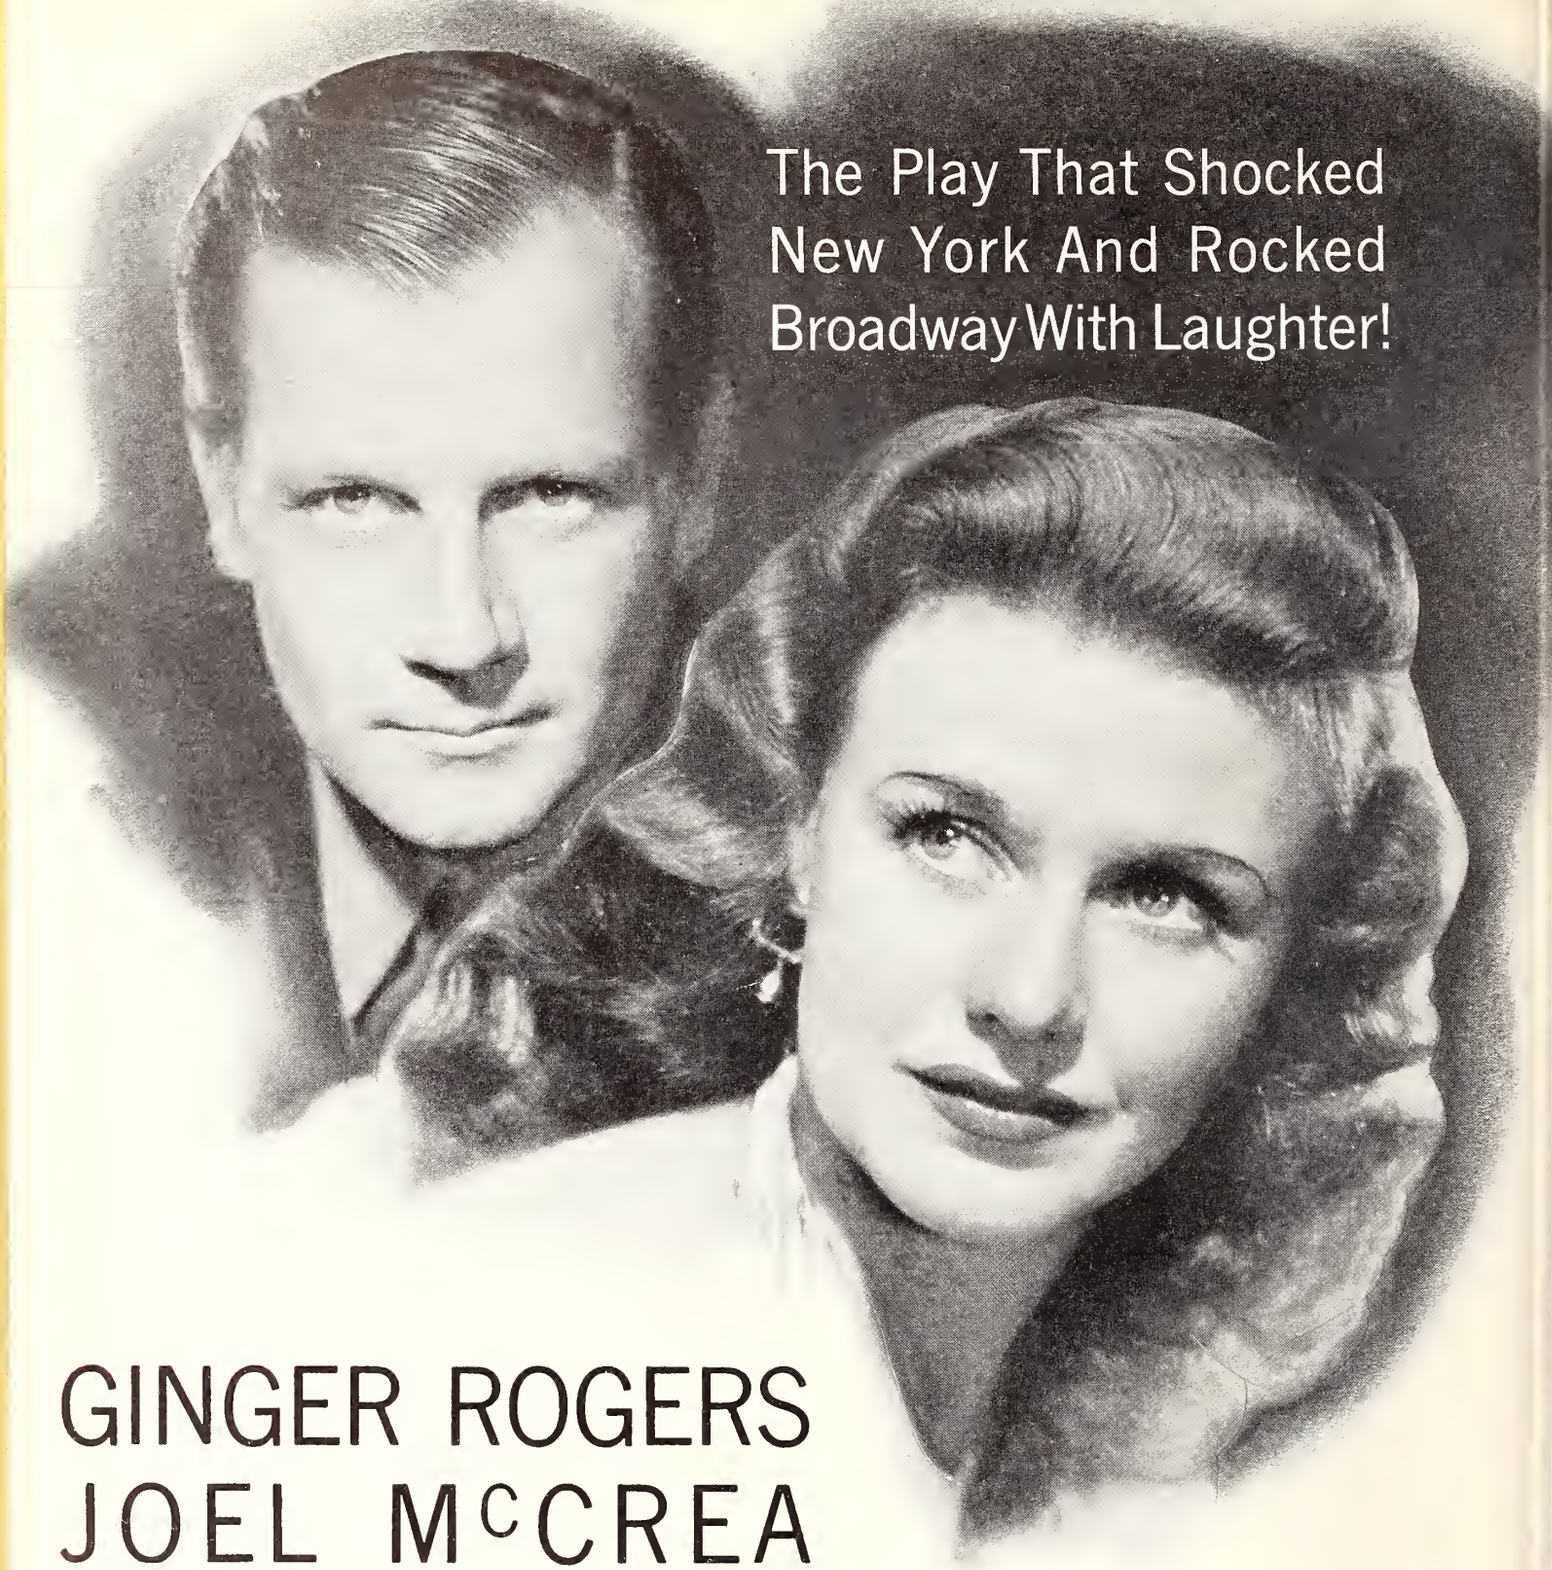
The Department of State announced in Washington recently that negotiations with Argentina for a trade treaty had broken down. The reason for the collapse of the negotiations was not given.

Honor Murtha

Several hundred persons, at a testimonial banquet, Tuesday night, at the St. George Hotel, Brooklyn, New York City, honored Tom Murtha, president of the Local 4, Brooklyn IATSE, and president of the Central Trades and Labor Council of Greater New York.

Convention Coverage

Anthony Muto, Washington, D. C., manager of Fox Movietone Newsreel, was to confer Wednesday with the Democratic convention executives regarding newsreel coverage of the convention to be held in Chicago July 15.



Farrell in Political Race

Robert S. Farrell, Jr., Portland, Ore., theatre executive, is running for state representative on the Republican ticket.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

Terpsichore

The latest of Hollywood's enterprises pertaining to the amusement scene is to be "the world's most attractive and spacious ballroom."

Launched under the corporate name of Southern California Enterprises, the project has as its managing director Maurice M. Cohen, film producer. Its board of directors, in addition to Mr. Cohen, includes Edward Small, head of the production company bearing his name, which releases through United Artists; B. B. Kahane, vice-president of Columbia Pictures; M. C. Levee, talent agency head; Arthur Gottlieb, president of the Du-Art Film Laboratories; George Seid, superintendent of Columbia's film laboratory; Harry Einstein, known also as "Parkyarkarkus"; Peter Mole, president of Mole-Richardson, and J. P. Normanly, Universal vice-president.

Providing for approximately 50,000 square feet of floor space for modern followers of the dance, the backers of the projected ballroom estimate that the floor will accommodate more than 3,000 couples.

The site of the building is to be a five-acre tract, it is reported, the tract between the buildings of the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System on Hollywood's Sunset Boulevard, and across the street from the Earl Carroll restaurant. The place is also adjacent to the American Legion Stadium.

The cost of the projected ballroom, including land, building and equipment, is said to be in excess of a million dollars, about the same as for making one slightly better-than-average motion picture today.

11 Films Finished

Hollywood's studios completed 11 pictures this week, more than in any one week since the end of last December. Seven were started, two less than in the week before; 31 shooting, as against last week's 35; 19 being prepared, three less than last week, and 63 being edited, compared to the 64 of the previous period.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Twentieth Century-Fox and Monogram each wound up work on two films, respectively "Two Girls on Broadway" and "Andy Hardy Meets a Debutant"; "Lillian Russell" and the third of the "Cisco Kid" series, and "Tom Boy" and "Pals of the Purple Sage." Columbia completed "Dead Man's Isle"; Republic, "Covered Wagon Days"; Hal Roach, for United Artists release, "Turnabout"; Universal, "I Can't Give You Anything but Love, Baby," and Warner Brothers, "Flight Eight."

Republic put two pictures in work, "The Crooked Road" and "Gaucho Serenade," while Monogram started "Cowboy from Sundown," Paramount, "I Want a Divorce"; RKO Radio, "The Villain Still Pursued Her"; Walter Wanger, for UA release, "Personal History," and Warners, "The Life of Knute Rockne."

Six pictures were shooting at MGM: "Waterloo Bridge," "Pride and Prejudice," "The Mortal Storm," "Twenty Mule Team," "Susan and God" and "Boom Town." Before the cameras at Columbia were "The Lone Wolf Meets a Lady" and the third of the Elliott westerns; at Paramount, "The Ghost Breakers," "North West Mounted Police" and the Henry Aldrich subject; RKO, "Tom Brown's School Days" and "Anne of Windy Poplars"; Republic, "Women in War"; Edward Small, for UA, "South of Pago Pago"; Twentieth Century-Fox, "Maryland," "Million Dollar Diamond" and "The Young People"; Universal, "If I Had My Way" and "Ski Patrol," and Warners, "The Sea Hawk," "All This and Heaven, Too," "Torrid Zone," as well as "Brother Orchid."

While no short subjects were completed, work was begun on three, with the same number shooting, eight being prepared and 10 editing.

TELEVISED EASTER

Hollywood's first view of the new Thomas S. Lee portable television equipment developed by RCA was had Easter Sunday morning, when the thousands assembled in the Hollywood Bowl saw the annual performance given there televised.

The early services, from five to six in the morning, featured Kenny Baker singing "Ave Maria" and Tyrone Power reciting "Salutation of the Dawn." Lighted by the usual arc and spotlights, the performance was short-waved to the W6XAO base transmitter in Los Angeles, thence relayed to home transmitters for the benefit of those awake at the time.

Both telephoto and wide angle lenses picked up the images.

Exploitation

Eastern and western exploitation divisions have been set up by Paramount for special work on "Dr. Cyclops" engagements throughout the country. Alec Moss, home office exploitation manager, is directing the eastern division and is assisted by A. Maxwell Joice, Pittsburgh; Bud Getschall, Atlanta; Thomas Jefferson, New York, and others to be selected.

Cliff Lewis, studio publicity head, is directing the western division. On his staff are Ben Hill, Dallas; Carl Kreuger, Chicago; William Lansburg, Kansas City, and Leon Benson.

Appointed

W. E. Willems Van Beveren, formerly an executive of the American Tobis Corporation, and later associated with John E. Otterson, former Paramount president, in Tri-National Films, has been appointed assistant to Benjamin F. Miggins, European manager of 20th Century-Fox, with headquarters in Paris. Mr. Miggins and Mr. Van Beveren will sail for Europe Saturday on the Conte di Savoia to initiate the new arrangement.

Robert A. Kreier remains assistant European manager in the Paris office.

Frank Butler completed his screen play of "Rangers of Fortune" for Paramount.

Robert Dillon, Warner Brothers' New Zealand sales manager, has left the studio for a trip to New York.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Fifty-six of the world's most ardent theatregoers may be seen nightly—and at every matinee—at the Theatre du Palais Royal, in Paris. They never miss a performance, lining the rail of the third balcony in a solid semicircle, smiling, chuckling, roaring and applauding—but all silently.

There, in effigy, sit Mistinguette, Josephine Baker, Elvire Popesco, Maurice Chevalier, Paul Reynaud, new French war premier; Neville Chamberlain, and, on both sides, hemming in these personalities, grinning French Poilus, Colonial troops, a Royal Air Force pilot, a Tommy and a Scots Highlander.

The management of the Palais Royal hit on the idea as a means of filling the empty gallery, closed in all Paris theatres to permit a speedy evacuation in the event of air raids. A. M. Galland was commissioned to fashion an audience of plywood and paint, and these gallery-gods are the result.

Chamberlain appears distracted, frowning into space, his head turned to one side. Through an apparent oversight a number of French soldiers watch every performance bundled in heavy overcoats, while others are in short trench coats. One dusky African trooper wears a bright red chechia. A couple of marines register exteme delight.

In boxes at both sides of the house are figures, one box containing four very dignified officers in uniform, two of whom resemble somewhat Generals Gamelin and Gort.

The management of Paramount Pictures got a terrible fright the other day when they read a New York Evening Sun newspaper headline reporting: "HOPALONG CASSIDY FACES SUDDEN DEATH." Paramount, of course, does quite some business with its Harry Sherman motion pictures about Hopalong Cassidy, but on further investigation of the Sun yarn, they discovered that the paper was referring to one Hopalong Cassidy, a split-tongue crow down at Pinehurst, N. C., who turns out to be a loquacious bird, though his garrulity runs mostly to the word "whoa." Perched above the road, he shouts it imperiously at every horse or mule team he sees. Sometimes he even flies along above a mule, indulging in a contest with the exasperated driver, meeting every "gid-dap" with a mule-stopping "whoa!"

In show business, when a theatre or night club closes it's usually the custom to hang out a sign, "Closed for Repairs," whether it's the reason or not. Figuring nobody believes it any more, J. Clair Lansing, when he closed King's Ballroom, at Lincoln, Neb., the other week for repairs, took a new tack.

He ran an ad which announced: "King's Ballroom is closing to observe Lent."

George Putnam, announcer on the CBS "Short, Short Stories" series, was visiting in Minneapolis with his father. They had suits of the same material made to order. After wearing them a week, they sent the suits to the same cleaner. When the suits were returned, the father found that his trousers were too long. He was puzzled, for they had fit perfectly, but he took them back to the tailor and had them trimmed. George discovered his trousers were too short. A little detective work divulged that the cleaner had switched the trousers. Mr. Putnam, Sr., now has a two-trouser suit. George has only a coat and vest.

Tom Waller, Manhattan press agent for Paramount, faced with the need to publicize the presence of cinemactress Dorothy Lamour, looked out his windows in Times Square's tall Paramount building and studied the swarms of wild ducks which swooped across the ice-choked Hudson river. That started it. Dorothy must be photographed feeding the ducks which might otherwise starve because of the ice on the waters around New York.

Waller, surrounded by cynical photographers and a couple of reporters, equipped with 450 pounds of chopped grain, five huge limousines with uniformed chauffeurs for transportation to the Battery, and Dorothy Lamour, took himself and party aboard a Harbor Patrol boat to go in search of starving ducks.

It was a bitterly cold day. Miss Lamour and the photographers huddled in the after cabin, or made daring dashes along the ice-coated deck to the galley for black coffee. The boat chugged up and down the bay from the Battery to the mouth of the Raritan, over to Jersey, and back to Shore Road, Brooklyn, while the icy spray coated and froze on the portholes. But nary a chunk of ice was to be found with a "starving" duck. That would have disgusted any press agent to the point of abandoning the stunt. But not Dauntless Tom. He waited just long enough to see signs of mutiny in the words of the frozen photographers, to see lines of revolt in the icy stares of Dorothy Lamour, when, presto, from out of a bag he had hidden in the cabin, he pulled five real, live ducks and "staged" a picture of Dorothy holding on to "wild" ducks, which had been bought earlier from a West Side meat market. It was quite a day. The photographers got pictures, Waller got publicity, Miss Lamour got a cold—and the sailors of the patrol boat got the ducks.

Jerry Steele, of the Apollo theatre, at Oberlin, Ohio, is one of those exhibitors who always believes in meeting fire with fire, particularly when box office receipts are concerned. Feeling, like hundreds of other owners, that radio's "Pot o' Gold" is taking business from him on Tuesday nights, he entered into that arrangement whereby he insures, for a weekly fee, for a $1,000 policy, to be paid to any patron who is attending his Tuesday evening performance and whose name is called by telephone at home for the "Pot o' Gold" $1,000 award, the radio show requiring a winner to be beside his telephone to collect. Chances for a winner being in a theatre are apparently slim, but last week's winner of the radio award was in Mr. Steele's theatre—but only the week before Steele discontinued his offer to pay any winner in his house during the broadcast.

Portland, Oregon, nominates Charlie White's local "Star Room" collection as one of the most unique hobbies of the day, possessing, as it does, 16,000 pictures of screen stars and personalities, hundreds of copies of film fan and trade papers, MOTION PICTURE HERALD, FAME, MOTION PICTURE ALMANAC, MOTION PICTURE DAILY and other QP publications. The oldest copies are kept under glass. A number of panels trace the development of the movies from their commercial beginnings in the U. S., in 1895, to the present. More than 300 stars personally sent their autographed pictures.

Between researchings for that mighty-long-in-preparation motion picture bibliography which the WPA Federal Writers' Project has had under way, their reporters the other day stumbled into a Hoboes' Exchange down on New York's down-at-the-heels Bowery. Some time ago the floating population of the Bowery decided that if the "big guys" down in Wall Street had a Stock Exchange, there was no reason why they too couldn't have one and so "Hoboes' Exchange" was born. The "traders" operate on the "curb" at the corner of Bayard Street and the Bowery. When a "member" feels the need to float a loan of a quarter, or some large sum, such as a "buck," he collects his assets and proceeds to the Hoboes' Exchange, sometimes called the "flea market," and begins his dealings. Some typical recent transactions included the swapping of one razor in good condition for an ancient knife with one good blade, slightly rusty; the exchange of a straw hat, a bit worn, and a blue shirt only three months old for a pair of blue denim trousers, said trousers having only three patches.

War is costly, no doubt about that. And France is doing its darndest to lower its war costs. In order to economize on the country's mineral resources, for example, they have ordered the government's war censors to reduce the consumption of scissors. Not by using them less, but by sending them out to be sharpened instead of buying new ones when they get dull. And they must get pretty dull, judging some of the censored mail arriving in these parts these days.

Showing just how ingenious a Frenchman can be during a war, an economy expert in the censors' office in Paris remembered that scissors can be sharpened after noting an order for 200 pairs of new ones.

From his managerial chair over the warm (?) sands of the Lincoln theatre at Miami Beach, "Sonny" Shepherd sends a full report of an incident happening at his theatre the other night when there wasn't a seat to be had and a long line of standees stretched well along the outside. One of those insistent women patrons approached the head usher: "You mean all of these people are waiting for seats?," she asked. "Yes, madam," politely replied the Lincoln usher. "You mean there isn't a seat to be had in the theatre?" "No, madam, we haven't any seats at all," he returned. "Not even one little single?" "No, madam," he still insisted, politely, "there isn't a seat in the theatre." "Well, I'm sure there is one way down front, isn't there?" "No, madam, there isn't a seat in the theatre vacant." "Well," she insisted, "there must be a single seat way in the back." "Sorry, madam, the theatre is full." "You know good and well," she insisted, "there is one seat way over on the side near the wall, where nobody will ever sit." "I'm very sorry, madam," the usher added, as he tried not to show his contempt as the crowd was being held up for him to answer her questions, "I have told you that there isn't a seat in the front, back, side nor in the loge and you're holding up the crowd who want to come in to wait." "Well," she insisted, "may I go to the ladies' room?"

FOX, RKO, PARAMOUNT EARNINGS ARE OFF; LAST RKO REPORT FILED

Net Profit of 20th Century-Fox Reported $4,146,813 in Year; RKO Cites $186,495 Loss; Paramount Estimates $3,870,000

Two large companies, Twentieth Century-Fox and RKO, this week announced their 1939 financial report and another, Paramount, estimated the 1939 total on the basis of probable fourth quarter earnings.

Twentieth Century-Fox reported a net of $4,146,813, compared with $7,252,466 for 1938.

RKO noted a net loss of $186,495. It had net profit of $18,604 in 1938.

Paramount estimated its 1939 earnings at $3,870,000, compared with $4,105,675 in 1938.

Twentieth Century-Fox 1939 Net

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation on Monday reported that a net profit of $4,146,813, after all income taxes, was earned in the 52 weeks ending December 30, 1939. This compares with a net profit of $7,252,466 for 1938. Dividends from National Theatres Corporation are included, totaling $756,000 compared with $882,000 in 1938.

The profits for the fourth quarter of 1939 were $994,218, against $2,630,374 for the fourth quarter of 1938 and $827,069 for the third quarter of 1939.

National Theatres Corporation and its voting controlled domestic subsidiaries had consolidated net income of $2,311,108 for 1939 compared with $2,617,653 for 1938. Twentieth Century-Fox's 22 per cent interest in National Theatres indicates an interest in these earnings of $970,665.

Twentieth Century-Fox paid dividends on the preferred stock in 1939 of $1.50 per share and on the common stock $1 per share. Total dividends paid amounted to $3,137,834.

Outstanding capital at Dec. 20, 1939 comprises 926,214 shares of preferred and 1,741,991 shares of common. After deducting dividends paid in the year on the preferred, the balance of earnings for 1939 amounted to $1.58 per share on the common outstanding at Dec. 30, 1939, which compares with $3.35 on the common outstanding in the previous year.

Net assets in foreign countries whether owned by the parent corporation or its subsidiaries aggregated $6,638,197 of which $3,737,757 represents the corporation's indirect investment in Gaumont British Picture Corporation, Ltd., and the balance $2,900,440 by other assets in foreign countries comprising principally the assets of the distributing units in various countries.

With regard to the foreign situation as it affects the corporation, Sidney R. Kent, president, said: "During 1939 in most of the important countries where your corporation's pictures are exhibited little difficulty was had in converting the greater part of foreign net revenues into dollars. However, due to the outbreak of further hostilities abroad and the subsequent establishment of more stringent currency regulations in all important foreign countries with respect to the transfer of foreign to United States currency, all current assets in foreign countries may be generally regarded, for a substantial part thereof at least, as not available in the ordinary course of business for use in the corporation's operations in the United States. This situation is becoming increasingly burdensome and constitutes a serious problem which is receiving the constant attention of the directors and officers of the corporation."

Paramount Net at $3,870,000

Paramount Pictures, Inc., estimated 1939 earnings at $3,870,000, or $1.08 a common share after preferred dividend requirements. Included in the total is a $1,110,000 share of undistributed earnings of partially owned non-consolidated subsidiaries.

Earnings for 1938 were $4,105,675, or $1.18 a common share, and included $292,361 net capital and non-recurring income, $332,397 profit on purchase of debentures, and $1,240,000 representing Paramount's interest in the combined undistributed earnings of non-consolidated subsidiaries.

Fourth-quarter earnings are estimated at $1,030,000, against $2,229,000 in the last three months of 1938. Earnings for the December, 1939, quarter exclude $245,000 in dividends received from subsidiaries in excess of the company's direct and indirect interest as a stockholder in the earnings for the quarter, such excess representing a partial distribution of earnings of previous quarters.

In the 1938 quarter there was included $360,000 net capital and non-recurring income, and $87,000 profit on purchase of debentures. There was excluded $420,000 received in dividends from subsidiaries' earnings of prior quarters.

The company has continued its policy of taking up revenues only to the extent that dollars have been received with respect to subsidiaries operating in foreign countries subject to currency restrictions. The results of foreign subsidiaries operating in all other foreign countries have been included at current rates of exchange.

In the case of the English and Canadian subsidiaries which have outstanding debt payable in local currencies in excess of the net current assets of such subsidiaries, the provision for the decline in dollar value of the net current assets of these companies has been offset against the amount of outstanding debt payable.

$186,494 RKO Loss

The final report of the Irving Trust Company, trustee of RKO, was filed in federal court in New York Monday, in which was embodied the financial statements of RKO and subsidiaries for 1939. The Irving Trust petitioned for discharge as trustees in the reorganization proceedings, which have been completed by transfer of all properties of the old company to the successor of the same name.

The consolidated statement of the RKO Corporation and subsidiaries for 1939, subject to audit, showed a net loss of $186,495 before providing for a current dividend of $7 each on 42,543 shares of seven per cent cumulative convertible preferred stock of the Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation held by the public. This compares with a net profit of $18,604 in 1938.

In 1939 the combined operations of the theatre operating subsidiaries of RKO, resulted in an unaudited net profit of $1,234,523 after all charges except interest accruals of $269,215 on debt to RKO, the trustee reported. This compares with a net profit of $1,204,294 in 1938 before interest accruals of $307,520.

On a comparable basis, attendance in RKO theatre holdings in 1939 was somewhat better than in 1938, but the average admission price declined slightly, the Irving Trust report said. Operating expenses increased, but not in proportion to the increase in income. As a result of reduction in funded debt and for other reasons, fixed charges declined substantially, but the net results were not indicative of the actual operating results, the report said, since a non-recurring item of $400,000 was charged against 1939 earnings in settlement of a lease obligation.

Operations of RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., and subsidiaries for 1939 resulted in a net loss of $545,126 before accrual of $1,086,316 interest on debt to RKO, unaudited, compared with a net loss of $189,474 in 1938 before $1,058,080 interest accruals.

Pathe News, Inc., showed an unaudited net profit of $97,293 in 1939, compared with $97,199 earned in 1938. Accrual of interest on debt to RKO was $13,204, against $14,430 in 1938.

RKO Circuits Report

Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation and subsidiary companies report for the year 1939 a net profit of $976,627.13 after all charges, equivalent to $15.18 per share on the 64,304 shares of seven per cent cumulative preferred stock now outstanding. For 1938 the corresponding figure was $996,995.90 after all charges, equivalent to $15.50 per share on the preferred stock. Income from theatre admissions was placed at $13,554,669.07.

B. F. Keith Corporation and subsidiary companies report for the year 1939 a net profit of $575,271.88 after all charges, as compared with $752,011.05 for 1938.

The $186,494 RKO net loss is after accrued interest of $764,650 on all outstanding 6 per cent notes, 6 per cent debentures and extended 6 per cent notes of the old company, which debt is eliminated in the plan of reorganization. Also deducted was a $400,000 lease obligation and $392,778 adjustment of inventory noted in reports of subsidiaries.

Claims filed against RKO in the reorganization proceedings aggregated $55,512,250, according to the Irving Trust report, and these were reduced to $24,973,375 by payment, withdrawal, stipulation, allowance, disallowance and adjustment. The remainder of claims participating in the reorganization plan included $12,245,875 of unsecured allowed claims and $12,718,500 of secured claims.

TAX COLLECTIONS GAIN IN MONTH

Federal admission tax collections moved upward in February to a total of $1,852,764, an increase of $466,000 over the $1,486,534 reported for January and nearly $350,000 above the February, 1939, total of $1,503,127, it was reported this week by the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Collections for the first two months of the year, $3,339,298, were approximately $272,000 above the $3,067,261 recorded for the corresponding period in 1939, while for the first eight months of the Government's fiscal year receipts amounted to $14,059,383, an increase of $677,000 over the $13,381,863 received to the end of February, 1939.

$1,732,984 Allowance Applications

Applications for allowances for services rendered to RKO in the company's reorganization proceedings total $1,732,984. The sum is exclusive of any allowance which William Bondy, federal judge, may grant to the Atlas Corporation, proponent of the plan of reorganization, for its services but includes $875,037 asked by Atlas for expenses incurred. Hearings on the applications are expected to be set shortly.

Atlas, the largest applicant, has expressed a willingness to accept either cash or common stock for payment of both expenses and any amount which the court may fix as compensation for its services. No fixed amount for services was set in the application, the figure being left to the court to decide.

The second largest application is William J. Donovan, attorney for the Irving Trust Company, which had acted both as receiver and trustee in the seven years of court administration. Mr. Donovan, in two petitions, asked for a total of $188,659 of which $100,000 was for services to the trustee.

The application of the Irving Trust Company for $95,000 as a final allowance was filed jointly with that of Mr. Donovan. According to the petitions, the Irving Trust Company has heretofore received $295,000 and Mr. Donovan the sum of $360,000 for his work of attorney for the trustee and $160,000 while representing the receiver.

The list of petitions for allowances which Judge Bondy will consider are as follows:

Name of Applicant	Amount Sought
Atlas Corporation (Expenses and unfixed amount for services)	$875,037
William J. Donovan	188,659
Irving Trust Company	95,000
John S. Stover	118,225
Lehman Brothers Corporation	76,772
City Bank Farmers Trust Company	1,600
Delafield, Marsh, Porter & Hope	1,900
J. & W. Seligman Company	8,75
Ernest Stirn	50,00
Six of Stirn's attorneys	72,68
Chemical Bank & Trust Company and its attorneys	68,09
Marcus Heiman and his attorneys	57,50
Richard B. Scandrett	30,00
Price, Waterhouse Company	4,80
Arthur K. Weber	2,50
White & Case	35,52
Committee of Unsecured Creditors	10,27
Kommel & Rosenberg	16,87
Central Hanover Bank & Trust Company	16,25
Larkin, Rathbone & Perry	12,50

With its application Atlas filed a detailed statement of out-of-pocket expenditures which had totalled $875,037. The list set forth the payment of $300,000 to its attorneys, Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett; $163,277 to Rathvon & Company, Inc.; $106,250 to W. J. Merrill; $76,772 to Leo Spitz; $200,000 for salaries and overhead, and $28,736 for miscellaneous expenses.

Although Atlas did not set an amount for its allowance, its petition refers to an agreement made in 1935 by Atlas with the Radio Corporation of America under which the former was to receive $745,000 as compensation. The application says that this agreement was subsequently nullified, but that it is an indication of what a fair figure might be.

RKO's operating figures for 1939 resulted in net loss of approximately $50,000. Cash in excess of $1,000,000 was raised through the sale of 500,000 shares of new common stock underwritten by Atlas at $3 per share, and much of this sum has been earmarked for the reorganization costs.

The Irving Trust and its counsel, Donovan, Leisure, Newton & Lumbard, are vacating the office quarters on the tenth floor of the RKO Building in Rockefeller Center which they have occupied since the beginning of the RKO reorganization in 1933.

Andrew C. Christensen, trustee's representative at RKO, who is a vice-president of Irving Trust, will return to the bank's downtown headquarters. Garrett Van Wanger, assistant to Mr. Christensen, will start his new duties of assistant treasurer of RKO.

O. C. Doering, Jr., of counsel to the trustee, will continue as a member of the Donovan law company and will be associated with Mr. Donovan in the Government anti-trust suit defense. Ambrose Cram, Mr. Doering's assistant, also will continue with the law company.

Buy Cochrane Stock

The entire Universal stock holdings of R. H. Cochrane, former president of the company, have been purchased by a group of 10 Universal executives, it was learned this week.

The purchasing group is reported to include J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman of the board; Nate J. Blumberg, president; Charles D. Prutzman, vice-president and general counsel; Matthew J. Fox, vice-president; Cliff Work, vice-president and studio head; W. A. Scully, vice-president and distribution head, and Joseph H. Seidelman, vice-president and foreign department head.

Others reported to be participating in the purchase are: Peyton Gibson, secretary and treasurer; Samuel I. Machnovich, financial officer, and Milton Feld, producer.

The purchase price, number of shares acquired and the manner of distribution among the purchasers were not disclosed. However, at the time of Mr. Cochrane's withdrawal from Universal in December, 1937, it was reported that his holdings amounted to almost 20 per cent of the common shares outstanding, having an estimated market value of $450,000 at the time. Universal common has increased in value since that time.

A net profit of $85,858, equivalent to 11.92 cents a share on the outstanding stock, is reported by Trans-Lux Corporation for the year ended last December 31st. This compares with a net of $133,717, equivalent to 18½ cents a share for 1938. A dividend of 10 cents a share was paid in each year.

Theatres operations showed a net loss of $29,775. Ticket operations resulted in a gross income of $305,910 and a net of $110,950.

Business at four newsreel theatres operated by Trans-Lux showed an increase in the last four months of 1939, due to interest in war news, and the gross business at these theatres was about equal to that of the year before, Percy N. Furber, chairman of the board, reported. However, general conditions affected the three Trans-Lux houses operated as subsequent feature theatres, including two in New York and one in Boston. "The theatre in Boston has just recently turned the corner and is on a paying basis," Mr. Furber said.

The report shows $312,189 income from theatres operated by wholly-owned subsidiaries, with $208,813 operating expenses, exclusive of depreciation and amortization.

Trans-Lux Corporation and subsidiaries last year paid the officers and directors total remuneration of $127,613 and 3,500 shares of stock which had a market value of $4,312, it is disclosed in the notice of the annual stockholders' meeting which will be held April 10th.

Remuneration of three executives is listed as follows: Percy N. Furber, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, $40,608; Percival E. Furber, president of the corporation and vice-president of all subsidiaries, $20,340; Leslie E. Thompson, president of subsidiary theatre companies, $25,220 and 1,000 shares of stock with a market value of $1,187. There are six other salaried officers.

Reelection of the full slate of 11 directors is scheduled at the annual meeting.

Reports Monogram Holdings

John W. Mangham of Atlanta, elected to the directorate of Monogram Pictures on February 10th, held 100 shares of Monogram common stock direct and 3,500 shares of common and 8,304 options for common through Monogram Southern Exchanges, Inc., when he joined the board, he has reported to the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Roxy Theatre Surplus

Roxy Theatre, Inc., New York, wholly owned subsidiary of Twentieth Century-Fox reports earned surplus for the 53 weeks ending August 31, 1939, of $73,043.76. Theatre receipts from admissions for the period amounted to $1,889,981.81. The surplus figure compares with an earned surplus on August 25, 1938, of $55,578.

Pathe Film Dividend

The board of directors of Pathe Film Corporation has declared a regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 per share on the $7 convertible preferred stock, payable April 1, 1940 to stockholders of record March 26th.

Eastman Wage Dividend

The Eastman Kodak Company this week paid to 30,934 employees its 28th annual wage dividend, amounting to $2,362,331. Of this amount $2,164,680 went to 25,508 eligible employees in the United States and Canada, with 17,745 workers in Rochester receiving $1,621,256.

The 1940 dividend rate is unchanged from last year's, but the amount paid out is $217,997 higher because of the increased number of eligible employees on the pay roll.

Newsreels Split Over War Films

Newsreel operations in France have split into two camps, with Movietone News and News of the Day in one and Paramount, Universal and Pathe in the other, as a result of a breakup in a cooperative working arrangement which formerly included all five of the newsreel companies.

This is disclosed by Lewis Buddy, Jr., Paramount News chief for continental Europe, who arrived in New York from abroad this week for conferences with John Hicks, vice-president in charge of foreign distribution, and A. J. Richard, head of the newsreel.

As a result, competition has been intensified for the American newsreels in covering the European war and costs have increased over what they were in the period of the cooperative arrangement. The new alignment will shortly spread to all of continental Europe, Mr. Buddy believes.

The arrangement was broken up February 18th when Truman H. Talley, vice-president in charge of production of Movietone News, in conference with newsreel representatives in Paris decided to withdraw his reel. Mr. Talley felt that there was no advantage in maintaining the mutual agreement because the war films were more or less identical due to government control. Also, Mr. Talley felt that Movietone, with a large staff, was shouldering a financial burden out of proportion to what his newsreel was obtaining in return.

The chief problem for the newsreels is how to get films to this country from the war zones quickly. Air transportation is used as much as possible, with duplicate prints shipped by boat in event the first fails to arrive or arrives late.

It costs $150 to send an average newsreel shipment from Paris to New York via the clipper plane from Lisbon, not counting freight charges from Paris to Marseilles.

The company which has the best setup for relaying prints to the destination point has best chance of scoring a "beat." While no long-range plans are possible, preparations for transport have to be made carefully in advance, beginning at the point where an anticipated story may break, he said, adding that censorship still presents a serious problem.

Funds for Camera

The attorney general of Alabama has ruled that the state highway department may use public funds to purchase a motion picture machine "to record construction operations of that department." Chris J. Sherlock, highway director, said the equipment would provide "a file of information for study and use in the progressive science of road and bridge construction and for educational work in showing the activities and work of this department."

Edison, Part II

Continuing the story started with "Young Tom Edison," this second part of the screen story opens with a prologue showing the inventor at the age of 82 and then fades back to his arrival in New York in 1869 and carries him through the invention of the talking machine and finally the electric light in 1879.

Depicting Edison the man is Spencer Tracy, third ranking star in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD and FAME poll of box office values, and last seen as Major Robert Rogers in "Northwest Passage." The only woman's role in the film is taken by Rita Johnson. The cast also includes Charles Coburn, Gene Lockhart, Lynne Overman, Felix Bressart, Henry Travers, Gene Reynolds and Regis Toomey.

John W. Considine, Jr., produced, as he did "Young Tom Edison," Clarence Brown directed. His latest was "The Rains Came."

Sandy is a Lady

(Universal)

Comedy

Picked for comedy potentialities, the cast of "Sandy is a Lady" includes, in addition to the baby of the title, Mischa Auer, most recently in "Destry Rides Again"; Nan Grey, of "The House of Seven Gables"; Tom Brown, Eugene Pallette, Billy Gilbert and Edgar Kennedy.

The title rolist, Baby Sandy, already has appeared in three pictures in her two years. She was seen in "East Side of Heaven," "Unexpected Father" and "Little Accident."

The original story and screen play was written by Charles Grayson, and concerns the tribulations undergone by Sandy's parents before they can get a raise for the head of the house from his boss, a hardboiled contractor.

Charles Lamont directed, as he did on the last two pictures with the baby, and Burt Kelly produced.

storical Melodrama

Resourceful showmen have in this distinctly unusual production an entertainment m of particular interest to lovers of fine horses. The Lippizan stallion named in the e is one of six of his breed in America, a descendant of a long line of cavalry ounts bred by the Hapsburg for the defense of Austria and himself a product of e world-famous Spanish riding school. To any horse-conscious audience this splendid imal's performance, highlighted by his superb demonstrations of trained ability, is rare treat, quite independently of story plot and biped cast.

Doubtlessly resourceful showmen will ke capital, also, of the fact that footage otographed in Austria by Richard Ros- n, resulting in his temporary incarceration suspicion of espionage, is liberally used the picture.

These scenes, showing the Lippizan horses in ge numbers, drew spontaneous applause from Hollywood preview audience. So did the markable sequence showing a troop of Lippi- ns performing in formation and individually the Spanish riding school. Although com- tely dominated by the presence and per- mance of Florian, which is the horse's real well as character name, the picture is ac- lly the story of the passing of the Austria t was the Hapsburg empire. It opens in out 1910 with a depiction of life as then lived and about the court of Emperor Franz Josef, ves on to 1914, showing the assassination of chduke Ferdinand, the war, briefly, and then Revolution, following which the action ves to New York and an ultimate happy end- for three of the principals and the horse. vo of these are young persons, a commoner d a duchess, whose romantic destinies have en influenced throughout by the events of pire which make up the broad background the picture.

Produced by Winfield Sheehan from the novel Felix Salten, the film contains those in- edients of showmanship for which the pro- cer is best known. There is, for instance, imperial ballet sequence, featuring Irina ronova, quite as excellent in a totally differ- t way as the several fine sequences featuring pert horsemanship. Showmen have in this quite separate avenue of exploitation ap- oach. Nevertheless, as directed by Edwin L. arin from a script by Noel Langley, Geza erczeg and James Kevin McGuinness, the pro- ction possesses, in common with other pic- es in which interest has centered about an imal, a quality of technological informality ich the cast does not at all times cope with.

Rebecca

(United Artists-Selznick)

Study in Neuroses

As skillfully as a scalpel in the hands of a great surgeon, this picture from Daphne du Maurier's novel of the same name lays bare the tissues and exposes the workings of its characters' minds and emotions.

It is, first and foremost, a craftsman's picture, and one long to be remembered for its adroit blending of the component arts of the motion picture—writing, direction, acting and production value expressed in mounting and background. As such, its interest to the general theatre going public is considerably clinical.

Its thesis is a mood, its action the triumph of a marriage over that mood. Retaining an almost verbatim faithfulness to the book, the picture spins its tale of a man, the girl he marries after the death of his faithless first wife, and their home, all overshadowed by the mocking spirit of "Rebecca," the woman he had married first. For her memory he holds nothing but hatred. Rebecca having been, admittedly at first, by action later on, a wanton, as well as a wit and a beauty.

But to his second wife, sensitive traveling companion to a middle-aged social climber before her marriage, the abiding presence of "Rebecca" is as real as a tangible thing, making her even more nervous, more introverted, than before. Only a chance discovery unearths the fact that "Rebecca" was hated, might even have been killed by her husband, and serves also to center the lives of the two principals and bring them back from the tangent on which the memory of "Rebecca" had placed them.

While never seen, never heard, Rebecca's spirit dominates the story as it does the characters, and for its highly successful creation credit must be given Alfred Hitchcock, director, whose skill in capturing the mood of psychological mystery has been demonstrated previously in the filming of Miss du Maurier's "Jamaica Inn," "The 39 Steps" and "The Lady Vanishes."

The cast of this first David O. Selznick production to follow his "Gone With the Wind," makes evident its complete understanding of the spirit of the novel, with Laurence Olivier and Joan Fontaine, in her first starring role, as the mentally tortured principals, and Judith Anderson, George Sanders and Reginald Denny also rendering outstanding performances as, respectively, the housekeeper turned sadist by adoration of her first mistress, the lover of Rebecca, and the faithful manager of the estate.

Although departing from the novel in that here Rebecca's death is revealed as accident rather than murder, the picture remains adult fare in its depiction of "Rebecca's" immorality. The final turning point of the story consists of a doctor's disclosure that his examination of "Rebecca" on the day preceding her death had revealed that she was not illicitly pregnant, as she had later informed her husband in daring him to kill her, but a victim of cancer. This is accepted as proving her suicidally motivated and therefore as freeing the husband of suspicion of murder.

Beyond Tomorrow

(RKO Radio)

Souls Adrift

Based on an original story by Mildred Cram and Adele Comandini, "Beyond Tomorrow" deals with the efforts of three bachelors to see that a young man and woman, friends of theirs, have a successful start in life. The three men of good will, however, are depicted as spirits only, for the major part of the film, having met death in a plane crash.

The film's premise being that the soul survives on earth, if only for a time, the three manage to keep the young man's success as a radio singer from ruining his life before the

The Courageous Dr. Christian

(RKO Radio)

Comedy

Second of the "Dr. Christian" series, taken from the widely popular transcontinental radio program, "The Courageous Dr. Christian" tells of the good doctor's fight for slum clearance in River's End to avert unhealthful conditions such as this film exposed.

Fighting against the city council, "Dr. Christian," played by his radio-film creator, Jean Hersholt, almost singlehandedly wins the battle against disease and for elimination of a "squatters' town."

Again supporting Hersholt are Dorothy Lovett, Robert Baldwin and Tom Neal. Comedy is supplied by Maude Eburne and Vera Lewis, the last-named scoring a hit as the wealthy widow who wants to marry the physician.

Bernard Vorhaus directed the original screen play by Ring Lardner, Jr., and Ian McLellan Hunter. The associate producer was Monroe Shaff. From the reactions at the preview, the assignments were highly successful.

Rancho Grande

Autry Western

Two of the most popular songs of the late, unlamented winter season were "South of the Border" and "Rancho Grande." They are particularly adaptable for the singing cowboy of your modern westerns. Gene Autry, the number one star in this field, recently made "South of the Border," in which a story was built around the song. The same treatment has been accorded "Rancho Grande," although the lyrics provide little basis for a story. So the story has only the barest affinity to the song, though the setting is the "Rancho Grande."

Autry is foreman, also guardian and nursemaid to the three owners of the ranch, left them by their grandfather. The three, played by June Storey, Dick Hogan and little Mary Lee, are city-bred folk. The two older members find the wide open spaces a trifle stifling until a climactic occasion changes their contempt for a dam project on the estate to enthusiastic support.

Let it be duly noted that one Smiley Burnette is on hand as usual. Smiley is a fixture in the Autry westerns, a very animated and important fixture. The villain is played by Ferris Taylor.

The film was directed by Frank McDonald from a screen play by Bradford Ropes, Betty Burbridge and Peter Milne.

Action Melodrama

Made patently for action fans, Universal's "Zanzibar" has wild animal fights, hordes of savages about to make a human sacrifice, a volcanic eruption, a shipwreck, hand to hand fighting, and about everything else needed to keep the follower of this type of story sitting on the edge of the seat.

Lola Lane and James Craig enact the leading roles. Miss Lane is a woman explorer seeking the missing skull of an East African ruler which, in enemy hands, would cause the natives to revolt against British rule. Craig is more or less a "stowaway" on her expedition. The support includes Eduardo Ciannelli, Tom Fadden, Clarence Muse, Samuel S. Hinds, Oscar O'Shea and Abner Biberman.

The American Gang Buste

(Times Pictures)

FBI in Action

Edited, produced and directed by Capt. A. Dion and released by Times Pictures, T American Gang Busters is an assemblage newsreel and other pictorial shots of scer crimes and reenactments of crimes committed some of the most notorious public enemies the last decade. The work of the Fed Bureau of Investigation and other law enfor ment agencies is emphasized, while off-scr commentary describes the events and histo of the cases.

Of most importance is the Lindbergh c re-enacted in part with scenes of the trial Bruno Hauptman, the convicted extortio kidnaper and murderer, testifying in Flemi ton, N. J.

The Urschel kidnaping trial and sentenc of the criminals also are shown.

In other fields of criminal activity, bank r bery and murder, the producers trace the of John Dillinger from his early boyh through the numerous slayings, his escapes his capture and death, with actual backgro of his operations in many scenes. Clyde B rows' exit is re-enacted, when he and his ci smoking "gun moll," Bonnie Parker, were ki by G-men and a Louisiana posse.

The careers of many other public mena including "Machine Gun" Kelly, Raym Hamilton, Alvin Karpis and "Pretty B Floyd, are portrayed.

Although the photographic technics someti seemed below par, the film does carry out theme that crime does not pay.

Espionage Comedy

In the belief—a belief not necessarily held everyone in the business—that wartime fi must have a wartime setting, and that the trons of popular comedy want to be kept full view of their graver problems, Geo Formby's producers herein have cast him a misfit adventurer in an international incident. Nazi machinations, U-boat atten to sink British liners, Hitler himself, all their way into the comedy, all treated in most extravagant slapstick. British audie who possess a macabre sense of humor welcome the metamorphosis. Others may disappointed. There is no bid for extra-te torial appeal.

Formby's role is that of a concert p comedian who is mistakenly caught up in a plot in Bergen, mistaken by the Nazis for a key man in their machine, and by the British for a Secret Service ace.

Most of the laughs are of the stomachic variety, with the ukelele player falling into bakery machinery, falling for a serpentine brunette, and a slapstick climax in which the wide mouthed hero is shot from a torpedo tube onto the deck of a British destroyer.

Formby sings a few songs without provocation.

Texas Stagecoach
(Columbia)
Western Melodrama

The title derives from the efforts of Charles Starrett in the role of "Larry Kinkaid" and Iris Meredith as "Jean Harper" to save a stage line from a gang of crooks. They are aided as usual by the Sons of the Pioneers, who during lulls between exciting rides and gun fights provide a few songs.

Directed by Joseph Lewis, who has made many of Columbia's western productions, the story deals with the "Kinkaids," father and son, and the "Harpers," brother and sister, friendly rivals for a stagecoach line until they are pitted against each other by the maneuvering of a local banker trying to get control for himself. Finally the two groups combine forces to defeat the plot after "Larry's" father has been killed.

Action rather than dialogue tells the story, for which the western fans should be grateful.

Exhibition of this screen sermon, purporting to trace the genealogical chart of homo sapiens from anthropoid ancestry, would seem best suited for classroom or laboratory hall than for the theatre. A showing for general patronage might cause protests from religious and scientific societies.

The production is replete with charts and repetitious discussions without any attempt to vary the material. Some of the scenes are amusing in an odd sort of way, if the spectator takes amusement from viewing agile monkeys swinging in gay abandon through the tree tops or studiously delousing each other.

Home on the Range
(MGM)
Likeable Cartoon

"Home on the Range" is an entertaining cartoon of animal life in the forests of the west. Produced by Hugh Harmon, the cartoon tells the story of a little calf who leaves his mother's side in the night to chase a rabbit. The rabbit, a bouncing, happy creature and an addition to the select group of favorites in animated animals, leads the calf a merry chase. When the calf is cornered by a wolf, the rabbit and other small denizens of the forest come to the calf's assistance to no avail, until the rabbit finally fetches the mother cow and the wolf literally turns yellow and runs.—Running time, 9 minutes.

War Time Film Supply Stressed

The importance of motion picture supply in wartime was emphasized this week in a report from American consular sources in China. A modern completely equipped motion picture studio is maintained at Chunking by the Chinese National Government. Every precaution has been taken, both in the construction and in bombproof shelters for equipment and films, to safeguard it from air and ground attack.

The studio, known as the China Motion Picture Company, has been in operation since August, 1937. It had to be removed in its entirety from Hankow to Chunking.

Since its establishment it has turned out five feature dramas, seven war documentary films totaling 45 reels, nine multi-subject newsreels aggregating 9,193 feet, eight single subject newsreels totaling 9,000 feet, 10 cartoons of war songs and slogans, amounting to 10,575 feet, and five newsreels of the "spot news" type, totaling 3,265 feet.

The films are exhibited in theatres wherever available outside Japanese control, and in temples, schools, colleges and universities in Chinese areas. In addition, mobile military units with portable equipment exhibit the films to soldiers wherever quartered.

Two feature productions, in work at the studio for several months, are near completion.

"Studio equipment," the report said, "although in daily use, stands prepared for hasty removal to bombproof caverns hewn and dynamited out of the solid rock beneath the hill on which the studio is built. Valuable negatives remain stored in these caverns."

Tri-State Pictures Sold

Tri-State Pictures, Inc., has been sold through Baker & Simon, Detroit brokerage firm, to Donald Jones, president of the General Broadcasting System. NICK UNION FIGHT INVOLVES IATSE; WARNERS AWAIT IATSE INTERVENTION

St. Louis Central Labor Council Seats Delegates of Projectionists Local 143 Against George Browne's Wishes

George E. Browne's International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, involved in battles with the actors' unions last summer, then with "rebels" in its studio unions, still concerned with wage negotiations with the Hollywood producers, this week became entangled in two separate disputes. In St. Louis, the Central Trades and Labor Council seated delegates of the projectionists' union, Local 143, against Mr. Browne's wishes. In Philadelphia, the local IATSE is supporting the local of the American Federation of Musicians in its strike against the Warner theatre circuit.

Follows Nick's Fight

The St. Louis dispute stems from the struggle of John P. "Big" Nick with his union, Local 143; from his trial and acquittal of charge of extortion of money from theatre owners, from his pending trial on another extortion charge, from his removal from control of his union, of which he had been president, and a concurrent invalidation, by the judge, of approximately 60 memberships which had been issued in Nick's regime.

This week, the St. Louis Central Trades and Labor Union seated delegates from Local 143, in defiance of written orders of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, who had issued the orders at the request of Mr. Browne. Mr. Green said the local was not in good standing with the headquarters of the IATSE.

However, the labor council's spokesmen claimed they acted in accordance with the court decision of several weeks ago, barring Nick, and Clyde Weston, former business agent, also deposed, from interfering with the affairs of the union. To have refused to accept the local's delegates would have been tantamount to accepting the authority of Nick and Weston, it was pointed out.

Charter Revocation Involved

A special committee of the central trades union, said, in its report:

"As a violation of the decrees of the court would place the central body and its membership in contempt of court, your committee recommends the delegates be seated, until such time as the IA officials notify the central body of the revocation of the charter of Local 143."

This move has not been made yet. It was pointed out by local 143 members that they were paying the regular per capita tax, which had been accepted by their international union.

Mr. Green's telegram to the body, decrying the seating, said: "President George Browne, of the IATSE, protests the seating of delegates in the St. Louis Central Labor Union, who are not recognized as members in good standing with the IA. I must urge that your central body refrain from seating anyone as a delegate unless and until it can be shown that said delegate is a member in good standing with the international."

Mr. Green also wrote a letter, which said, in part: "I am writing to advise you that under no circumstances whatever can an individual represent a local organization unless the individual is a member in good standing of the international union. I must insist, and demand, that the St. Louis Central Trades Union conform to the ruling which I have made, and carry it out without reservation or modification."

Circuit Judge Ernest F. Oakley's decision, of several weeks ago, removing Nick and Weston from control, and invalidating about 60 memberships, also permanently enjoined them from interfering with the union's management; required from them an accounting of the union's funds; appointed two permanent receivers; and ordered them to return approximately $47,000 to the union.

It was understood this week that the members of the union whose cards had been invalidated by the judge were receiving new ones from the international's office.

Last week, attorneys for Nick and Weston moved for a new trial in the case in which they were enjoined from control of the union. The motion was denied. They are expected to appeal.

Their trial on charges of extortion of $6,500 from St. Louis theatre owners in 1937 is expected in April. Mr. Nick already has been acquitted of extortion of $10,000 from the same theatre owners in 1936, after several mistrials. His co-defendant in this case, Representative Edward M. Brady, was given a directed acquittal.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch remarked editorially, and with cartoon, on the fact that Nick and Brady were acquitted in one court and yet Nick had been ordered in another court to return funds to the union which the first court acquitted him of obtaining. The publication faces contempt of court charges on April 3rd.

Hollywood IATSE Revolt Results in New Union

Presaging perhaps, a revival of the rebellion which dissidents in the Hollywood IATSE union, Local 37, staged for over a year against the international officership of the Alliance, several former members of the Local 37, who refused a "Thanksgiving amnesty" offered to them last fall, have filed incorporation papers at the state capital, Sacramento, for a "Hollywood and Culver City Studio Technicians' Local 37."

The incorporators are George H. Davis, Charles H. Guthrie, Charles Ross, and Howard

BIOFF STILL FREE, GETS TWO-WEEK DELAY

William "Willie" Bioff, West Coast leader of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and chairman of the Conference of American Federation of Labor Studio Unions, on Monday in Chicago criminal court received an additional two weeks, until April 8th, in which to appeal to the Illinois supreme court for a writ to stay his return to a Chicago jail to serve out a 1922 jail sentence as determined by the court, after a lengthy fight by Mr. Bioff in Illnois and California.

J. W. Buzzell, secretary of the Los Angeles Central Trades and Labor Council, and vice-chairman of the Conference, was acquitted, on Monday, in that city, on a charge of reckless driving.

Circuit Will Fight Through, and Expects IATSE to Live Up to Contracts, Says Philadelphia Attorney

Warner Theatres, faced for four months by a musicians' strike against its Philadelphia theatres, a strike which affected it but slightly because no one of its theatres in that city uses stage shows or musicians, this week had before it a potentially more serious situation. The International Alliance of Theatrical Stagehands threatened to call out its Philadelphia stagehands, projectionists, and the electricians by April 1st if the circuit does not accede to musicians' demands. The circuit will fight through, however, and expects the IATSE to live up to its exisiting contracts, the Warner Philadelphia attorney, Morris Wolf, warned in letters to unions heads last week.

Would Force Use of Musicians

The Philadelphia local of the American Federation of Musicians has been striking against Warner Theatres since last December, endeavoring to force the circuit to use musicians with every stage show. The result has been cessation of vaudeville, and "live" music in every Warner theatre in that city.

The musicians appealed several weeks ago to the national president of the Federation, Joseph Weber, and received assurance of help. The IATSE and the Federation have a mutual assistance pact.

Mr. Wolf declared, by letter, that "if the unions ignored Warner Theatres' requests" to live up to contracts, "it will be necessary to resort to the courts for relief."

Settlement Hinted Near

However, he left an impression a settlement might be reached soon.

IATSE officials in Philadelphia reserved comment, however, the April 1st deadline remaining.

George Browne, IATSE president, last week had notified Warners and the IATSE locals in Philadelphia that members would walk out by April 1st, in sympathy with the musicians.

A. Rex Ricciardi, executive secretary of the Federation unit in that city, maintained this week that a walkout by the members of the Alliance would not be a violation of that organization's contracts with the circuit. He said all IATSE contracts incorporate the mutual assistance pact with the musicians.

Washington observers thought that the Department of Justice might become interested in the situation, saying the musicians have no direct dispute with Warners and that the IATSE attitude is merely that of a sympathetic but entirely unconnected party.

Releases Picture on Canada

The Ontario Board of Censors on Wednesday released the March of Time issue on "Canada at War," which it previously had banned as political propaganda for Mackenzie King's Dominion government. The March of Time charged that the ban had been dictated by Mitchell Hepburn, Ontario premier. General elections on Tuesday overwhelmingly upheld the King government. The picture opens at the Imperial theatre, Toronto.

VAUDEVILLE UNION RESUMES TALKS

Hurd, a lawyer and former business representative of the Photographers' Local 659. The first three were leaders in the former IATSE Local 37.

The incorporation articles announce, as one of the purposes of the unit, a mission "to establish a democratic form of employee organization among studio technicians," to win freedom "from autocratic and czaristic gangsterism, and the control of Chicagorillas."

Also in Hollywood, the Sound Technicians Local 659, of the IATSE, on Monday, was bargaining with several of the independent studios and sound service studios, on its increased pay demands, which it advanced last week, under threat of a strike. On Monday, several companies were said to have signed.

Again Postpone Union Producer Wage Parley

The negotiations between the labor committee of the Association of Motion Picture Producers and the Conference of American Federation of Labor Studio Unions was again put off, this week, as both sides again were unable to arrange a meeting time. The parley on possible relinquishing by the studio unions of the general ten per cent wage increase they gained last Fall, was first held on February 15th, as agreed to by both sides when the producers originally met the union demands. That conference lasted two days, and broke up with the announcement by both sides that they would each bring more detailed data to the conference table.

The producers maintained, at that parley, as they did when granting the wage increases, that they could not afford to keep it up, that the falling foreign revenues, and rising productions costs made wage increases likely to be disastrous.

The unions contended, as they still do, that the economies in the motion picture industry should be made "at the top" among executives and high salaried stars, rather than among average workers.

Suggests Resumption of Parleys

Y. Frank Freeman, in charge of Paramount's coast operations, president of the Association of Motion Picture Producers, and chairman of its labor committee, last week said in New York (where he testified at the Government's anti-trust suit pre-trial examinations) that he had wired J. W. Buzzell, executive secretary of the Los Angeles Central Trades and Labor Council and vice-chairman of the Conference, suggesting that a date for resumption of wage parleys be set for this week.

Apparently as a follow-up to the Conference, which was hastily formed last fall, and in which most of the picture industry unions cooperated in order to obtain a wage increase for all studio employees, a permanent organization of all Los Angeles amusement unions, entitled the Federated Amusement and Allied Crafts, seems this week near formation. A meeting of delegates from various unions approved the idea last Friday in Los Angeles.

The new alliance would not arbitrate jurisdictional disputes, but it would forbid strikes because of such disputes. Each affiliate of the alliance would have one delegate.

He is not negotiating with the majors for the return of musicians to theatre work, Joseph M. Weber, president of the American Federation of Musicians, said in Hollywood last week. His visit was for health alone, he said. Mr. Weber is to stay in Hollywood for some time. He had been in Miami several months.

Mr. Weber did, however, visit Pat Casey, producers' labor contact, last week, but denied that "business" was discussed. Negotiations of Mr. Weber and other musicians' officers, for the reemployment of musicians, were carried on last year in New York through Mr. Casey, acting for the majors and their theatre affiliates.

TELEPHONE RATES LOWER ON MAY 1ST

The Federal Communications Commission this week announced that:

On May 1st long distance telephone rates will be reduced at the rate of $5,500,000 a year. The motion picture industry, with headquarters on both coasts, is an extensive user of long distance telephoning.

The reduction will apply to calls covering distances of more than 420 miles. The reductions increase with mileage, so the maximum cuts will affect transcontinental calls.

The station-to-station day charge between New York and San Francisco will drop from $6.50 to $4. Night rates will be reduced from $4.25 to $3. Other sample tariffs under the new schedule include: New York to Dallas, $4 to $3; New York to Oklahoma, $3.75 to $2.90; New York to Minneapolis, $2.90 to $2.40.

Person-to-person rates will be lowered by the same percentage as station-to-station calls.

Vaudeville Union Resumes Talks with Major Circuits

The American Guild of Variety Artists, active and comparatively new "variety performers'" union, expected this week to resume its negotiations in New York, with officials of the major theatre circuits, which use vaudeville or stage shows in conjunction with film fare.

The talks began last week, with the union expected to argue for the acceptance of its vaudeville "code," a union contract which was drawn up several months ago and which would enforce virtually a closed shop for the AGVA, with other unions of the parent Actors' group, the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, backing it up.

Hoyt S. Haddock, former labor consultant for industrial firms, and the AGVA's newly elected executive secretary, conferred last week with the union's offices in Pittsburgh and Chicago.

In Pittsburgh Mr. Haddock inaugurated a membership drive. Tom Kelly, Philadelphia AGVA head, is local chief. Performers who belonged to the defunct American Federation of Actors and the Entertainers' Federation of America, in that city, will be included.

The city's Central Trades and Labor Council urged all actors in the "variety" field to join AGVA.

The guild is also driving for members in Detroit, Cleveland, Buffalo, Seattle, Montreal, St. Louis, and Kansas City.

In San Francisco, negotiations have been started by the guild for a blanket agreement covering jurisdiction of all entertainers at the 1940 Golden Gate Exposition. The city's AGVA local elected as officers, Lou Ashe, president; Catherine Toomay, vice-president; Will Aubrey, treasurer; and Betty Bowen, recording secretary. Business agents for the 1,700 members are Buddy O'Brien, Les Allen, Max West, and Emile Lowe.

In the New York negotiations with the major circuits, it was decided, last week, to have two committees, one for vaudeville houses, the other for "presentation" houses. Each committee is to negotiate with the guild separately. A third committee may be formed, for the one-night stand field.

Local 306 Wins Fight For Loew, RKO Raises

Wages increases of 15 per cent over a four year period, and back pay totalling about $105,000 were won by approximately 750 members of the New York City projectionists union, Local 306, at the conclusion of arbitration proceedings which lasted several months, on Monday, in New York, with the representatives of the RKO and Loew circuits.

The union had asked an approximately 25 per cent pay boost. Under the contract with the circuits, compulsory arbitration was provided.

The agreement provides pay increases of eight per cent, retroactive to last September; an additional increase of five per cent at the beginning of next year; and another increase of two per cent two years later.

Representing the union during arbitration were Joseph D. Basson, its president, and Bert Popkin, its business agent; for the circuits, C. C. Moscowitz, for Loew's, and Major Leslie Thompson, for RKO. Neutral arbitrator was Professor M. J. Handler, of Columbia.

The union also won an additional week's vacation with pay. It had one week.

Other Union Activities In Field Exhibition

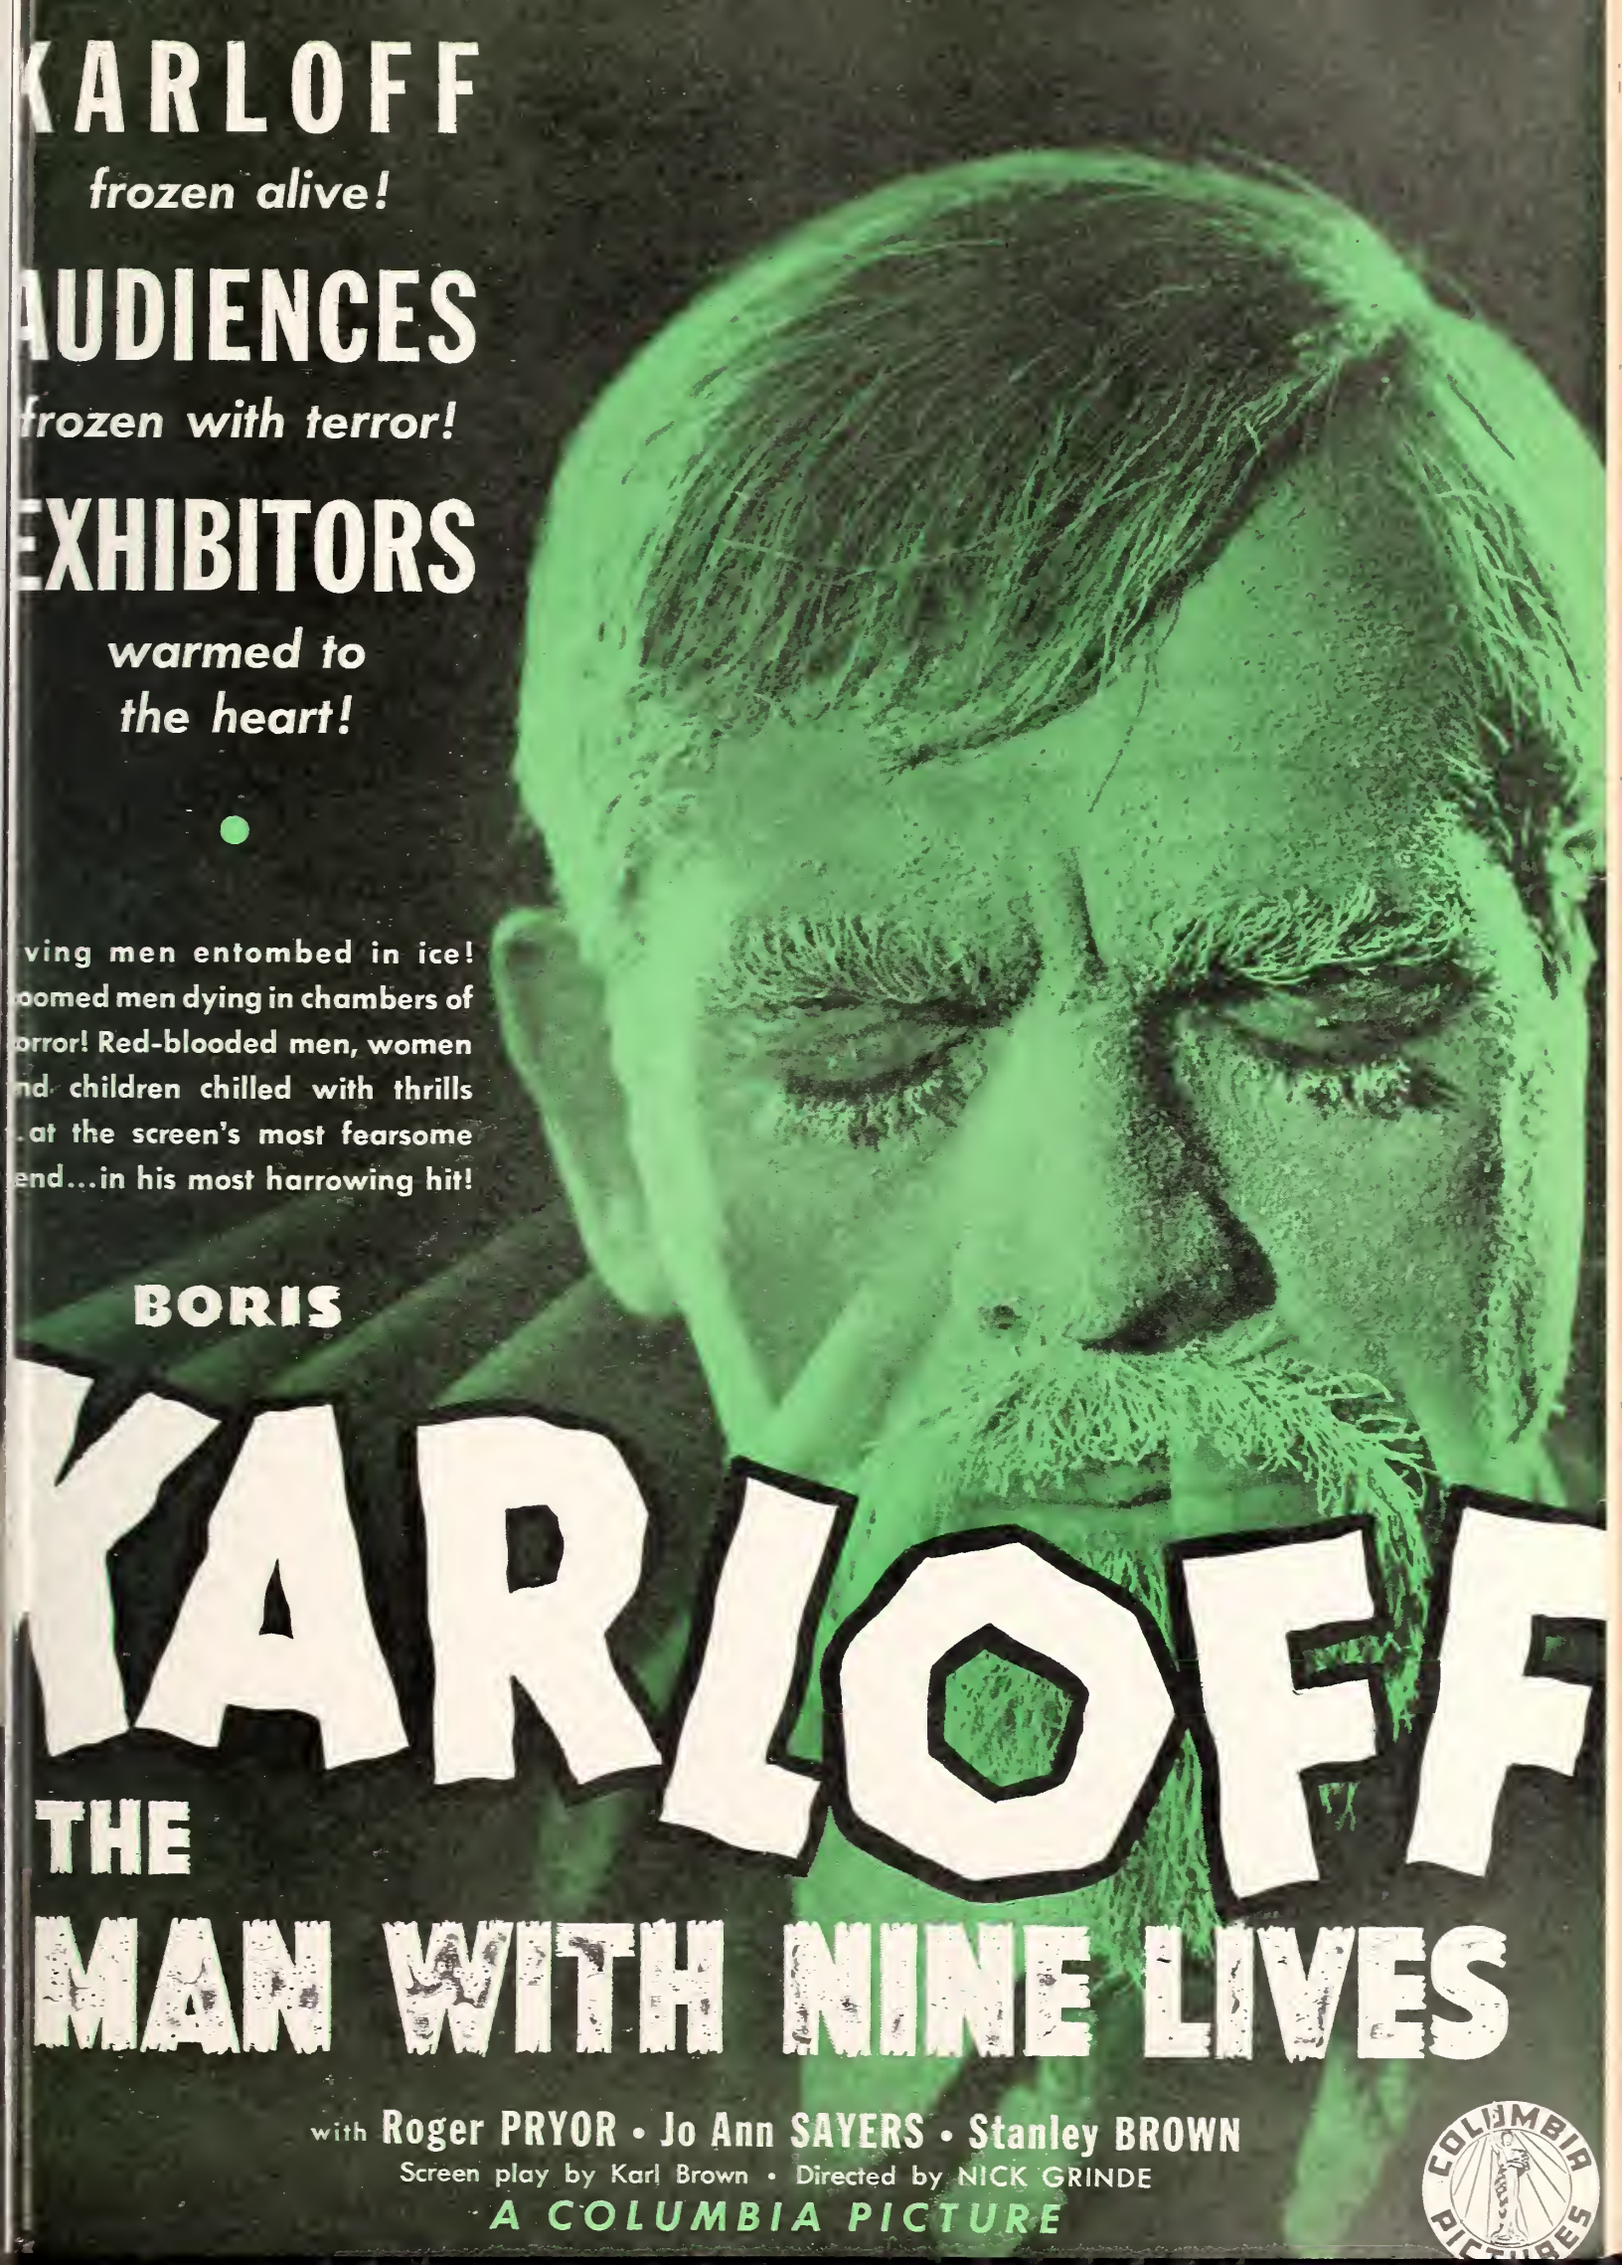
Virtually all of the managers and assistant managers of the Five-Boro Theatre Circuit, of New York, advised the Theatrical Agents, Managers and Treasurers' Union, last Friday, by letter, that they were resigning, from the union.

The letter said that these employees wished to deal with their employer directly. The union officials, on last Friday, replied that the circuit had a closed shop contract with the union; and that, therefore, the employees' decision didn't mean anything.

Seven theatres are affected.

In Richmond, Virginia, the projectionists' union, Local 360, celebrated its 25th anniversary at a banquet, Wednesday, in the Richmond Hotel. Leroy Ford was in charge of arrangements.

In Buffalo, the Shea and Dipson-Basil circuits have signed two year contracts, covering wages and vacations, with the local union of cleaners, porters, and maintenance men.



In Memphis, a Chancery Court enjoined picketing of the Royal Theatre, owned by Walter Parham, because there is no strike at the house.

Plans Exchange Buildings

Paramount plans to build new exchange buildings in St. Louis and Memphis. A one-story building is to be erected at Garrison Avenue and Olive Street in St. Louis. The new Memphis branch will be at Second and Talbot streets. Paramount also is erecting a new exchange in Salt Lake City.

Ed Stein Takes Over

Ed Stein of the Sam Goldwyn office in New York has taken over the publicity duties of Jock Lawrence, who will be on a month's leave of absence to recuperate from a pneumonia attack.

U.S. TAKES FILM INDUSTRY APART STATISTICALLY: 'WORTH 2 BILLIONS'

Department of Commerce Division Explores New Fields of Data of Industry, from Production to Exhibition

The United States Government's continually growing interest in the motion picture business, already pronounced in the manner and method of the conduct of the business, last Thursday reached further into the statistical structure to an extent unprecedented for any outsider.

Into New Fields

Annually the Motion Picture Division of the U. S. Department of Commerce has released to the press a statistical analysis of a sort on the industry. This year it dug into every conceivable kind of statistical conclusion, and although it dispatched the material to newspapers under its departmental form, it conceded that in every instance the figures were obtained from sources within the industry—all sources, however, remaining unnamed. The organized industry, through the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, usually makes such presentations, also the various trade directories.

Says the Government: "The financial worth of the American motion picture industry is conservatively estimated as in excess of $2,000,000,000. One hundred firms are engaged in producing motion pictures in this country, producing an annual average of 500 feature films and 800 shorts, at an estimated aggregate cost of $165,000,000. California accounts for 95 percent of the total production, the remaining five percent being produced in New York. Approximately 28,500 people in the United States are employed in motion picture production, with Hollywood's annual payroll amounting to about $129,000,000. Between 100 and 250 prints of each feature film are required for initial distribution in this country, and 276 separate industries, arts and professions are involved in the making of a single feature picture.

241,000 in 12,000 Theatres

"In exhibition, 241,000 people are employed in 17,000 theatres operating in the United States which have a seating capacity of 10,462,208. Average weekly attendance at these theatres approximates 85,000,000 persons who contribute more than $1,000,000,000 in yearly revenues at the box office. Film rentals paid by these theatres to distributors of motion pictures average over $250,000,000 yearly. For newspaper and magazine advertising the motion picture industry spends over $77,000,000 annually in the United States and an additional $33,000,000 in foreign countries.

"United States productions account for 65 percent of all the motion pictures exhibited in theatres throughout the world and approximately 35 percent of total revenues received by American film producers for their productions is derived from foreign sources."

Other Highlights

Other highlights of the Government's report on the industry's statistical structure follow:

GANDHI IN FILM ON OWN CAREER

Mohandas K. Gandhi will star in a film, "Mahatma Gandhi," according to a United Press dispatch from Ramgarh, India, where Mr. Gandhi last week was attending the Indian National Congress. The film is to be released in India and abroad, and it was reported that it would be flown to Washington for presentation before President Roosevelt.

The film is to be 12,000 feet long in its Indian version and 3,000 feet long in an English version. It is being produced in 21 languages and dialects, according to the dispatch.

It will depict Mr. Gandhi's early career as a lawyer in South Africa, among other things, and his meeting with Charlie Chaplin.

James Cowan Dies on Coast

James R. Cowan, 50, who entered the entertainment business with Klaw & Erlanger in New York and who was formerly vice-president and general manager of Walter Wanger film productions, died March 26th at his Beverly Hills, Cal., home. He was born in Glasgow, Scotland.

Mr. Cowan's career included service with William Morris; representation of American tours of Annette Kellerman and Sir Harry Lauder; experiences in the legitimate theatre; short subject buyer for the Balaban & Katz circuit; later, manager of all the circuit's vaudeville unit shows after Paramount took it over; head of Paramount short subject production at the Long Island studio and then general manager of the studio until 1932; executive position in Jesse Lasky Productions; vice-president and general manager of Walter Wanger Productions from 1935 to 1938.

De Ward Jones, of the Radio City Music Hall publicity department, has written and illustrated a book on photography entitled "Anyone Can Take Good Pictures." The subject is approached from the point of view of the artist. In addition to the professional advice of Barrett Gallagher, whose pictures have appeared in Fortune magazine and other publications, the book is illustrated in part by James Sileo. The book will be published by David Kemp & Co., of New York, April 10th.

Exhibitor Unit Opposes Accessories Deal

The Allied Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western Pennsylvania have unanimously resolved to "go on record as being opposed to the practice of having all film advertising and accessories distributed through one company," Fred J. Herrington, secretary, announced this week after an organizational meeting. The unit is sending copies of the resolution to executives of distributing organizations.

The resolution in part reads: "Whereas, the advertising accessory business is being threatened with a monopolization through announcement from Advertising Accessories, Inc., subsidiary to National Screen Service, that all advertising materials from the various film distributing companies are being, or will be, distributed by this one newly organized company; and whereas, the above named Advertising Accessories, Inc., has announced that it has acquired control of a number of independent poster companies and has created a monopolized condition so that accessory and advertising materials will be unavailable from any other source; and whereas, many exhibitors are of the opinions that if successful in its enterprise, all independent poster companies will be forced out of business . . . resolved, that the AMPTO of Western Pennsylvania, go on record as unanimously opposed."

Grand National's Films Are Sold at Auction

Sale of all rights to films owned by Grand National was awarded on Wednesday to the Mohawk Film Corporation at a meeting of creditors. The corporation had bid $17,500 and the payment of 30 per cent on the gross of the films up to $100,000 and 50 per cent above that figure. Its bid was accepted by the creditors and Referee Peter B. Olney, Jr., over one made by Gustave DeLemas for $27,250. Other bids were made as follows: by Leon Horowitz, $26,000, and by Dino Rissini, $17,000.

Story rights and accessory properties are included in the award. The 16 mm. rights are exempted; they belong to Educational Film Corporation.

Dixie Exchange Expands

The Dixie Film Exchange of Atlanta has moved into a new three-story building at 141 Walton Street, N.W., and has added to its personnel. Ted Toddy is president; S. Hickman, manager, and E. A. Dorsey, Dick Dowell, L. E. Todd and John J. Keninger are in executive and sales capacities. Norman Frankel has been appointed director of publicity and exploitation. Expansion of the exchange is in line with the recent formation in Hollywood of Dixie National Pictures, Inc., to produce pictures with all-Negro casts. Jed Buell is in charge of production.

Associates Dance Set

The annual dinner dance of the Motion Picture Associates will be held at the Hotel Astor November 27th. The date was set early to permit a drive for the sale of tickets and advertising in the annual journal. The organization has decided to hold regular business meetings on the fourth Friday of each month except in June, July and August.

Modern Museum To Show Abstract Film Designs

The Museum of Modern Art will open three new exhibitions to the public April 3rd, including "Designs for Abstract Films," which has been assembled by Iris Barry, Curator of the Museum's Film Library. The designs in the exhibition are by Leopold Survage, Douglass Crockwell, Mary Ellen Bute and Ted Nemeth, Howard Lester, Horace Pierce.

The other exhibitions will be "Traveling Exhibitions of Contemporary American Art," arranged by the Museum in collaboration with the WPA, and "The Work of Sharaku," the 18th century Japanese print maker.

Stubbins, Hulling Absorb Olmstead Monogram Interest

The interest held by Ray Olmstead in Monogram Pacific coast franchise has been absorbed by Howard Stubbins and Mel Hulling. Mr. Stubbins becomes president of Monogram's west coast franchise. The deal includes four exchanges, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and Seattle.

Mr. Stubbins and Mr. Olmstead have been partners in the Monogram exchange for several years. Mr. Olmstead is retiring to take an active interest in a circuit of Arizona theatres with which he is affiliated.

Marty Solomon has been appointed manager of the Los Angeles exchange.

RKO PLANS 61-66, RECORD NUMBER; 30 FROM UA TO COST 29 MILLIONS

Helprin Is Production Assistant in New Korda American Company; Franklin - Blank Productions Start

RKO Radio will be committed to from 61 to 66 features for the 1940-41 season, the greatest number in its history. The company this season promised 52 features and six westerns.

New season's product plans of United Artists, to include 30 features on a gross budget of $29,000,000, are among the most definite to be disclosed for 1940-41 to date. They were reported last weekend by Murray Silverstone, chief UA executive, on his return to New York from six weeks in Hollywood in conference with the various producers on the UA roster.

The usual pre-seasonal swelling of independent production ranks this week brought four more to the Hollywood fold; Harold B. Franklin started on "The Villain Still Pursued Her"; Harry Webb made ready for six features with Rin Tin Tin, Jr.; Times Square Productions started, and Sigmund Neufeld Productions were formed to take over the defunct Producers Pictures Corporation.

RKO Plans Set

Harry Edington, in charge of RKO production; J. J. Nolan, studio executive; Lee Marcus, producer; S. Barret McCormick, advertising and pubicity director; Perry Lieber, studio publicity manager, and other production executives concluded the RKO program planning Thursday in Hollywood. RKO's sales convention will be held in New York late in May.

Twenty of the new season features will be made by outside producers. Of the remainder 20 will be "top budget" productions; 20 will be made by the Lee Marcus "program picture" unit and six will be George O'Brien westerns.

Among the "top budgets" will be two Carole Lombards, two Charles Laughtons, four Ginger Rogers, two Maureen O'Haras and two each to be directed and produced by Gregory LaCava, Leo McCarey and David Butler.

Pictures from the "outside" will be two from Lee Garmes' Academy Productions, three "Dr-Christian" films from Stephens-Lang, two in Cosmocolor from Franklyn Warner's Fine Arts Productions, one "Lum and Abner" feature with options for two more from the Coslow-Votion Vocal Productions, two from Orson Welles, two from Herbert Wilcox, one or two from Harold Lloyd, three or four from the Gene Towne-Graham Baker The Play's the Thing Productions, at least one from Max Gordon-Harry Goetz, an undetermined number from Boris Morros, and an undetermined number from Harold Franklin, including "The Villain Still Pursued Her."

United Artists' Plans

United Artists will have 30 releases for the 1940-41 season. They will be made by 14 producers at a cost of $29,000,000, and Charles Chaplin's "The Great Dictator" will be the first release.

The company, and other producers, must rely on the domestic market for more revenue, and the exhibitor must cooperate, Mr. Silverstone emphasized.

On the new UA schedule, Mr. Silverstone said, there will be two David O. Selznick pictures, and possibly a John Stahl for James Roosevelt's Globe Productions.

The 30 pictures will be an increase of four to five over the current season.

Mr. Silverstone noted 11 more pictures to be released by UA during the current season, among them "The Westerner," from Samuel Goldwyn. He called this "probably Goldwyn's finest production."

Other spring releases will be "House Across the Bay," "My Son, My Son," "Rebecca," "1,000,000 B.C.," "Over the Moon," "Our Town," "Turn-about," and "South of Pago Pago."

Korda's First Two in United States

Morris Helprin is Alexander Korda's production assistant in a new American production company to make two pictures here, Mr. Korda announced in New York last week before leaving for the Coast. Mr. Helprin for four years has been American representative for the British producer.

Mr. Korda will make plans for the new American pictures. He will go later, to England, to make two there.

Final sequences of "The Thief of Bagdad," on UA's new season schedule, were being made in Hollywood this week. The picture was made mostly in England.

Emanuel Silverstone, who also has been with Korda for a long time as an American representative, will help organize the American production unit. He remains Korda distribution chief.

Franklin-Blank Starts

The Franklin-Blank Productions, of Hollywood, are "shooting" "The Villain Still Pursued Her," which stars Anita Louise, Hugh Herbert, Buster Keaton, Richard Cromwell, Alan Mowbray, and Margaret Hamilton, and the director of which is Eddie Cline. Harold B. Franklin, former financial director of the "Motion Pictures Are Your Best Entertainment" drive, is a principal of the producing company.

Webb Signs Dog

Harry Webb, who has produced, for Metropolitan Pictures, the last of a series of eight pictures with Bob Steele, "Pinto Canyon," last week signed Rin Tin Tin, Jr., on five year contract for six pictures per year.

Form Times Square Productions

James Moore, former talent director for RKO, and Max Kratz, and Walter O. Heinz have formed Times Square Productions, in Hollywood, for a series of 12 features, possibly to be released through a major. The company has bought rights to the "First Nighter" radio program.

CALLS GENERATION "BALCONY CONSCIOUS"

Two-price houses, a variance of as much as 15 cents or 20 cents between seats on the main floor and in the balcony, will bring about an alarming situation, believes Bob Livingston of the Capitol, Lincoln, Neb.

"This generation is getting so balcony conscious," he said, "most of them don't know what it's like not to look down at the screen. It's taking the show business back to the old days of the upstairs opera house."

Loew-Lewin at Universal

The newly organized David Loew-Albert Lewin producing unit,, will make its first picture "Flotsam" at the Universal Studios, it was learned late last week. The objective is to utilize the German street sets constructed for Universal's "The Road Back," because the Loew-Lewin picture has a German locale.

The film is scheduled to begin work in early July. The two producers were to establish offices on the "U" lot this week.

United Artists will release the picture.

Monogram on Product

President W. Ray Johnston of Monogram Pictures indicated on Monday that there would be small, if any, change in the annual Monogram lineup. The present season was announced at 30 features and 16 westerns. The number of pictures Monogram will produce in the new season is subject to a poll of franchise holders, which will be completed this week.

Sears' Ad Sales Drive

From March 31st to April 6th, will be the "Sears Ad Sales Week" for the Warner Brothers general sales manager and vice-president, Gradwell L. Sears.

There has been a shift at the Warner shorts subject department. Ira Genet becomes aide to Gordon Hollingshead, in charge of shorts production; Charles Tedford has been shifted to the feature department; Owen Crump, associated with the studio for about one year as a shorts writer, will handle stories for this department, and also work on shorts scripts.

RKO in Sales Drive

The RKO foreign department has begun a "Phil Reisman Treasure Chest Contest," based on billings among 27 contestants over the world. The contest runs 15 weeks.

Principals in charge of the various territories competing in the drive honoring the general manager of the foreign department, are: Ralph Hanbury, United Kingdom; Ralph R. Doyle, Australia and New Zealand; Reginald Armour, Belgium, Bohemia-Moravia, Egypt, France, Holland, Portugal, Rumania, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland; Leon Britton, China, Dutch East Indies, India, Japan, Philippines, Straits Settlements; Nat Liebeskind, Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Peru; Gus Schaefer, Cuba, Mexico, Panama, Puerto Rico, Trinidad.

Andy Smith, the company's eastern sales manager, still led this week in the "Smith Month" competition among field units. The Calgary exchange, headed by H. F. Taylor, topped all branches in the standing.

RKO is reported negotiating with Cary Grant and Irene Dunne for their appearance in a one-team picture annually, for the next three years.

Twentieth Century-Fox Convention Near

Twentieth Century-Fox executives are converging on the East and Middle West, in preparation for the company's annual sales convention, on April 12th-14th, in Chicago.

Sidney Kent, president, is scheduled to return soon from his Florida vacation. Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production, is expected in New York in early April, and later, at the convention. Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board, also may attend. Herman Wobber, general sales manager, who is now on the Coast, is expected to go from there, directly, to the convention. He will preside. Kent and Zanuck will speak.

Orders Hearing On Educational

The Securities and Exchange Commission on Monday ordered a public hearing to determine whether it should suspend for a 12-month period or withdraw the registration statement of Educational Pictures, Inc., covering its 60-cent dividend cumulative preferred stock, $5 par value, and $1 par value common, for failure to comply with certain sections of the securities exchange act of 1934.

The company's stocks are registered on the Chicago Board of Trade, a national securities exchange. The hearing will be held on April 23rd in the commission's New York office.

The order charges that Educational Pictures has failed to file its annual report on form 10-K for the fiscal year ended June 24, 1939.

At a creditors' meeting of Educational Films Corporation in New York last week Referee John E. Joyce was told that the sole asset of the company was ownership of 16 mm. rights to 1,000 films in the possession of the trustee of Grand National. Grand National, which owns the 35 mm. rights to these films, expects to receive $15,000 for their use in the next few years, it was said.

Educational Pictures, the parent company, will file a claim for $97,985 against Educational Films for a loan extended, James A. Davidson, trustee of the parent company, said.

Accessories Office Moving

Advertising Accessories' office in Kansas City is being moved from 110 West 18th Street to 1710 Wyandotte Street on film row. Homer L. Blackwell, branch manager, will consolidate the old Independent Poster Exchange, the Premier Advertising Company, the poster departments of RKO Radio and Paramount under one roof.

Arthur Menken Injured

Arthur Menken, newsreel cameraman for Paramount in Europe, is in a hospital in Stockholm with a fractured leg received while covering the Russo-Finnish war. Mr. Menken, a New Yorker, went to Europe for Paramount shortly after the war started.

Lee Goldberg in Fine Arts Deal

Lee Goldberg, operating the Big Feature Rights exchange, in Cincinnati, has taken a five-year franchise for distribution of Fine Arts product in Ohio, Indiana, West Virginia and Kentucky.

Bergen Forming Company

Edgar Bergen is said to be forming a company to handle both his screen and contemplated stage activities. He is reported considering a stage production, personal appearances this summer and a motion picture later in the year.

Form Screen Media

Screen Media, Inc., has been chartered in Columbus, Ohio, to engage in screen advertising. H. I. Webster is president, Dan W. Krug, vice-president, and Abbie Ghent, secretary.

SMPE GETTING SET FOR ATLANTIC CITY APRIL 22

36 Speakers Already Scheduled for Spring Meeting; Television a Topic for First Day

Thirty-six motion picture technicians, laboratory and manufacturing representatives are already scheduled to bring some of the industry's equipment problems on old and new processes to this year's spring meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, at Haddon Hall, Atlantic City, April 22nd to 25th.

The subjects will embrace production, distribution and exhibition practice.

Television a First-Day Topic

Convention plans and programs are being formulated by E. A. Williford, the Society's president; W. C. Kunzmann, convention vice-president; J. I. Crabtree, editorial vice-president; and Sylvan Harris, chairman of the papers committee.

The first day's session will be highlighted by an address on "The General Outlook for Television" by Thomas F. Joyce, vice-president of RCA Manufacturing Company, at an informal get-together luncheon. First order of business will be a general and business session preceding the luncheon. Atlantic City's mayor will be on hand to meet the delegates.

On Wednesday, April 24, there will be held the 46th semi-annual banquet and dance of the Society, in the Rutland Room of Haddon Hall.

Technical sessions will be held each day from 10 A.M. to 6 P.M. with the exception of Wednesday afternoon, which will be left open for recreation. Monday evening's session will be devoted to a lecture on the subject of lighting by Dr. Matthew Luckiesh, of General Electric Company, Cleveland.

Harry Blumberg, of Philadelphia, is chairman of the local arrangements committee. H. Griffin, member of the board, is in charge of projection facilities. Julius Haber, chairman of the publicity committee, will handle publicity arrangements.

Sound Directors East

Major studio sound directors will be guests of Electrical Research Products, Inc., on a trip to New York for a week's study of recent and pending improvements in sound film recording and reproducing, including demonstrations of equipment.

The party will attend the first demonstration of stereophonic sound reproduction by Bell Telephone Laboratories at Carnegie Hall April 9th. Visit to the Western Electric manufacturing plant at Kearny, N. J., and other points of technical interest are also scheduled.

Trip is in line with the policy of ERPI in establishing closer relationship between Bell Laboratories and its own research engineers and the studio licensees of Western Electric sound recording.

Clifford W. Smith, Hollywood vice president of ERPI, will be in charge of the trip. Others in the party will be Douglas Shearer, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Elmer Raguse, Hal Roach; E. H. Hansen, Twentieth Century-Fox; Loren L. Ryder, Paramount; John Livadary, Columbia; Thomas Moulton, Samuel Goldwyn; Bernard Brown, Universal; Jack Whitney, General Service Studios; K. F. Morgan, Commercial Manager of ERPI.

ERPI Engineer Lectures

J. P. Maxfield, director of commercial engineering of Electrical Research Products, led a two-day colloquium at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology Monday and Tuesday. He discussed general auditorium acoustics and special modifications required by modern studio practice in recording and reproducing sound motion pictures and in radio broadcasting.

BRITISH SHORT FILM PRODUCER SEEKS PROTECTION UNDER QUOTA

CEA in Recent Trade Board Memorandum Takes Issue with the Board Over the American Agreement

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

With the trade year getting firmly into its wartime stride, with exhibitors fighting the economic battle of adjustment and survival, with producers demanding legislative protection and hoping for State finance, with labor interests seeking wage increases and distributors faced with the suspicious gazes of all three, yet another plaintive voice has been added to the chorus of trade discontents. It is the voice, discordant at times, but harmonious at others, of the British short film producer. It calls, as do so many of its fellows, for protection.

Protection Sought

Protection is sought by British shorts producers against the operations of the promised Quota laws, against, too, the Government's own film sponsoring plans, protection no less against one another. The general discontent with present conditions matured itself in late February into the formation by the Films Council of a Committee to explore the whole British shorts situation, and so adjust it as to make the survival of the producer practicable.

The Committee which was formed as a result not only of intense pressure on the part of the production interests, but also as a result of a growing conviction among non trade members of the Council that the whole situation merited close investigation, has already set about its work. Its prime objectives would seem to be arbitrating on the vexed question of whether British Quota shorts should or should not have a labor cost stipulation, and more loosely considering means of improving and regularizing the market conditions under which they are distributed.

British short film producers are split into two groups. One of these—the Association of Short Film Producers, an organization representing the makers of the more serious and documentary brand of short is very firmly in favor of a labor cost clause for British shorts. The other, the British Short Film Makers Society, who claim to represent eighty per cent of those whose films are shown in British cinemas, are primarily and deliberately opposed, claiming they can make films and get releases without any such stipulations.

There is, however, one front upon which both these parties are at present united and solid. They are nervous about the Government's sponsorship of propaganda films and the terms under which they are distributed, want assurance that these films will not be allowed to count for quota.

CEA Memo Notes

The Cinematograph Exhibitors Association in its recent memo to Sir Andrew Duncan, president of the Board of Trade, stressed a steady and increasing production. It was pointed out that the association does not see the need for much alteration of the present Cinematograph Films Act for there are "sufficient safeguards to take care of any situation of real difficulty that might overtake importers of foreign films. The CEA deplores any suggestions that footage should cease to be the basis of computing renters quota, and should the method substituted fail to yield a sufficient number of British films we shall be obliged, as soon as we know, to ask that this method of assessing exhibitors' quota be also abandoned."

CEA REGRETS AN AMERICAN TENDENCY

From the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association to the British Board of Trade: "This association also regrets very much the tendency of Americans always to depict the production or acquisition of British films as a process in which money must inevitably be lost. They have themselves furnished brilliant examples of British production proving the contrary."

The main points of the memo, which were reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD, page 46, issue of March 16th, were: A demand that the starting level of exhibitor quota be not higher than 10 per cent; that the principle of investment in a cooperative production scheme should not debar the investor from blind-booking films; that acquisition of British cinemas be limited to Britishers; that a Credit Bank is welcomed, but comment is reserved pending details; that the estimate of 60 films in the first year of any new legislation is regarded as "too sanguine," 40 is more to be counted upon, and that the association doubts the Board of Trade would accept as adequate the suggested 14 films a year from the seven majors.

Wanted Better Agreement

The CEA, in its memo, calls itself "extremely disappointed to find no mention made by the president of the Board of Trade in his communication to Sir Frederick Whyte (chairman of the Films Council) of November 22, 1939 of certain points which we were led to believe would be included. (The communication referred to concerned Oliver Stanley's definition of the Government's policy concerning withdrawal of American profits. The statement indicated that the 50 per cent remittance regulations would be effective for one year from November 1, 1939, to October 31, 1940.) Mr. Stanley at that time was president of the Board of Trade.

"With a full knowledge of all his difficulties (Sir Frederick Whyte) we wish to place on record our considered opinion that having regard to the relatively small financial restriction to which he was subjecting the Americans, a much better agreement could have been negotiated. We trust that when another agreement is being discussed that greater firmness will be displayed by the Board of Trade and that the resulting document will afford greater protection to British film interests.

"The association expresses the deepest regret that the agreement with the Amrican renters does not contain any undertaking on their part to refrain from using any of the "Frozen" balance in the acquisition of British cinemas. It seems so obvious an outlet for these funds that we are surprised that it has been omitted. The association would strongly press that the new legislation should expressly forbid the acquisition or control of British cinemas being allowed to any except British subjects."

Accompanying the CEA memo to the Board of Trade was an analysis of registrations and requirements of production under the Quota Act, as follows:

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

AMAZING MR. WILLIAMS, THE: Melvyn Douglas, Joan Blondell—Superior comedy feature. Should please 100% anywhere. Casting was perfect. Story good with plenty of good clean fun all the way. Drew average in conjunction with "Allegheny Uprising." Played March 1-2.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BLONDIE ON A BUDGET: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms—Blondie series liked by those who come in to see them.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

BLONDIE ON A BUDGET: Penny Singleton, Arthur Lake, Larry Simms, Rita Hayworth—Another family picture in the Blondie series and just as good as the rest, with a little "Ooomph" in the personable person of Rita Hayworth to add a little more adult appeal. Business above average against fairly strong competition. "Blondie" double billed with Zane Grey's "Knights of the Range." Sunday-Monday date, breaking a single policy. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 10-11.—J. H. Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

HIS GIRL FRIDAY: Cary Grant, Rosalind Russuell, Ralph Bellamy—Fast, gay and exciting. Pleased everyone.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MUSIC IN MY HEART: Tony Martin, Rita Hayworth, Edith Fellows—Here is talent that if it had not been wasted on this story may go some place. Martin is good but the story is terrible. Running time, 72 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

THUNDERING WEST: Cbarles Starrett, Iris Meredith, Sons of the Pioneers—Lacks the oomph that William Boyd or Autry has for our situation. He seems to satisfy, but no raves from our natives.—Harland Rankin, Plaze Thatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

First National

DAUGHTERS COURAGEOUS: Lane Sisters, Gale page, John Garfield, Fay Bainter, Claude Rains, Jeffrey Lynn, Frank McHugh, Dick Foran, May Robson—This is a very nice picture. Claude Rains and John Garfield did exceptionally well. Business not so good because of weather. Running time, 107 minutes. Played February 24-25.—E. W. Malone, Cozy Theatre, Colfax, Wis. Rural patronage.

DR. EHRLICH'S MAGIC BULLET: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Gordon, Otto Kruger, Donald Crisp—A production everyone should see. Congratulations are due to everyone who had a band in this picture. Robinson amazingly good.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

DUST BE MY DESTINY: John Garfield, Priscilla Lane—A very good picture. Garfield and Lane make a great pair. Business good. Running time, 92 minutes. Played March 2-3.—E. W. Malone, Cozy Theatre, Colfax, Wis. Rural patronage.

FIGHTING 69TH: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, Geoerge Brent, Jeffrey Lynn, Alan Hale, Dennis Morgan—Swell show to good business in spite of the fact our opposition was the first springlike Sunday. Real punch in this one. Running time, 88 minutes. Played March 3-4.—J. H. Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, John Garfield, Eddie Albert, Claude Rains, Jeffrey Lynn, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—Good picture but did not draw any patrons in. Do not know why. —Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, John Garfield, Eddie Albert, Claude Rains, Jeffrey Lynn, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—Some of the ladies liked this one but most of the men went to see "Thunder Afloat" at the other theatre. I would say this is not a small town picture and I hope it is the last with this cast and story. Running time, 111 minutes. Played March 10-11.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

RETURN OF DR. X, THE: Wayne Morris, Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane, Lya Lys—Good thriller. Lots of suspense and surprise as well as a nice cast. Played it on a double bill and they all went out talking about it. If they like to be scared, this will do it. Running time, 63 minutes. Played February 13-15.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

SMASHING THE MONEY RING: Ronald Reagan, Margot Stevenson—Another of a series of good action pictures. Some good and different prison shots and an interesting story that keeps moving. Running time, 58 minutes. Played February 20-22.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

SMASHING THE MONEY RING: Ronald Reagan, Eddie Foy, Jr., Margot Stevenson—I enjoyed this picture very much and so did my patrons, what few I had. I don't see why they don't put Eddie Foy in more. He is a good comedian. Running time, 57 minutes. Played February 28-29.—E. W. Malone, Cozy Theatre, Colfax, Wis. Rural patronage.

WE ARE NOT ALONE: Paul Muni, Jane Bryan, Flora Robson, Una O'Connor—Very nice picture with sad ending which audiences do not like.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANOTHER THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Virginia Grey, Ruth Hussey—The delay in playing this one was sure costly, or else it had no draw at all for us. Business very poor at any rate. Picture quite good, though. Played February 25-26.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ANOTHER THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Virginia Grey, Ruth Hussey—Very smartly paced but did not do as well as predecessors. Running time, 102 minutes. Played March 10-12.—L. Woody, Jr., Palace Theatre, Golden City, Mo. Very small town and rural patronage.

BAD LITTLE ANGEL: Virginia Weidler, Gene Reynolds—A honey of a picture. Has a slight religious touch but it pleases and sends them out with tears in their eyes. Any time you can make them cry, it's a good show. Running time, 72 minutes. Played February 27-29.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

BALALAIKA: Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Charles Ruggles, Frank Morgan—Nice picture. Nelson Eddy pleased everyone. Compliments were lukewarm on Ilona Massey. Don't count too heavily, Metro, on her drawing power. It is yet to be proven. Jeanette MacDonald was missed and the fans told us so. Played March 6-7.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BLACKMAIL: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Hussey —A very good picture. Lots of action, just what my public likes, but it failed to draw at the box office. I can't figure what it was; the weather was good. Maybe my public was getting tired of these.—Running time, 81 minutes. Played, March 7-8.—E. W. Malone, Cozy Theatre, Colfax, Wis. Rural patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1940: Fred Astaire, Eleanor Powell, George Murphy—Very good musical comedy. Astaire and Powell perfect and Mr. Murphy does a very good job, too.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1940: Eleanor Powell, Fred Astaire, George Murphy—This picture not so good. Below all other Broadway Melodies. Either Powell hurts Astaire or vice versa. Business off 50%. Running time, 100 minutes. Played February 11-13.—Fred Bailey, Virginia Theatre, Hazard, Ky. General patronage.

CONGO MAISIE: Ann Sothern, John Carroll, Rita Johnson—Pleased all. Miss Sothern is getting to be quite a favorite.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

CONGO MAISIE: Ann Sothern, John Carroll, Rita Johnson—Good picture; fair business. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 13-14.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

EARL OF CHICAGO: Robert Montgomery, Edward Arnold, Reginald Owen—This is the first piece of MGM product in years that we would advise cancelling. Well, they all make mistakes and this is one of them. Just nothing to run. Running time, 85 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

EARL OF CHICAGO: Robert Montgomery, Edward Arnold, Reginald Owen—Many unfavorable comments on this picture. Poor part for Montgomery.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

EARL OF CHICAGO: Robert Montgomery, Edward Arnold, Reginald—The picture failed to please and business was only fair. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 12.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

EARL OF CHICAGO: Robert Montgomery, Edward Arnold, Reginald Owen—Pass this one up if possible. No drawing power. Played March 10-11.—H. L. Capers, New Deal Theatre, Gorman, Texas. Rural patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Ann Sothern, Franchot Tone—Fast little fun picture. Must be double billed but it steals the show. There is action, comedy, near tragedy and plenty of interesting situations. They really liked this one. Played with "Bad Little Angel" and made a fine double bill. Running time, 72 minutes. Played February 27-29.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

HENRY GOES ARIZONA: Frank Morgan, Virginia Weidler—Very poor program picture. Morgan does the best he can with this role but it is no role for him. The honors go to Virginia Weidler in this picture.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

I TAKE THIS WOMAN: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr—Interesting picture. Spencer Tracy very good but Hedy Lamarr no actress.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

I TAKE THIS WOMAN: Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr—Fine picture. Hedy Lamarr very beautiful. No praise needed for Tracy. He is always good here. Played March 7-8.—H. L. Capers, New Deal Theatre, Gorman, Texas. Rural patronage.

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecelia Parker—Swell show which failed to draw. First Rooney to miss here. I bope it isn't the skids, as this series is the best in the business.—Alvin Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

MAN FROM DAKOTA: Wallace Beery, Dolores Del Rio, John Howard—Just fair. Very slow moving. Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MAN FROM DAKOTA: Wallace Beery, Dolores Del Rio, John Howard—This was another good one from Metro. Don't know what we would do without them. All comments were good. For some reason business just was average for "Special" night. Believe the idea of being a war picture hurt some. Running time, 74 minutes. Played March 6-7.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire—Very good. Business fair. Played February 28-29.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas—Strictly a class comedy little more than average to regular customers. Should be just a programmer.—

Alvin Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

NORTHWEST PASSAGE: Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan—Very, very fine picture. Splendid cast. Drew more than any picture we have had in our theatre in the winter in 20 years.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

NORTHWEST PASSAGE: Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan—This is real entertainment and of the kind that does not come along often. This will please all classes, both young and old. Tracy was never better and Young was also good. Best midweek business in several months. Running time, 126 minutes. Played March 13-14.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

NORTHWEST PASSAGE: Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan—Metro has something here. This is tops in entertainment and BO. When Academy Awards are offered, Tracy and Brennan should be on receiving end. Running time, 126 minutes. Played February 25-27.—Fred Bailey, Virginia Theatre, Hazard, Ky. General patronage.

SECRET OF DR. KILDARE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day, Helen Gilbert—Good picture if you can get the people to come and see it. We couldn't. I think this is the best of this series to date and I believe it would have stood a Sunday playdate, but was afraid of it because the first two did not stand up on a Sunday date. Personally thought this was a very good piece of entertainment but Mr. and Mrs. John Public passed it up. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 10.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan—Pleased the majority. Will not go with the action fans.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

STRANGE CARGO: Joan Crawford, Clark Gable, Ian Hunter, Peter Lorre—Interesting drama.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

STRANGE CARGO: Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, Ian Hunter, Peter Lorre—Gable and Crawford get good support in this picture. Not the type for ladies and when they do not care for a picture you do not get big grosses. Running time, 113 minutes. Played March 3-5.—Fred Bailey, Virginia Theatre, Hazard, Ky. General patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey—They just don't come any better. Good in nearly any spot, but weekend should go best. Beery's type of humer and action make the picture and it is just what the fans want to see him in. Running time, 95 minutes. Played March 8-10.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

THUNDER AFLOAT: Wallace Beery, Chester Morris, Virginia Grey—Wallace Beery is always good and draws well here, but due to bad weather didn't make expenses. Thought this picture a little below Beery average. Played February 2-3.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Rural and small town patronage.

Paramount

ALL WOMEN HAVE SECRETS: Jean Cagney, Joseph Allen, Virginia Dale—Fine little family type film with a cast of Paramount's Golden Circle starlets, all of whom turn in nice performances. Running time, 74 minutes. Played February 22.—J. H. Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

EMERGENCY SQUAD: William Henry, Robert Paige, Louise Campbell—No business. No cast names to draw 'em in. Fair story plot that just gets by as entertainment. Running time very short, about 55 minutes at best.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GERONIMO: Preston Foster, Ellen Drew, Andy Devine, Ralph Morgan—Real good. Lots of action and yet some good serious stuff as well. Ralph Morgan does a perfect job. Andy Devine also extra good. Played March 8-9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GERONIMO: Preston Foster, Ellen Drew, Andy Devine—Interesting and fast moving. Well acted. Pleased everyone.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GERONIMO: Preston Foster, Andy Devine, Ellen Drew—Good show but lack of star value made it just another horse opera.—Alvin Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

GREAT VICTOR HERBERT: Allan Jones, Mary Martin, Walter Connolly—We were forced to accept a too high allocation of rental on this picture. We knew it wasn't the type for our town and requested a reallocation but with no success. "New York's orders," they said. Bad business resulted and the extra rental only aggravated our feeling about the engagement. New York would profit more by maintaining an exhibitors' good will than by cramming things he knows aren't good for him down his throat. Certainly these are shortsighted tactics on any count. Played March 13-14.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

GREAT VICTOR HERBERT: Allan Jones, Mary Martin, Victor Herbert—Very, very good. Beautiful music, fine singing by Jones and Miss Martin. Whole cast excellent.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GREAT VICTOR HERBERT: Allan Jones, Mary Martin, Walter Connolly—A good feature that did not do any extra business. Some of the patrons did not like it. The music is very pleasing but it has more music than story in some parts of the picture. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 4-6.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Color Cartoon Feature—Fair. Just a long cartoon. Will draw the youngsters in but not the adults.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Max Fleischer's Color Cartoon Feature—Feature length cartoon in color which didn't go above average Sunday-Monday business except for school tieup, which helped. Suffers somewhat naturally by comparison with Disney's first, but is in itself a very satisfactory job. Color is splendid, songs are already hits and the movements of the characters considerably more smooth than anything yet produced. Running time, 76 minutes. Played February 18-19.—J. H. Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

HONEYMOON IN BALI: Fred MacMurray, Madeline Carroll, Carolyn Lee—Swell show if you can get anyone to see it. A little girl steals the honors. —Alvin Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

JAMAICA INN: Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Emlyn Williams, Leslie Banks—Good action and suspense with fine acting. It had me sitting one the edge of the rewinder bench and the audience on the edge of their seats. However, the crowd was quite slim and the English accent was really quite bad in this one. They ought to put translated American titles on some of these English imports. Running time, 99 minutes. Played March 7.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y.—Small college town and rural patronage.

KNIGHTS OF THE RANGE: Russell Hayden, Jean Parker—Double billed with "Blondie on a Budget." Produced by Harry Sherman for Paramount with Jean Parker and Russell Hayden of the Cassidy films in starring roles. Sunday-Monday date, breaking a single policy.—J. H. Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

LIGHT THAT FAILED, THE: Ronald Colman, Walter Huston, Ida Lupino, Muriel Angelus—Very good. Colman as usual perfect.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

REMEMBER THE NIGHT: Barbara Stanwyck, Fred MacMurray, Beulah Bondi, Elizabeth Patterson —Very well received and pleased.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

REMEMBER THE NIGHT: Fred MacMurray, Barbara Stanwyck, Beulah Bondi, Elizabeth Patterson—Fine, well rounded love story with a unique twist that failed to draw for us on a Sunday. Just average business but those who saw it liked it very much. Running time, 93 minutes. Played February 25-26.—J. H. Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

SANTA FE MARSHAL: William Boyd, Russell Hayden—A good Hopalong Cassidy feature that pleased. Running time, 68 minutes. Played March 14-16.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

SANTA FE MARSHAL: William Boyd, Russell Hayden—We've just quit calling him William Boyd around these parts, neighbor. To banker and bartender, clerk and cobbler, he's Hopalong, and what they want to know is "When is your next Hoppy picture?" "Santa Fe Marshal" is the best yet and the photography is so beautiful that sometimes it steals slightly from the story taking place. Definitely one of the best action films in some time. Running time, 64 minutes. Played February 23-24.—J. H. Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

SEVENTEEN: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field—A fine juvenile film.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SIDEWALKS OF LONDON: Charles Laughton, Vivien Leigh—Lots of unfavorable comments from our patrons on this picture and we agreed with them.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General Patronage.

Republic

COLORADO SUNSET: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnett, June Storey, Buster Crabbe—One of the best Autrys. Ran this one old to turnaway business. Played March 9.—H. L. Capers, New Deal Theatre, Gorman, Texas. Rural patronage.

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Weaver Brothers and Elviry, Roy Rogers—Just what the buckwheat town cry for. SRO. Running time, 69 minutes. Played March 14-16.—L. Woody, Jr., Palace Theatre, Golden City, Mo. Very small town and rural patronage.

ROVIN' TUMBLEWEEDS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Carlisle—Autry is sure tops here. He gets more popular with every picture and he has what it takes to be popular. Business good as usual. Running time, 62 minutes. Played March 13-14.—E. W. Malone, Cozy Theatre, Colfax, Wis. Rural patronage.

SAGA OF DEATH VALLEY: Roy Rogers, George Hayes—Doubled with "Oh, Johnny, How You Can Love" (Universal). Business more than we could handle both nights.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

STREET OF MISSING MEN: Charles Bickford, Harry Carey—Just an average program feature played on the weak end of a double bill. Running time, 6 minutes. Played March 14-16.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

WOLF OF NEW YORK: Edmund Lowe, Rose Hobart—Good picture; fair business. Picture was better than I expected. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 15-16.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

RKO Radio

ALLEGHENY UPRISING: John Wayne, Claire Trevor, Brian Donlevy, George Sanders—Satisfactory or slightly better. Interesting characters make the most of a simple plot. Average intake. Coupled with "The Amazing Mr. Williams" in co-feature program. Played March 1-2.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

ALLEGHENY UPRISING: John Wayne, Claire Trevor, Brian Donlevy, George Sanders—This could have been much better, as they had the outline of a fair story. Looks like they got in a hurry and they sure missed their goal. With a good cast it is a shame to run them into the ground on one like this. Outdoor pictures go big here, but after the first night it dropped off to nothing. Running time, 81 minutes. Played February 6-9.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

ESCAPE TO PARADISE: Bobby Breen, Kent Taylor—Even being very liberal minded we can see only enough story material in this dull picture for one two-reel short. None of Bobby's songs are outstanding, though he does them all well. This falls very flat. Played March 15-16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME: Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Thomas Mitchell, Basil Rathbone, Walter Hampden —Very good picture. Good business. Maureen O'Hara is truly attractive, and played her role nicely. Played March 3-4.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

THAT'S RIGHT, YOU'RE WRONG: Kay Kyser and His Orchestra, Adolphe Menjou, May Robson, Edward Everett Horton, Lucille Ball—This is by far the best band picture I have ever run. Lots of comedy, surprisingly good acting for a musician and a novel plot all help to add their share to a typical Kyser program at the end. I thought this was a natural for the college students. Maybe it was but too much so. They couldn't wait to see it here. They had all seen it before. I was very disappointed in the receipts, which were low the first night and practically missing the second night. I don't pan a picture just because the intake was small. I usually consider a financial lemon to be my own fault, not the producer's. If fellows can sell vacuum cleaners from door to door to take a load off the floor, why can't we sell them something to take a load off their minds? Running time, 95 minutes. Played March 8-9.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ADVENTURES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES: Basil Rathbone, Ida Lupino, Nigel Bruce—This kept them away and disappointed the few that came.—Alvin Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

BARRICADE: Alice Faye, Warner Baxter—Fair show with Faye wasted. When a singer gets there why make an actress of her? Baxter is ageing but still a fine actor.—Alvin Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

CISCO KID AND THE LADY: Cesar Romero, Virginia Field, Marjorie Weaver—Pleasing show which might hit on a Saturday double. Made the mistake of thinking it might draw midweek.—Alvin Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

CITY OF DARKNESS: Sidney Toler, Lynn Bari—

Another flop, as all the new Chans are.—Alvin Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

DAY-TIME WIFE: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell—If Zanuck doesn't get on the job soon he will be just another flash in the plan.—Alvin Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

DAY-TIME WIFE: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Warren William, Binnie Barnes—Broke my all time low for Sunday-Monday. Should do about the same in other small towns. It is a nice comedy but not what small town patrons go for. Running time, 72 minutes. Played February 25-26.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

ELSA MAXWELL'S HOTEL FOR WOMEN: Linda Darnell, James Ellison, Ann Sothern, Elsa Maxwell—Good show but attendance was nil.—Alvin Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Sonja Henie, Ray Milland, Robert Cummings—This one did not stack up as well as this star's previous pictures, either at the box office or in quality. The story was pretty thin and vague, and several people asked what connection there was between the picture and the title. In looking back over our records, I note that each one of these pictures has dropped off a little at the box office, and this one continues the downward trend. Running time, 77 minutes. Played March 10.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

EVERYTHING HAPPENS AT NIGHT: Sonja Henie, Ray Milland, Robert Cummings—Nice show which will please and draw average business.—Alvin Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

HERE I AM A STRANGER: Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce, Richard Dix—Poor crowd. Ordinary production.—Alvin Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL: Jane Withers, Joe Brown, Jr.—My, what a pretty girl our Jane is getting to be! This is one of her peppiest pictures. We're still rooting for bigger and better Jane Withers productions efforts. Played March 12.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

HOLLYWOOD CAVALCADE: Alice Faye, Don Ameche—A good two-reel slapstick.—Alvin Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

PACK UP YOUR TROUBLES: Jane Withers, Ritz Brothers—Jane Withers has what it takes. She deserves better backing up than the Ritz Brothers can give her. Give her a good story and a couple of good names and they would have a better box office picture. Running time, 1-2.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

PACK UP YOUR TROUBLES: Jane Withers, Ritz Brothers—The patrons know now that they are just programmers.—Alvin Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

STANLEY AND LIVINGSTONE: Spencer Tracy, Richard Greene, Nancy Kelly, Walter Brennan, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Charles Coburn, Henry Hull—Good show. Pleased. Although crowd was small, no fault of the picture. Played January 29-30.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Rural and small town patronage.

STOP, LOOK AND LOVE: Jean Rogers, William Frawley, Robert Kellard—When Fox makes a poor one, it is poor. This is absolutely the worst picture that I have ever run on my screen. Business was as bad as the show. Don't run it if you don't have to. Running time, 58 minutes. Played February 21-22.—E. W. Malone, Cozy Theatre, Colfax, Wis. Rural patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Al Jolson, Andrea Leeds—This is a good Sunday picture. The story leaves the idea that Stephen Foster was a known drunkard. This is contrary to most people's belief and some didn't like the picture because of it. The music and color are excellent but the action lags pretty bad in spots. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 3-4.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—A fine production in color that did better than average business. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 18-20.—A. C. Stoek, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

United Artists

HOUSEKEEPER'S DAUGHTER, THE: Joan Bennett, Adolphe Menjou—Just fair entertainment that will please generally. OK if you bought at the right price but not worth more than program rate. Business about average for "Family Night." Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 11-12.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

LION HAS WINGS, THE: Merle Oberon, Ralph Richardson, June Duprez, Flora Robson—A very good feature that did extra business. Should please anyone interested in the welfare of Great Britain. Running time, 74 minutes. Played March 7-9.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

MAN IN THE IRON MASK: Louis Hayward, Joan Bennett, Warren William—We got our man in the street with his iron mask all dressed up. Put out a lobby display and did not do business. I saw it before playing it and thought we should do business. But our easier showed me I was wrong.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

OF MICE AND MEN: Burgess Meredith, Lon Chaney, Jr., Betty Field—Adult entertainment. Heavy drama. Fine acting throughout. Comments good and not so good. Unusual offering.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

RAFFLES: David Niven, Olivia de Havilland, Dudley Digges—A good feature that did not do any business. Running time, 72 minutes. Played March 11-13.—A. C. Stoek, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

RAFFLES: David Niven, Olivia de Havilland—Good cast and acting but dull. Did not draw at all. A program picture at Goldwyn prices.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestie Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SLIGHTLY HONORABLE: Pat O'Brien, Edward Arnold, Broderick Crawford, Ruth Terry—We wish they would give O'Brien roles suited to his personality. A very good comedy.—Leon C. Boldue, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

SLIGHTLY HONORABLE: Pat O'Brien, Broderick Crawford, Ruth Terry, Edward Arnold—A screwball murder mystery with plenty of fast lines and comedy, and you will be surprised when the villain is unmasked. Running time, 81 minutes. Played March 8-9.—J. H. Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

STAR IS BORN, A (reissue): Janet Gaynor, Fredric March—Exeellent pieture. A little above average business. Can't say much for the print we got. Played March 4-5.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Rural and small town patronage.

Universal

BIG TOWN CZAR: Barton MacLane, Tom Brown, Eve Arden, Ed Sullivan—We played this on a week-end with a western and did normal business. It's a fair program pieture suitable for double billing. The western saved it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.—Small town and rural patronage.

CALL A MESSENGER: Billy Halop, Huntz Hall, Mary Carlisle, Larry Crabbe—Plenty of swell comments. Everyone went out talking about it and laughing at its comedy and story. Don't miss this one. Running time, 66 minutes. Played March 1-2.—G. R. Borden, Jr., AM-BC Theatre, Blaine, Wash. General patronage.

DESTRY RIDES AGAIN: Marlene Dietrich, James Stewart, Mischa Auer, Charles Winninger, Brian Donlevy, Una Merkel—Business moderate but the picture is excellent. Dietrich and Stewart do a grand job. The pieture moves fast and will entertain any audience. Charles Winninger was noteworthy and it was nice to see Una Merkel again. Mischa Auer fine. Played March 10-11.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

DESTRY RIDES AGAIN: James Stewart, Marlene Dietrich, Misha Auer, Charles Winninger, Brian Donlevy, Una Merkel—A good comedy. Plenty of laughs. Pleased all.—Leon C. Boldue, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

FIRST LOVE: Deanna Durbin, Robert Stack, Helen Parrish, Eugene Pallette, Leatriee Joy—This picture did not do much for us. Miss Durbin has everything it takes to be a top drawing star, but when Pasternak allows her to sing the type of songs she does sing, then it is just too bad for us country folks. Tell Universal to look at Judy Garland. She sings songs with pep, vim and vitality, and these two started from seratch in a little two-reel musical of Metro. Garland has gone far and Durbin as box office has gone back. Put Miss Durbin in parts where she sings popular music, even jazz, and the small town theatres cannot do anything but sing praises for her. As she is now cast, her pictures mean nothing to us. We suggest playing this picture on a bargain night. Running time, 84 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

FIRST LOVE: Deanna Durbin, Helen Parrish, Robert Stack—Nice show for class and upper mass. Will please.—Alvin Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal. General patronage.

INVISIBLE MAN RETURNS, THE: Vincent Price, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Nan Grey—If anything this is a better story than the original. A good pieture. Business was unaccountably off, however. Played March 15-16.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LITTLE ACCIDENT: Baby Sandy, Hugh Herbert, Florenee Riee, Richard Carlson, Joy Hodges—A real laugh getter. Everyone enjoyed this from start to finish. Played March 8-9.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

OH, JOHNNY, HOW YOU CAN LOVE: Tom

Brown, Peggy Moran—This just proves what can be done with a little money and good direction. Don't believe a more entertaining picture has been made during the past year. Looks like Universal might push one of the other leading companies out of second place. Doubled with "Saga of Death Valley" (Republic). Business was more than we could handle both nights. Running time, 63 minutes. Played March 8-9.—J. F. Bobbitt, Stearns Theatre, Stearns, Ky. Mining and small town patronage.

SERVICE DE LUXE: Constance Bennett, Vincent Price, Charlie Ruggles—Sophisticated comedy with Constance Bennett means no business here. Not a small town picture. Running time, 86 minutes. Played, March 11 and 12.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. Small town and rural patronage.

THEY ASKED FOR IT: Michael Whalen, William Lundigan, Joy Hodges—Just an average program feature. Running time, 61 minutes. Played March 7-9.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

BRITISH INTELLIGENCE: Karloff, Margaret Lindsay—This is one of the most out and out propaganda films I have yet seen. However, it is fair entertainment for double billing or bargain night. No squawks on the propaganda but considerable comment. Good programmer. Running time, 60 minutes. —J. H. Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

BROTHER RAT AND A BABY: Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane, Jane Bryan, Eddie Albert, Ronald Reagan, Jane Wyman—Plenty of laughs. Should please anywhere.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

BROTHER RAT AND A BABY: Peter B. Good, Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane, Jane Bryan, Ronald Reagan, Jane Wyman, Eddie Albert—Another false alarm. Much ado about nothing. 87 minutes and nothing happens. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 10-12.—F. X. Faust, Roxy Theatre, Forsyth, Mont. General patronage.

DEAD END KIDS ON DRESS PARADE: "Dead End Kids," John Litel—This picture was somewhat of a disappointment to my public. My patrons come to see the "Dead End Kids" as a bunch of tough guys, not to see them turn sissy. The "Dead End Kids" won't be popular very long if they make any more like this. Business good. Running time, 62 minutes. Played March 9-10.—E. W. Malone, Cozy Theatre, Colfax, Wis. Rural patronage.

FOUR DAUGHTERS: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, John Garfield, Jeffrey Lynn, Claude Rains, May Robson, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh—Play this one for sure. Just a lovely show for a small town and very much enjoyed by my audience. If we can get productions like this for what Vitagraph sells them, we can hope to live. Extra business on this one, even with 30 below and plenty of snow, all roads blocked. Thanks, Warners. Running time, 98 minutes. Played March 7.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

INDIANAPOLIS SPEEDWAY: Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, John Payne, Gale Page—Pretty good race picture which flopped at the box office. Cast did a good job except that our audience thought O'Brien overplayed his part. However, it was a good enough picture and deserved better patronage than it drew. Running time, 82 minutes. Played March 8-9.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

INVISIBLE STRIPES: George Raft, Jane Bryan, William Holden, Humphrey Bogart—Good picture of its kind. All in cast do a very good job.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

ROARING TWENTIES, THE: James Cagney, Priscilla Lane, Humphrey Bogart, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George—Good picture but Cagney hard to understand in spots due to fast talk. Business about normal. Played February 5-6.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Rural and small town patronage.

WINGS OF THE NAVY: George Brent, Olivia de Havilland, John Payne, Frank McHugh—Very good aviation picture which did better than average business for us. Considering the age of the picture and the fact that it played all around us almost a year ago, I thought it did well enough. This is a picture that makes you glad you are an American, and it should instill confidence in the minds of those who doubt the ability of our nation to hold her own on land, sea or in the air. Running time, 89 minutes. Played March 15-16.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

Miscellaneous

CITY, THE: (World) I ran this film as one of my six educational films of the year. It is so short that I bolstered it up with nine reels of shorts and managed to get together a fine educational program. The picture interested my small group of patrons who come regularly to this type of show. It is a well done documentary film with some very humorous moments. If you have the right kind of patronage for this type of show, it is good. Running time, 40 minutes. Played March 12.—W. Varick, Alfred Co-op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

BIG FISH: Sport Thrills—Okay. This type fishing sports reel growing stale. Some folks asked us why we never had a sports reel on fishing such as New Hampshire folk know it, brook trout, lake fishing, etc. Sporting reel producers can have the tip gratis. And we bet the New Hampshire fish and game commission would cooperate.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

BOWS AND ARROWS: Special Sport Thrills.—Real good picture on archery. Play it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza, Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

BOY, A GUN AND BIRDS, A: Color Rhapsodies—Okay. Spot where kiddies will see it since it carries a direct message for them on careless bird shooting. —L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CALLING ALL CURS: Three Stooges—Usual for this trio and the public still laughs, so okay.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

COMMUNITY SING SERIES: All Community Sing subjects please—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General Patronage.

COMMUNITY SING: No. 4—This is one of the best, and the tunes are Stephen Foster's, so everyone knew them. I got some singers on this one at every performance. It would be a splendid idea to run this just before your trailer on "Swanee River." It might do some good and certainly wouldn't do any harm. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

LIFE IN PARIS: Columbia Tours—A black and white travel reel that contains more human interest than usual. Very good of its kind. I would suggest very humbly that it would be a natural to use as the last short before "Hunchback of Notre Dame." Try it and see why. Does anyone ever use these suggestions? Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MAN OF TIN: Phantasies Cartoons—Just another waste of film by a company that does not do so well on their cartoons. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

MIDNIGHT FROLICS: Color Rhapsodies—Comical. The organ sequence is fine. Whole musical background is good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NELLS YELLS: Color Rhapsodies—Just fair. This cartoon market is very overcrowded.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: No. 12—Noah Beery tells a group of famous Hollywood stars still in their teens about the oldtime players. Many old favorites are shown in scenes from their hit pictures.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: Always interesting and well received.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

TROUBLE FINDS ANDY CLYDE: Broadway Comedies—A very funny comedy. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

FAILURE AT 50, A: MGM Miniatures—Very good subject.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

FISHING BEAR, THE: MGM Cartoons—Good cartoon in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FORGOTTEN VICTORY: Passing Parade, No. 11—This is excellent anywhere but should be stressed where they raise wheat. This can safely be ballyhooed to the skies to wheat farmers. It shows how a hardy wheat has gradually replaced the original weak wheat in this country. It could easily be made into a feature film. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

KNOW YOUR MONEY: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—When a thing is perfection, little can be said about it. This series is perfection. Enough said. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

KNOW YOUR MONEY: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—This is probably the most useful short ever attempted. It gives the audience a few tips on how to look for counterfeit money and at the same time tells an interesting and exciting story. Put it in a good spot. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

LET'S TALK TURKEY: Pete Smith Specialties—A reel on carving. Our patrons like Pete Smith.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

MAINTAIN THE RIGHT: Pete Smith Specialties—Good one-reeler telling of Northwest Mounted Police.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

NATURAL WONDERS OF WASHINGTON STATE: FitzPatrick Traveltalk—Very beautiful color. A pretty country and interestingly presented.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

OLD NATCHEZ: FitzPatrick Traveltalks—Tops, absolutely tops. Use it only on a weak feature to build up a program. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

POUND FOOLISH: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Very good subject on evasion of import duty by so-called American citizens. All of these subjects that we have used have been very good and our patrons really like them. MGM should get an Oscar for this series. Running time, 20 minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

SET 'EM UP: Pete Smith Specialties—A dandy subject on bowling.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

WHERE TURF MEETS SURF: MGM Miniatures —Good one-reel comedy.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

Paramount

BLUE DANUBE: Symphonic Series—This is something new for us and we want more. Filmed in blue stock this rendition of the full score of one of the most beautiful of waltzes created a round of spontaneous applause when it ended. The first time I have ever witnessed my customarily reticent patrons demonstrate over a short subject in this manner. Running time, nine minutes.—J. H. Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

BOWLING SKILL: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Very interesting.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FRANKIE MASTERS AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Excellent orchestra number. Masters is a good vocalizer. The duet finale is good stuff. Old time quartet okay also.—L. A. Irwin, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

FRANKIE MASTERS AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—A good musical single reel. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

HUMAN FISH: Grantland Rice Sportlights—Entertaining.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

JIMMY DORSEY AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—The music is good but the orchestra and performers seemed to have camera fright. They didn't work up much enthusiasm in this one. Just fair.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

LITTLE LAMKIN: Color Classics—Fairly good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

NOT SO DUMB: Paragraphics—The dumb thing about this showing was the fact the exchange sent us this in substitution for a cartoon. Why will they upset a whole program's balance by their thoughtless substitutions? We never complain if they send us one on the same idea, that is, a cartoon for a cartoon, a sports reel for a sports reel, a musical reel for a musical reel, etc. But you can't plan a well proportioned show when you get such substitutions as this. Then again when you go and advertise a particularly outstanding short only to get another reel instead, how do they expect a manager to make short subjects important as business getters? P. S.: "Not So Dumb" is a very good animal reel.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

PARAMOUNT NEWS: Reels that I have been receiving lately not up to the old standard. Seems they are slipping compared with other News productions. Running time, one reel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

PARAMOUNT PICTORIAL: No. V9-6—Interesting. Airplanes and men's felt hats in the making are the subjects pictured. The latter is in color.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

TED FIO RITO AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—Good orchestra reel.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

TED FIO RITO AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—This is nice playing. A good orchestra short. A swell orchestra.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

UNUSUAL OCCUPATIONS: No. 2—This is good.

Charlie Ruggles steals the last sequence with his dogs and inimitable tomfoolery.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

WAY BACK WHEN A TRIANGLE HAD ITS POINTS: Stone Age Cartoon—Good cartoon in black and white. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WILLIAM TELL: Symphonic Series—These symphony orchestra reels go over very well with most of my patrons, although they don't seem to do so with yours. This one maintains their high average of excellence. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

BANDITS AND BULLETS: Ray Whitley Comedies—Very good. Western plot in miniature with top-notch western music by Ray and his Six Bar Cowboys.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

CUPID RIDES THE RANGE: Ray Whitley Comedies—Quite good. Ray's music is smooth.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 7: Vatican of Pius XII - This is the subject concerning the Vatican and the Pope. It is well done and naturally should be tied up with Catholic Churches. My audience, most of which are non-Catholic, commented upon how interesting it was to them. I doubt if it drew any extra business here, however. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

SKY GAME: RKO Pathe Sportscope—Duck hunting reel that pleased the two or three hunters in the audience. This reel gave me the impression that shooting ducks is far from being sportsmanlike. How about a reel from the duck's point of view? That would at least have some chance of being different. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

HARVEST TIME: Terry-Toons—Although not too original in plot, this towers so far over all others in this series of color cartoons that it is well worth playing. Running time, seven minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

ORPHAN DUCK, THE: Terry-Toons—At last! A good color cartoon from this company. Running time, eight minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

TWO HEADED GIANT: Terry-Toons—A fairish short of a color cartoon. It certainly doesn't prove that two heads are better than one. Running time, seven minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

WHAT EVERY INVENTOR SHOULD KNOW: Lew Lehr—Pretty good, although we did not think it was quite as good as others in this series. I though Lehr was quite difficult to understand in this subject but it may have been just a case of poor recording or printing. It got some laughs, which is what counts. Running time, 10 minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

WICKY-WACKY ROMANCE, A: Terry-Toons—Very amusing. Several belly laughs!—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

Universal

SCRAMBLED EGGS: Lantz Colored Cartoons—Very good.—L. A. Irwin, Palace Theatre, Penacook, N. H. General patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: No. 69—This series is always good and you make no mistake in running them. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

LIFE BEGINS FOR ANDY PANDY: Lantz Colored Cartoons—Here is the start of a good series and don't forget it. If the balance is as good as this, Universal really has something. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

AFRICA SQUEAKS: Loony Tunes—This is a good black and white cartoon of the "gag" type that Schlesinger specializes in. He is in rare form in this one. It would be very, very appropriate to play this with "That's Right, You're Wrong" or "Stanley and Livingstone" as Kay Kyser and Stanley are featured in it. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

CURIOUS PUPPY, THE: Merrie Melodies—This is one of the funniest colored cartoons we have shown this season. Running time, eight minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

EARLY BIRD GETS THE WORM: Merrie Melodies—Very good cartoon in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FRANCES CARROLL AND THE COQUETTES: Melody Masters—Three minutes of a drum solo is enough to tell you how poor this band reel is. Bad, very bad. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GOOD EGG, THE: Merrie Melodies—OK but not up to the usual Schlesinger standard of originality. The ugly duckling is a turtle this time. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

ICE FROLIC: Broadway Brevities—Very good subject which makes you realize that Sonja Henie isn't the only figure skater in the world. Our patrons complimented us on this short, which is rather unusual in this spot. Running time, 20 minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton, Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

MIGHTY HUNTERS: Merrie Melodies—This stars the Canyon Kiddies of Good Housekeeping fame. It might mean something to advertise it. I hope they make more of these as a new series of color cartoons, as this is very cute, pretty, unusual and funny. What more could one want. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

OLD HICKORY: Historical Technicolor Featurettes—They certainly put fine production into these historical shorts. This one is very fast moving with more action than usual. The color is perfect. My crowd often thinks these are second features as there is so much material in them. Play it on a patriotic day if possible. Running time, 17 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

ONE DAY STAND: Vitaphone Varieties—Very good reel on the circus life. Enjoyed by the grownups as well as the kiddies. Running time, one reel.—A. L. Dove, Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

REMEMBER WHEN: Broadway Brevities—A very good subject which the older patrons will enjoy thoroughly. Have to give credit to Vitaphone for a considerably good lineup of short subjects and would say they are second only to MGM in this respect. Running time, 20 minutes.—H. Williams, Stockton Theatre, Stockton, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

ROYAL RODEO, THE: John Payne, Cliff Edwards—A very good color short subject. Running time, 15 minutes.—A. C. Stock, Iroquois Theatre, Petrolia, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

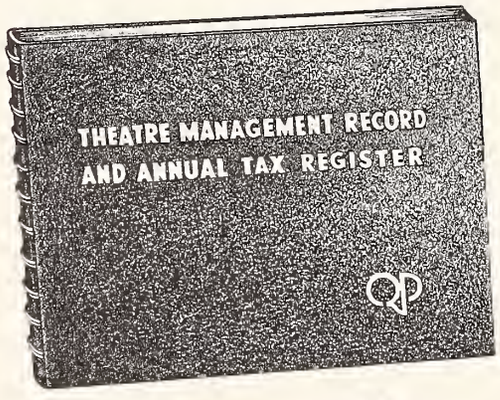
SLAPSIE MAXIE: Broadway Brevities—A very, very poor comedy.—Leon C. Bolduc, Majestic Theatre, Conway, N. H. General patronage.

VAUDEVILLE INTERLUDE: Vitaphone Varieties—for our situation it was the answer. Real entertainment. Many good comments.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

Miscellaneous

LOUIS-GODOY FIGHT FILM: Did us extra business although fights are hard to get that draw.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada.

Serials



Republic

DRUMS OF FU MANCHU: Henry Brandon, Luana Walters—First chapter looks good. Plenty of action.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Rural and small town patronage.

ZORRO'S FIGHTING LEGION: Reed Hadley—Fell below Republic's standard in our opinion. We don't like the idea of one chapter of these serials being a review of past episodes. It isn't interesting to patrons and they think they should see something new.—Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn. Rural and small town patronage.

Jolley in New Post

United Artists Files Goldwyn Suit Answer

United Artists in an answer filed this week in federal court in New York in the Samuel Goldwyn action for $54,559 charged that Samuel Goldwyn, Inc., arbitrarily refused to agree to modifications of the "Silverstone Bonus Plan." Although these modifications had been ratified at a United Artists stockholders' meeting in January, 1939, and amended contracts had been signed by all other producers, Mr. Goldwyn refused to give his consent, the answer states.

The defendant claims that it offered the sum sued for to Mr. Goldwyn, despite his stand, "in order to avoid controversy" and that it was rejected. An application to dismiss Mr. Goldwyn's action to upset his contract is now pending in federal court.

Litigation in Buffalo Over Pearl White Estate

The $500,000 estate of the late Pearl White has been tied up in litigation in Buffalo by counsel for Fred White, brother. Mr. White sought to prevent the executor of the estate in Paris where the actress died from turning any money over to his wife, Mary. A restraining order was granted Saturday by Samuel J. Harris, New York supreme court justice, on request of Mr. White's attorney.

The action was prompted by previous legal proceedings against Fred White, whose whereabouts were reported unknown at the time of his sister's death. The proceedings sought to tie up the funds which he might have received from the actress's estate.

Injunction Denied

Segal Suit Upheld

An application to dismiss the suit of Harry Segal against Standard Pictures Distributing Corporation and George Leganas was denied this week in New York supreme court. The plaintiff asks for $32,400, claiming breach of an employment contract to act as sales manager for three years at five per cent of the company's gross.

Discrimination Charged

Charged with racial discrimination by four colored men, R. A. Lesarius, manager of the Bulls Head theatre, Scranton, Pa., this week was held under $300 bail for court following a hearing before a local Alderman. Mr. Lesarius was arrested on a charge sworn out by one of the four who claimed that on March 12th the complainant and three friends were advised, when they sought admittance to the theatre, that the admission price was $1 each. The complaint charged that the usual admission price was 20 cents.

Stockholders' Suit Trial

Trial of a stockholders' suit against Consolidated Film Industries, Columbia Broadcasting System, Cajo Company and Setay Company started this week in New York supreme court. The suit attacks transactions involving the purchase of an interest in Republic by Consolidated and sale of the American Record Company to CBS.

William Fox Offer Approved

A $500,000 settlement of $1,400,000 in claims against the estate of William Fox has been approved by Judge John Boyd Avis in federal district court in Camden, N. J. The settlement had been accepted, subject to court approval, by Allen B. Endicott, Jr., of Atlantic City, federal referee in bankruptcy.

It was offered by the All-Continental Corporaiton, a holding company of the Fox family. Judge Avis gave creditors the right to appeal within 30 days. First, however, they must file cash bonds of $50,000 and indemnity bonds of $100,000 to guarantee costs of any further litigation.

Vermont Court Denies Interstate Motion

At a hearing held in federal court in Montpelier, Vt., this week, Tegu's Palace Theatre, Inc., successfully opposed motions argued by counsel for Interstate Theatre Corporation and Rockingham Operating Company, in an anti-trust action.

David Stoneman, counsel for Interstate Theatre Corporation, and one of the principal stockholders of Interstate, contended that his company was not transacting business in Vermont, and upon this theory he argued that the complaint should be dismissed as against his client, Interstate.

The motion was denied.

End Paramount Action

A suit instituted by Paramount in federal court in Oklahoma City in April, 1937, against the Leader Press, Inc., of that city, ended this week in an injunction granted to Paramount to restrain the printing company from selling advertising novelties, accessories, posters and other objects using names and caricatures of Paramount stars and titles of Paramount pictures without proper identification.

Stage Show Dropped

The RKO Shubert theatre in Cincinnati will return to a straight picture policy March 29th with the scale of admission reduced. The stage show, which has been a policy of the theatre since the beginning of the season, will be dropped.

Terry-Toon Merchandising

Paul Terry of Terry-Toons has signed a contract licensing the Ideal Novelty and Toy Company to make a number of dolls and toys from several of his cartoon characters. Twentieth Century-Fox distribute Terry-Toons. The first tieup will be on "Lucky Duck."

Mrs. Roosevelt on Censorship

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the President, told a Civil Liberties League audience in Chicago this week that she was opposed to censorship of motion pictures. She said that film selection should be left to the intelligence of the people.

New French Film

French Cinema Center, Inc., this week received the negative of a new French film, "Schpountz," produced by Marcel Pagnol. The film is a satire on the film industry and the public, and stars Fernandel.

OBITUARIES

Major Bernard Reinold, Character Actor, Dies

Major Bernard Adolph Reinold, a character actor on the American stage for many years and known to audiences as Adolph Bernard, died at the age of eighty last week at East Islip, L. I.

Major Reinold was born in New York and appeared in the stage productions of "School for Scandal," "As You Like It" and other plays. Later he joined the Charles Frohman productions.

He served in the Spanish-American war as a lieutenant with Roosevelt's Rough Riders. Upon his return he appeared with Lawrence Barrett, Clara Morris, Lionel Atwill and Lenore Ulric under the David Belasco managership and was a staff executive for William A. Brady.

Jesse Abraham Ferguson

Jesse Abraham Ferguson, 57, for 25 years maintenance director for Saenger theatres in the Jackson, Miss., area, died of a heart attack March 17th. Surviving are a brother and a niece.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

ALL THOSE IN FAVOR?

Most every active theatreman has had the distressing experience of a fondly conceived promotion busting right in his face. That's not to be wondered at since circumstances beyond the manager's control often upset the applecart. There have been instances, too, of carefully planned exploitations that did not come off because of some controllable factor not provided for in advance. That these latter be detailed by contributors is the suggestion of a member in describing his tale of woe of a parade gone wrong through an error of judgment.

The Round Tabler feels that if the exploitation mistakes are pointed out, others perhaps might be saved from similar omissions.

On the face of it, the idea has some merit providing every floperoo can be traced to the reasons for its failure plus a willingness of the manager concerned to bear evidence, even though the member and his situation need not necessarily be identified in print. Tieins that fold up apparently for no sound reason might also be included in the hope that some other member may be able to help find the answer.

The motion having been heard, and seconded by Gert, discussion by the membership, for and agin', will precede the voting. Gentlemen,—pardon, ladies and gentlemen, the floor is yours.

A NEWSWORTHY SERVICE

The service staff of the Garden, Greenfield, Mass., recently passed the standard and special Red Cross first-aid courses, advises Manager G. Frederick. Each member is now entitled to wear the Red Cross chevron, to display the diploma issued for this work from the Washington headquarters. Presented on the stage by the fire chief and other civic dignitaries, these honors were made much of by the local press. Frederick believes his theatre the only one with such 100 per cent representation.

Modern equipment, fire and riot drills, plus first-aid training, set a safety standard in the theatre not always matched in other places of public assemblage. Audiences are wisely taught to take this for granted. The added precautions stressed by the civic presentation point up Frederick's determination to further fortify this reassuring public state of mind.

Even though it may be nothing but a theatreman's figure of speech, this corner would just as well the members shelve the term "stolen," sometimes used in tracing the background of an idea. Accompanying contributions, a typical letter will read, "attached is a stunt stolen from a recent issue," or, "I steal quite a few layout ideas from the Round Table ad pages."

Of course, the boys are generous in so crediting brother-managers for these inspirations. But "steal" is hardly the word. There never was a time, in this end of the business, when effective exploitation, whatever its source, was to be considered as anything but common property. That goes double for your Round Table.

MOTION SELLS MOTION

The first step in making a sale to the passerby is to stop him in front of the seller's display. Thus, shrewd merchandisers often use animation, since figures show a distinct preponderance in the number of onlookers so halted. The same reasoning seems to be accepted by Round Tablers who report the animations reproduced in these pages, according to the importance they attach to this form of display and the efforts devoted in making it tick.

In support, further evidence again might be made of the strollers in 50th Street beneath our offices. While quite a few stop at the attractive windows along the way, the crowds gather at Rockefeller Center ice skating pond to watch the skaters go 'round and 'round.

To emphasize that tempus fugits, the membership is advised that this issue marks the ending of the First Quarter in the 1940 Awards. The judges' findings for the First Quarter-Master Plaques, Medals and Citations will be set down in the following issue. It is expected that the winners will come mostly from those who have landed oftenest in the Fortnight listings. That's something to keep in mind.

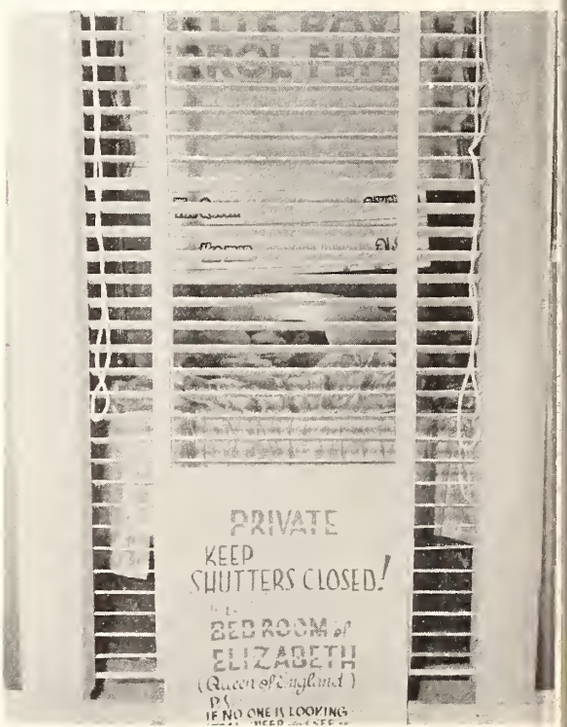
Round Table In Pictures

Background of New York's main stem formed the basis of lobby display on engagement of "Broadway Melody of 1940," at the Fischer Theatre, in Danville, Ill. Cutout heads of Astaire and Powell with names in ribbon effect at top tied in the setpiece. Display was made by artist Gene Douglas for Ed Crabtree, city manager for Publix Great States Theatres.

Folks in Memphis, Tenn., were recently treated to the sight of an ox-drawn cart, which was part of the street bally put over under the direction of Howard Waugh for the "Virginia City" date at the Warner Theatre. Ballyhoo man covered main streets week ahead of opening.



Giving the effect of moving clouds and rippling water was the animated lobby display created for "Pinocchio" by Jack Simons at Loew's Poli, Hartford, Conn. Lights and shadows completed the effect.

Completely made of paper materials and in third dimension is the above poster used at the New York Roxy for date on "My Little Chickadee." Under the supervision of ad head Homer Harman, work was turned out by Jack Eisner.

Gag lobby display was created for "Elizabeth and Essex" at the Palace, Athens, Ga., by L&J city manager Moon Corker, consisting of 17th Century bedroom concealed behind venetian blinds. Patrons, on opening shutters, were greeted by sight of cutouts of Bette Davis and Errol Flynn.

Star value, music and fact that picture is swell entertainment, purely for laugh purposes with not a problem to solve except to get down early to secure a seat, are best publicity angles. Held sneak preview to start 'em talking. Teaser campaign in newspaper emphasizing joviality of picture with Confucius Say gags. Tied up with music; local band leaders supplied with music. Asked for tunes to be played on radio request programs. Roto section placed in newspaper. Stories in 40 suburban and foreign language newspapers. Used special tieup stills of Crosby with pipe and Lamour in sarong.

JERRY ZIGMOND,
Manager, Newman, Kansas City.

A "SWANEE" ANIMATION

Created for "Swanee River" at the Nixon, in Philadelphia, is Al Cohen's display which was constructed in three parts. Enlargement is set on 6-inch extension from background; banjo four feet in diameter and made of parchment. Extension part is of wood, crossbars of silver moulding; strings are thin gold cord, and buttons are doorknobs of chrome. The boat itself, an enlargement of a still, rocks back and forth in compoboard shadowbox, as explained in working plan. That's Round Tabler Cohen standing at right of display.

Notaro Ties "Child" To Hospital Fund

Tying into local hospital campaign for funds, Pat Notaro of the Columbia, in Sharon, Pa., issued special invitations to attend his "Child Is Born" prevue. Campaign workers, doctors and nurses were invited, stunt rating two front page breaks. In addition, Pat promoted a full-page of co-op front-page ads which included a misspelled word contest for which guest tickets were awarded.

In connection with Americanism Week, sponsored by his local Junior Chamber of Commerce, Notaro held a special morning show for students at which he showed "The Declaration of Independence" and "The Bill of Rights." Program and goodwill gesture brought front page mention. Announcements were made in all schools and he also received publicity over WPIC.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Grott's "Gulliver" Tieins

Numerous "Gulliver" window displays were promoted by Harold Grott, for that date at the Met, in Baltimore, in all of which title, cast and playdates received prominent mention. For his lobby, Hal planted a three-foot dwarf painted in colorful garb and surrounded by cutouts of characters from the film. Spot announcements were received twice daily over WFBR, bookmarks distributed at nearby schools, and a coloring contest for tickets was run in local paper.

Cotton Balls Promoted By Faille for "Swanee"

Ingenious was Francis Faille's idea of contacting mayors of Memphis and Atlanta requesting cotton bolls as part of his campaign on "Swanee River" at the Paramount, in North Adams, Mass. On receipt of same, theatreman planted them out front with appropriate tiein copy. Further publicity was garnered by presentation by Faille of some of the bolls to his local mayor.

Candid cameraman snapped passersby for his date on "Remember the Night," in addition to distributing cards advising folks to watch for their likenesses on lobby easel. Guest tickets went to those identifying themselves.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

O'Donnell Arranges Ride for Showgirls

With a musical comedy revue hitting the stage of the Haines Theatre, in Waterville, Maine, Jim O'Donnell secured much publicity for the date through the cooperation of Mayor Paul A. Dundas, who not only presented the girls with a key to the city, but arranged an old fashioned sleigh ride at which His Honor handled the reins. Both stories were good art work and readers in local papers.

That old ferreter, Haines, discovered that a resident dentist had years previous extracted one of Geronimo's teeth. This, too, was worth a story in the papers when the theatreman played that date.

Williams Promotes Alleys For "Set 'Em Up" Tiein

Tying up the two outstanding bowling alleys in the town, Rex Williams for Pete Smith's "Set 'em Up" short at the Elco, in Elkhart, Ind., banners heralding the picture's opening were conspicuously displayed ahead of opening, while alleys of lesser importance were posted with one sheet heralding the date.

Regular space in daily and weekly newspaper ads all carried special plugs in addition to the distribution of 3,000 heralds in a house-to-house coverage. Cost of the herald was met by merchants' ads at bottom, which plugged a special bowling activity and broadcast. Numerous windows were promoted in addition to gratis scene mat which appeared on the sports page of local daily.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Schools Aid Tully On "Gulliver" Date

Securing the cooperation of superintendent of schools on "Gulliver," Ralph Tully at the Central, in Biddeford, Maine, rerouted a special bulletin prepared by the theatre to each principal of the grade and high schools with instructions that it be read to all students. Permission was also granted for the planting of illustrated posters on all boards. Special announcements were sent out to schools advising of the after-school showings for students.

On "At the Circus," Tully dressed a young man in clown's suit and Gaucho makeup and sent him out to cover main streets and school districts. In addition, special colored heralds were distributed to workers at nearby factories, back page of which was entirely devoted to plug week's attraction.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Smith's Malco Calendar

Compiled by W-Clyde Smith, Hot Springs city manager, is the smart 1940 Malco circuit's manager reminder calendar, measuring 24 inches wide by 18, and divided into three panels, from top to bottom. Center panel is devoted to title, home office messages and highlight managerial reminders. The two remaining panels are each divided into six squares for individual monthly calendars, the latter followed by dates in that month to be exploited.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Weinstein's Fish Story

Gag lobby stunt was arranged for "Pinocchio" at the New York RKO 58th Street Theatre by Manager Ansel Weinstein, who planted a goldfish in a bowl in his lobby. Tiein card read: This is Fleo, sister of the Hollywood glamor girl, Cleo, featured in "Pinocchio" coming here." This was followed with playdates, etc.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Excuse It, Please

In the March 16 issue included in the Fortnighter List, Joe Marquis was erroneously placed at the Strand, in Lowell, Mass., instead of the M. & P. Egyptian, Brighton, Mass.

Beautiful Baby Contest Held by Neilson on "Child"

Two of the largest milk distributors in Johnstown, Pa., cooperated with Bob Neilson by sponsoring a "beautiful baby" contest in connection with his "Child Is Born" date at the State Theatre. Cash prizes plus a month's milk supply were donated by the dairies, in addition to the distribution of 7,500 bottle hangers. Animated life-like cow in lobby plugged the dairies and picture. Special advance readers concerning the contest were run in local papers and counter and window displays were also used. Windup of contest was a special luncheon for contest winners and mothers which was covered by papers.

Special setpiece in lobby stressed the evolution of the diaper and showed type worn by Queen Elizabeth, Napoleon, George Washington, etc. Lobby display also included tieup with department store using complete accessories for babies and publicity was garnered through planting photo of local hospital nursery together with interview of superintendent of the maternity ward who gave statistics and human interest facts about babies' births, etc., all tied to the picture. Opening day uniformed nurses paraded to the theatre.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Merchant Cooperation Landed By Brizendine on "Raffles"

Entire cost and distribution of special "Raffles" heralds was met by merchants' ads as part of Will Brizendine's campaign on that picture at the Rialto in Baltimore, Md. Title of the picture was used to tiein with the merchandise advertised and each store received a large quantity of the heralds which were used in all deliveries and mailing pieces. Reverse side carried theatre and picture plug. Since David Niven appearing in the picture has personally endorsed Calox toothpaste, Brizendine contacted chain drug store for window displays which included giant blowup of the star plus title and playdate mention.

As an attractor, Will used imprinted tags, one side of which read "Sold by the Shop Around the Corner" and the reverse carrying theatre, playdates and "Shop Around the Corner" plug. These were tied to door handles, radiator caps on all cars parked within vicinity of his house. Each merchant in his district also cooperated by tying the tags on to all deliveries from their shops.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Ukrainian Orchestra Promoted By Scott for "Balalaika"

First step in Sid Scott's "Balalaika" exploitation at the Capitol in Sudbury, Ontario, was the promotion of a native-costumed 25-piece Ukrainian Cultural Society Orchestra which had never before appeared in a theatre in that district. Renaming it "The Capitol Theatre Balalaika Orchestra," a variety half-hour of native music, folk songs and dances were given from theatre stage every evening during run of picture, orchestra was also featured over CKSO.

To contact all district Ukranians, Scott had two Ukrainian girls canvass their "landsmen" by telephone, plugging the picture and stage show. For his lobby, a giant 12-foot high compo balalaika was displayed under vari-colored spots, entire face of the instrument was covered with playdates, title.

To be repeated: Entrants who earn Fortnight Appointments most frequently in the two-week Fortnights will obviously be expected to receive further consideration from the Judges in the voting for Quarter-Master Plaques, Medals and Citations. It is of advantage, then, to enter material in as many of the Fortnights of each Quarter as possible.

Unterfort Advertises For Old Sheet Music

Hidden turntable and amplifier was planted in front of the Keith Theatre, in Syracuse, playing hit tunes from "Oh, Johnny," this was operated by cashier from the boxoffice. Stories were run in two leading papers offering guest tickets to anyone possessing an original copy of either the sheet music or recording. Car promoted from local dealer was appropriately bannered and driven about town ahead and during run.

"Swanee River," through cooperation of head of English Department special letter calling attention to the opening was read to all students in the school system. Public libraries used cards plugging the date.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Circularizes Doctors

Personal letters were mailed to all doctors and nurses in the vicinity of the Stamford Theatre, in Stamford, Conn., to sell Henry Mangravite's date on "A Child Is Born." In addition, heralds were distributed through the cooperation of leading laundry, imprinted paper diapers handed out to women at all industrial plants and cooperative ads secured from local diaper service.

Boyd Ties Taxi Company To "Vigil in the Night"

Local cab company was promoted by Clifford Boyd on his "Vigil in the Night" date at the Paramount, Brattleboro, Vt., whereby gratis transportation to the theatre opening night was arranged. Cab customers had to obtain special ticket from cashier which entitled them to the ride and had to be presented to the driver. "Institutional" tickets were distributed to all cab customers and fleet of cooperating cabs was properly bannered four days ahead of opening.

Tying up with local library system on "Light That Failed," Cliff arranged for distribution of bookmarks and attractive display of Kipling books. Day ahead of opening a "walking book" street bally was arranged.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Zinn's Handwriting Stunt

Costless lobby stunt that worked effectively for Charles Zinn, at the Century, in Minneapolis was table and stationery setup in lobby week in advance of "Eternally Yours" opening. Patrons were invited to write picture title on cards, 20 pairs of guest tickets going to those whose handwriting was considered most distinctive.

Exploitation Briefs Here & There

Overprinting local papers in large red type reading "Garbo Laughs at the Dixie Theatre today," Manager Frank Shaffer in Staunton, Va. has newsboys distribute the papers to help exploit "Ninotchka." Also distributed were the censored mail envelopes containing picture plug.

For "We Are Not Alone," Shaffer planted serialization in the Staunton News Leader in advance of opening, paper also taking large two column ad ahead and opening day to plug the story.

A reported first time was the full page review and story landed in the Panama American for "Hunchback" at the Cecilia, Panama City, by Rafael Ades, RKO publicity manager there. For his street bally, man dressed as the Laughton character as depicted in the film was driven about town in bannered cart.

Contest angle was brought into John Manuel's co-op add page for "That's Right You're Wrong" date at Schine's Strand, Delaware, Ohio. Each merchant's ad carried some musical knowledge question and a ten-word slogan about Kay Kyser had to accompany each entry. Guest tickets went to winners.

On the picture "Jeepers Creepers," Ted Irwin, manager of the Star Theatre, in Lyons, Kansas, designed a float for his street bally in the form of a hillbilly backyard. Seated in the enclosure were two of his usherettes dressed as hillbilly girls, one doing a washing which she proceeded to hang on a line, the other sawing wood and stacking it. Theatre operator sat "fishing," while Ted himself dressed in costume shot squirrels from a miniature tree. Loudspeaker was used, while operator played harmonica at intervals.

With folks in his territory going strong for crossword puzzles, Herb Graefe at the Badger, Marshfield, Wis., evolved one which ran week ahead of opening. Questions pertained to his forthcoming attractions, thrift book going to top winner, passes to "Ninotchka" to runnersup.

Giant postcard addressed to several local Hardy families were planted on post boxes about town as part of Norman Prager's "Judge Hardy and Son" date at the Arcade in Springfield, Mass. Measuring 18 by 30 inches, the cards were hung on boxes at noon when they attracted considerable attention.

Chain grocer in Washington, Ind., sponsored a "Gulliver's" coloring contest for kids as part of A. J. Kalberer's campaign on that date at the Washington Theatre. Day ahead of opening, paper ran story advising all to watch for the contest, opening day grocer ran three column half page photo of Gulliver and the Lilliputs which entrants were to color for prizes.

Giant Banners Announce Date on "Elizabeth"

Outstanding in the campaign on "Elizabeth and Essex" at the Warner Stanley, Jersey City, was an 80-foot banner hung across the face of the building, displayed ahead and during the engagement. Streamer running completely across the grand lobby also attracted, as did an 80 by 120 foot setpiece.

Other tieins arranged by Manager George Kelly and Westley Pratzner, publicity head, included a tiein with Liberty magazine boys wherein herald was given with each copy. Boys received passes in exchange with extra reward for those selling most magazines. Papers throughout the county were covered, the theatremen landing a coloring contest in one, puzzle contest in another and strip serialization in a third. Libraries distributed book-marks and schools, study guides. Student rate tickets were also employed.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Krolich Covers Music Lovers For Date on "Danube Waltz"

Organizations and locals interested in Rochester's campaign for good music were expressly aimed for in Art Krolich's campaign for his date on "Blue Danube Waltz," one of the Paramount Symphonic series, at the Regent Theatre. Letters were addressed to members of the Philharmonic orchestra, sponsors and directors of the civic music association, music teachers in schools who were asked to announce the showings.

Newspaper publicity was topped by story in drama columns on opening day with added coverage in music papers. Music stores displayed window cards, contests used ahead on two radio stations and card posted on bulletin board of famed Eastman School of Music.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Replica Fort Street Bally Sells "Allegheny" for Stearn

Effective was the street bally conceived by Harry D. Stearn and his assistant, Al Polk, for the opening of "Allegheny Uprising," at the Strand in Lexington, Ky., in the form of replica of fort which was planted atop truck and driven about town. Standing inside the fort were boys dressed as a frontiersman, English officer, drummer, Indian and girl dressed as a pioneer woman of the period depicted in the picture. All costumes were authentic and the truck appropriately bannered attracted considerable attention as it wended its way. Regular three-sheet cutout with mounted stills was stationed in lobby two weeks ahead and then moved outside during run, cards were placed in all hotels and school cafeterias and jumbo window cards in choice spots around city.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Notaro's Camera Contest

Through tieup effected with local druggist, Pat Notaro, for his one-day stage show "Wake Up and Cheer" at the Columbia, Sharon, Pa., held a candid camera contest, whereby cameras and photographic supplies were awarded to those submitting best photos of girls in the cast. Entry blanks and contest rules were run in paper. Co-op ads were also secured from merchants, each of whom tied title into their merchandise.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1940

"'Broadway Melody of 1940', another M-G-M lavish musical splash ... Eleanor Powell and Fred Astaire dance brilliantly ... Cole Porter's music is worthy of his genius, and the settings and costumes are as striking and effective as any we've seen." —Herald Tribune

"M-G-M's 'Broadway Melody of 1940', melodious, sensational; funny gags throughout. The kind of merry musical movie which can not miss." —Post

"Astaire and Powell new dancing team in a happy musical. One of the pleasantest in a long, long time ... replete with good music by Cole Porter." —Mirror

"Even M-G-M hasn't done a better musical unless it was 'Great Ziegfeld'." —Brooklyn Eagle

"Gay, lively ... A treat of major proportions." —Daily News

"Audience enthusiastic. Gay and sparkling entertainment." —World-Telegram

"It's good to welcome Fred Astaire, Eleanor Powell and George Murphy back to the screen. Big musical numbers, with laughs and expert dancing." —Sun

"Superior ... Mr. Astaire's rhythmic arabesques even more fascinatingly intricate than ever before! Miss Powell blends in beautifully." —Times

"Handsome, racy and tuneful ... the routines leave you gasping with their brilliance. Effervescent screen entertainment." —Journal-American

"BY COMMISSION"

HOW would you like to have this industry operated by a Federal Motion Picture Commission? A sparkling demonstration of what it might be like is currently afforded by the activities of the Federal Communications Commission pertaining to television.

As has been so often observed here, the broadcasting institution is the first of the industries to be born and cultured entirely under the domination of government control. That has been going on now these twenty years, through which, most rapidly of late, there has been arising among the bureaucrats a philosophy of government utterly at variance with the concepts under which this America and its business evolved with conspicuous advantages to the whole people.

Tuesday night Mr. James Lawrence Fly, chairman of the FCC, took to the air to defend the considerably criticized proceedings of that body in rebuking the enterprise of the Radio Corporation of America in seeking to merchandise television receivers, after having had the commission's approval of a limited presentation of advertising material by television transmission.

The commission's approval was, after RCA announced sets for sale, rescinded, and now Mr. Fly promises to rescind the rescinding "soon."

The defense of this fast-and-loose performance is that it just might be that the exploitation now, with wide distribution of sets, would tend to freeze the technological progress of the art of television, or in the event of changes in standards might find the consumers in possession of sets that would become useless.

In the next breath the chairman observed that "we neither have nor desire any regulatory power over the sale of receivers or over advertising."

Mr. Fly of course meant the advertising of receivers for sale. His statement about power over such activities lacked a great deal of fundamental sincerity. It is more than obvious that because of objection to RCA's advertising announcements, about which he could directly do nothing, he and his commission did all that could be done by indirection, the cutting off of revenues to support the development. He says in effect to television that it can advertise and sell sets, but it cannot carry on a business to support the new art, save by the whim of the FCC.

SEEKING to defend the position Mr. Fly has insisted that television is unique among the industries in that the receiver and transmitter must fit "as the key fits the lock," whereas he considers that a 1905 automobile and a 1920 radio set will still work. That is merely his fine-spun phraseology of a "sea lawyer." His 1905 motor car would be a menace in any village street, totally incompetent to function in modern traffic. His 1920 radio set would deliver only a fraction of what the present transmitters put on the air.

Something in the vicinity of fifteen millions of dollars has been invested in television up to this time. It wants to go to work. FCC says it wants perfection, first. Who is to judge, the business which has to succeed and survive by performance, or a remote bureau with nothing at stake but its politics?

THE scientific, industrial, technological attainments of the United States have been had by interaction between manufacturers, purveyors and the customers. Competition has taken care of progress, development and the continuous process of elimination of the obsolete.

American society, beyond all others, has existed by doing business, in a free field. This is a nation of commerce. Invasion of that freedom is destructively revolutionary.

Additionally, it may be observed that Mr. Fly appears to have been taking a special advantage of his position by taking to the air and its audience. The criticism which he was seeking to meet appeared in the printed pages of the press, quite another audience. Also, incidentally, concerned as the FCC is about radio standards, certain attentions to matters of rhetoric, grammar and diction would seem to be indicated.

"ESCAPIST MARKET"

FROM time to time, as you may perhaps remember, remarks have been made on this page about the subject of entertainment and what is entertainment, with a certain bearing on the efforts of persons who considered themselves laden with significances and messages of social import.

Interesting relevancy, pertaining to the function of the amusement screen, is observable in a review of the foreign films markets of the last year just issued by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce in Washington, in the course of which it is said:

"In passing, it is interesting and important to note that the war has already brought about a marked change in 'film tastes' in the belligerent countries. Where during normal times the best revenue pictures were those with historical and romantic subjects, there is now a keen desire for pictures such as comedies, mystery stories or any kind of light but engrossing entertainment that is likely to afford escape from wartime anxieties. In some markets of the warring nations, sad and morose scenes are actually barred by censorship boards.

"Exhibitors in some markets are taking pains to emphasize in their advertisements the cheerful and enlivening character of their programs.

"It goes without saying that our American producers and distributors are preeminently well-equipped to supply films that will satisfy these tastes which are now dominant throughout great regions of the earth."

THERE is currently widespread discussion in the daily press of the proper functions of the theatre screen in relation to social issues and problems. Often quoted is the printed observation of Mr. Frank Nugent, in the New York Times,

This Week in the News

No Neely Bill?

ADJOURNMENT of Congress by June 1st was foreseen Monday by Senate and House leaders as pointing to the strong possibility that progress of the Neely anti-block booking bill, now pending in the House, may be halted by lack of time rather than by industry opposition. The measure passed the Senate at an earlier session.

With less than two months of the session remaining, it was pointed out at the Capital this week that there is a real possibility that adjournment will come with the measure still in the hands of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, where it is now awaiting hearings which probably will not start before May. Its sponsors had first predicted a hearing for some time in March, then April.

It is estimated that the taking of testimony could not be concluded before well into May and that, thereafter, considerable time would be required for the committee to come to a decisison and write a comprehensive report.

In informed Washington circles, the success or failure of the current negotiations for out-of-court settlement of the Department of Justice "key" New York anti-trust suit was seen as having a decided influence upon the future of the Neely legislation, any "consent" decree probably precluding any necessity for anti-block selling legislation.

Failure of the negotiations, it was said, in Washington, will result in the Justice and Commerce Departments sending to the House Committee a strong recommendation that the Neely measure be enacted. Should the development of a "consent" decree seem possible, however, they are expected to suggest that the Neely bill be laid aside, at least until experience has shown how new circuit-distributor policies adopted by the companies work out.

It was disclosed this week at the Capital that the two departments were asked for their views on the Neely bill some time ago, but both have withheld presentation of their opinions because of the "consent" decree negotiations.

'Pulp' Horror & Sex

TWO WEEKS AGO it was the film-news commentator of the air who set out to clean house and raise standards (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, March 16, page 8): last week it was the songwriter, aiming at "hot blues" stag-and-smoker numbers (MPH, March 30, Page 9); this week it's the newsstand "pulp" magazine publisher who would bring back a business that admittedly has "gone to the dogs" because of fallen standards.

Taking its cue from "the setup worked successfully in the movie industry," the Frank A. Munsey Company, publishers of "pulp" for 58 years, on April 20th will take the lead, in the editorial columns of some of its 16 magazines, for the establishment of a Bureau of Censorship, "where the decency and cleanliness of the magazines can be adjudged beforehand."

Bearing a relationship of reasons similar to those which caused Hollywood to adhere to its Production Code, the Munsey Company feels that such self-regulation would regain lost readers, publishers of stability would regain the confidence of their readers, and readers would have good stories that they need not be ashamed of reading.

The editorial challenge to magazine publishers will lay the blame for the present predicament to "the horror and sensational magazines, on whose covers you see half-clad women being tortured or attacked by deformed caricatures of men—or the enactment of some perverted crime depicted in terrifying detail"; it's these magazines "that have tarred all with the same brush."

Pictorial presentations of Hollywood pictures and personalities are today used extensively in most of the "pulp" newsstand magazines of the "horror and sex" type, the subject matter, for the most part, coming from the dusty files of the industry's past history.

Zanucks' Taxes

PETITION for the recovery of $730,575 of additional U. S. income taxes assessed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue at Washington against Darryl Francis Zanuck, head of production of Twentieth Century-Fox, and against Virginia Zanuck, his wife, on their 1935 income tax returns, was carried, Tuesday, by the Zanucks, to the United States Board of Tax Appeals for review.

The additional taxes— $438,450 levied against Mr. Zanuck and $292,125 against Mrs. Zanuck—were imposed by the Internal Revenue Bureau as a result of its computing the Zanucks' acquisition of Twentieth Century-Fox stock as income, after Mr. Zanuck and Joseph M. Schenck had merged Twentieth Century with Fox Films, in 1935, whereas the Zanucks contend that the Twentieth Century-Fox stock was issued to replace Fox Film stock held prior to the merger.

Rather than a deficiency of $730,575 the Zanucks claim they overpaid on their 1935 returns by some $900.

Harry Kadis, former "ace" U. S. Internal Revenue agent, was arrested in Los Angeles, Monday, on a writ of attachment, following his alleged refusal to appear before the federal grand jury in New York and testify on his activities in investigating the 1935 merger of Twentieth Century Productions and Fox Films Corporation. Mr. Kadis on Wednesday waived a removal hearing before United States Commissioner David Head in Los Angeles and said he would leave Saturday for New York.

His attorneys, Greg Bautzer and Bentley Ryan, had intended to contest removal because of the former United States agent's poor health and because of a technical defect in the writ of attachment which had been served on him.

Mr. Kadis was with the Department of Internal Revenue for 17 years, but was recently discharged.

Having reputedly collected more tax money for the Government than any other agent, Mr. Kadis had been assigned to investigate the union of Twentieth Century Productions and Fox Films, the Government believing that additional taxes should have been paid.

The U. S. Bureau of Internal Revenue, Tuesday, ruling that the Charles Chaplin Film Corporation had failed in its 1937 income tax return to take an adequate deduction for depreciation and had included too much in gross income, announced that it had credited the company with a total of $22,989.

that his definition of entertainment is not "that which amuses", but "that which interests".

Mr. Nugent's formula, propounded before he had made a Hollywood writer's contract, would be far from guidance to an entertainment art. Your editor can remember a great deal that was of special and extraordinary interest to him that would not in his opinion be entertainment. For instance, once as a reporter, he observed the stirring performance of a whole town of fifteen thousand persons go mad and burn a man—the wrong man—at the stake. That would make quite a sequence in a picture. Interest is not necessarily entertainment.

The formula offered would authorize a marquee line:"Come in and suffer—always something to worry about."

30 More for Griffith

THIRTY THEATRES in Oklahoma and Missouri were taken over last Saturday by a new company headed by L. C. Griffith, president of the Griffith Amusement Company, in one of the largest circuit acquisitions in recent years and the biggest to be effected by a circuit defendant in one of the Government's anti-trust prosecutions.

The 30 theatres were formerly operated by the Southwestern Theatres, Inc., and the new company will be known as Griffith-Southwestern Theatres, Inc. The circuit includes eight houses in Tulsa, three in Oklahoma City, others in Picher, Pawhuska and Chickasha, Okla., and Springfield, Mo.

The announcement of the new company was made by Henry S. Griffing, secretary of Griffith-Southwest and general counsel for the Griffith interests. Mr. Griffing said that the operations of the 80 theatres owned by the Griffith Amusement Company in Oklahoma and Texas would not be affected by the acquisition of the new houses. The purchase price was reported at $500,000.

Who'll Have "Life"?

THE UNITED STATES FILM SERVICE, Uncle Sam's documentary-film producer, is going right ahead with the theatrical distribution of Pare Lorentz' "The Fight for Life," first Government feature made available for public theatre showing.

The U. S. Film Service in Washington Tuesday extended "invitations" to 29 independent film distributors to submit terms on which they would release the picture—the terms to pay strict attention to the fact that exhibitors will be charged rentals to show this film that was made from funds diverted from WPA relief, as charged in Congress (MOTION PICTURE HERALD, March 30, page 13).

The film, portraying childbirth in the slums, already has been rejected by the Loew Circuit, condemned by the Maternity Association Center of New York, and placed in a "separate classification" by the National Legion of Decency.

Two Sounds

BECAUSE Leopold Stokowski made, at the same time, two recordings with the Philadelphia orchestra, one for the Bell Laboratories, an editorial in last week's issue confused that with Mr. Stokowski's special recording, by a new R.C.A. Photophone system, for the Walt Disney cartoon entitled "Fantasia." The recordings are separate, how different in principle remains to be demonstrated. The Telephone demonstration will be at Carnegie Hall April 10. "Fantasia" is said to be scheduled to start its roadshow career in November.

That Nick Case

PROBABLY beginning another important battle for "the freedom of the press," and arising from the many trials and mistrials of John P. ("Big") Nick, deposed St. Louis projectionist union leader, the citation of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch and its editor and cartoonist, for contempt of court, was confirmed Wednesday, in St. Louis, by Thomas J. Rowe, circuit judge, whose decisions in the Nick affair were criticized by the newspaper. Judge Rowe fined the newspaper $2,000; fined Ralph Coghlan, editor, $200 and sentenced him to 20 days in jail; and fined Daniel R. Fitzpatrick, the newspaper's cartoonist, $100 and sentenced him to 10 days in jail. Sheriff James Fitzsimmons took the two newspapermen into custody.

The criticism was made, by editorial and cartoon, on the dismissal on March 4th of state representative Edward M. Brady, on a charge of extorting $10,000 from St. Louis theatre owners in 1936. Brady had been indicted with Nick, on that charge. Nick had been acquitted shortly before, after three mistrials. Judge Rowe sat in those cases.

However, Circuit Judge Ernest Oakley has since held that Nick and Clyde Weston, deposed business agent of the projectionists' union, Local 143, should be permanently enjoined from interfering with, or control of, the union. He has invalidated the membership cards of about 60 members who joined during the Nick regime, and he has ordered Nick to pay back to the union the $10,000 which he said the man received from Brady.

The Post-Dispatch had remarked on the fact that one court disagreed with another.

Nick's demand that the state supreme court review Judge Oakley's verdict was denied this week. See page 14.

UA Stays in MPPDA

UNITED ARTISTS CORPORATION has rescinded its withdrawal from the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., and, at the second and final session of the MPPDA's annual meeting, on Wednesday afternoon, at headquarters in New York, Maurice Silverstone, UA's chief of operations, was reelected to the directorate. Notice of UA's resignation from the Hays organization was submitted by its attorneys Thursday morning, August 31, 1939, six months in advance, as required by by-laws.

UA producer Walter Wanger was elected a new board member, and UA producers Sol Lesser and Hal Roach were reelected. The Hays board now has on its roster the largest single block of members affiliated with one company. The only other member company having more than one director is Warner Brothers, with Harry M. and Major Albert Warner both reelected.

The following additional MPPDA board members were reelected: Barney Balaban, Nate J. Blumberg, Jack Cohn, Cecil B. DeMille, E. W. Hammons, Edgar B. Hatrick, Will H. Hays, Frederick L. Herron, Sidney R. Kent, George J. Schaefer and Nicholas M. Schenck.

Mr. Hays was reelected president for the nineteenth consecutive year.

Extras' 'New Deal'

THE CENTRAL CASTING CORPORATION, the group which parcels out extra jobs in Hollywood for the majors' studios, has been criticized variously on several grounds: politics, job sales, favoritism, "muscling-in" by racketeers and otherwise accused of irregularities. A reorganization was ordered Tuesday by the Association of Motion Picture Producers, following a five-month investigation by private detectives working for the Screen Actors Guild.

Y. Frank Freeman, president of the Producers Association, will, accordingly, appoint a committee which will have power to make any changes deemed necessary in the system of hiring "atmosphere" players.

The investigation by the Actors Guild was said to involve only one per cent of the membership. However, the local police and even Mr. Edgar Hoover's G-Men are reported to be checking up on charges that "eastern hoodlums" are trying to turn the extra business into a racket. Some Actors Guild members have been complaining of being "roughed-up" and "shoved around" by "extras."

The Central Casting Corporation was organized on December 4, 1925, to correct the many abuses which had prevailed for years, bringing order out of chaos.

CAPITAL TALKS ABOUT THAT 'CONSENT' DECREE

Some Form of Agreement Reported Reached on Many of the Leading Issues Involved in Anti-Trust Suit

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Out of a confusion of reports and rumors, speculations and observations, predictions and predilections, Washington sees gradually coming to light a picture of United States Government officials and motion picture industry legal and corporate executives moving to reach a middle ground where they can settle the "key" New York anti-trust prosecution of the Department of Justice without lengthy and expensive trial, while at the same time effecting a "cure" for the practices which the U. S. claims are perpetrated monopolistically and coercively by the large companies in discrimination against independents. The trial is scheduled for May 1st.

Report Part Agreement

So far, the effecting of a settlement through a "consent" decree, or its equivalent, is a matter of negotiation, as is generally known in New York, Washington and other interested quarters, but reliable Washington word has it that the negotiations have brought some form of agreement with respect to many of the major issues involved. Any opinion at this time on eventualities would be pure conjecture. Possibilities or probabilities of effecting a settlement rise and fall with the daily tides, the latest word reaching Washington from Broadway indicating that not all of the eight company defendants are in accord on the manner and method of settlement. Some of them reportedly consider the "terms of truce" too severe in their requiring virtually a brand new fabrication of the sales structure.

The basis of much of the conversation is a set of recommendations made by the Department of Commerce, built on its year's discussions of the industry's difficulties with leaders of all branches of motion pictures, in 1939.

The normal procedure for effecting a consent decree is to obtain federal court ratification to a document designed previously as agreeable to both sides, and thereafter the Department of Justice would stand ready to prosecute any violations of the decree. There are some, however, who feel that any such decree, or "trade pactice platform" emanating therefrom, might even be made legislation, tacked on as a rider to the Neely anti-block booking bill now in Congress, a Neely Bill without the "onerous" synopsis clause.

Delivered to Department of Justice

The Department of Commerce report has not yet been released officially either to the press or to the "industry-at-large," but was delivered, sealed, some several days ago, to the anti-trust division of the Department of Justice.

However, beginning to trickle through are descriptions of certain of its passages, not the least important of which are its "suggestions" for a nationwide system of arbitration boards, composed of "outsiders," with much stronger "teeth" than were possessed by the arbitration boards of the old Film Boards of Trade of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, or by the arbitration-and-conciliation boards of the Blue Eagle of the old National Recovery Administration. Through these suggested boards would clear virtually every kind of dispute between independents and competing circuits and with distributors.

These "suggestions," too, would control film licensing and theatre leasing by circuits; and would preclude the necessity of anti block and blind selling legislation such as the Neely Bill (S. 280), now pending in Congress, by having sales made in small blocks instead of a complete season's product, and by providing for pre-screenings.

A finely defined trade practice code is also on the agenda of "suggestions."

Negotiations "On the Side"

All of the present negotiations are "on the side," so to speak. Department of Justice officials in Washington say, and with apparent truthfulness, that nothing is formally before them and adhere undeviatingly to their intention of carrying the suit to its scheduled trial May 1st.

However, since the Department repeatedly has announced that any consent decree which it accepts must be submitted to the Federal Court for approval, this is taken in informed Washington quarters to mean merely that, if an agreement is reached, the case will be laid formally before the court and the consent decree then introduced.

At the Department of Commerce, where the year's discussion with industry representatives developed a Department "plan" for solution of difficulties, officials said they were now out of the picture, their work having been completed with the making of their report and recommendations to the Department of Justice.

Washington "Won't Talk"

Nowhere in Washington will officials discuss the platform which is presumably being built as the basis for a proposed consent decree, or other form of settlement, but nevertheless gradually, though unofficially, the various subjects which must be dealt with are being disclosed.

Outstanding among these questions is that of circuit divorcement by five of the distributor defendants, which the Department of Justice has insisted all along it would demand, and which the Government now is said to be ready to drop provided the distributors make such changes in their selling policies as to eliminate the broad advantages claimed to have been held heretofore by their affiliated theatres to the discrimination of their independent competitors, and which brought all of the 50 or more U. S. and independent trust suits pending against the majors.

The similar advantages of the independent circuits also are to be dissipated, thus disposing of the basis on which the Government filed its several suits against such organizations (Griffith, Schine, et al), charging them with agreements with the distributors which worked to the disadvantage of non-circuit exhibitors.

There are some in Washington who confidently predict that if a consent decree is entered there will be no mention therein of theatre divorcement. This, it has been disclosed, was the subject of the greatest difference of opinion between Department of Commerce officials and the heads of the Department of Justice anti-trust division, with the Commerce Department representatives taking the attitude that, if at all possible, disorganization of the industry should be avoided and some method other than divorcement sought for solution of the affiliated circuit problem.

4 to 10 in Blocks

To this end, the Department of Commerce is said to have recommended that, instead of block-selling an entire year's production at one time, the distributors offer their pictures in groups of, say, from four to ten—after screening—and that no licensing be permitted which provided for service to theatres in more than one exchange district.

By offering pictures in small blocks, it was represented, the distributors will leave the way open for independent producers to sell their product, which, it is claimed in the Government's suit, has been impossible in the past because the major companies took all the time of the exhibitor's screen so long in advance that the independent had no chance.

By prohibiting licensing covering more than one exchange district, the ability of circuits to use their vast buying power to get deals which operate against their competitors would be eliminated.

As a further measure of protection to the independent exhibitor, the "suggestions," it is reported, embrace all the concessions contained in the distributors' ill-fated trade practice code of 1939, including a prohibition against the forcing of shorts, satisfactory cancelation privileges, elimination of score charges, and the like.

District Arbitrators

All this heads up to the point which Washington feels is considered most important by both the industry and the Government, that of arbi-

FIRST ORGANIZED OBJECTION VOICED

"We are unalterably opposed to a consent decree and are in favor of the Government prosecuting to the fullest extent the case against the motion picture monopoly," Allied Theatreowners of Connecticut voted to wire Thurman Arnold, U. S. Attorney General, at Washington, after a special luncheon-meeting at the Hotel Garde, New Haven, Tuesday.

"Our views regarding any possible settlement are expressed by our General Counsel, Abram F. Myers," the wire to Mr. Arnold added. It was signed by Lawrence C. Caplan, as executive secretary of the organization.

Boston's Independent Exhibitors, Inc., Allied affiliated, also is understood to be directing a message of similar tone to Mr. Arnold.

SUGGEST BLOCKS OF 4 TO 10 MAXIMUM

tration, and the plan provides for the setting up in each exchange district of a panel of well-informed, capable men with no connection with the industry, from whom selection could be made of an individual jointly agreeable to the distributor and exhibitor whose controversy he is to hear. This designation probably would be made through a central board which, in the event that two parties could not agree, would appoint a referee. The central board would be headed by a "national administrator."

The district arbitrator would then hear the dispute and render a decision, in which he could assess the costs of the proceeding against either or both contestants and could impose such penalties for liquidated damages as he saw fit in cases where the act of one party caused a monetary loss to the other.

Before these arbitrators would come all controversies over protection, overbuying and other exhibitor-distributor trade relations problems.

Exhibitors and distributors, themselves, once their case went to arbitration, would have no standing other than that of pleader and respondent.

Appeals to Central Board

Appeals from unsatisfactory decisions of the Board of Arbitrators would be heard by a central arbitration board, probably designated by the federal court under the consent decree, to be heard by a neutral member with technical advice given by two other members representing, respectively, distribution and exhibition.

Present proposals contemplate a nominal assessment of 5 or 10 cents on each picture licensed anywhere in the United States to meet the costs of maintaining the boards.

(Note: Reports in New York Tuesday indicated that regulations governing the establishment and functioning of arbitration boards as now proposed might prove fatal to the current efforts to reach an out-of-court settlement of the Government's New York anti-trust suit.)

Certain conditions sought by the Government on the settlement, defendants in the suit feel, might require enabling legislation before they can be accepted.

Vital Factors

The boards would be vital industry factors under any consent decree which may be reached and the defendants, as well as the Government, may be expected to guard their interests jealously in determining their set-up and functions, it was reported.

Personnel of the boards is of first importance to both sides and an agreement on this point alone was said to be regarded in some quarters as likely to be most difficult, even to the point of endangering an ultimate settlement of the suit.

Under the plan suggested, every sort of controversy which might arise between exhibitor and distributor could be taken to arbitration. Unlike some of the arbitration systems used in the past, there could be no claims that it was "loaded" in favor of any interest, since the men refereeing the cases would be mutually selected and would themselves have no interest in the industry or the matters at issue.

The aim of the Department of Commerce in developing the suggestions which are now being considered is described in Washington as being intended to free the industry as much as possible from actual, direct Government control while at the same time putting a strict check-rein upon any interest which attempted to use unfair methods. That, it is said, applies to exhibition as well as distribution, and the arbitration plan contemplates a curb on "hold-up" cases which

U.S. Lists 103 More Witnesses For Its Key New York Trust Suit

The United States Government, proceeding with its "key" New York trust prosecution of the major film companies, on Tuesday filed a supplemental bill of particulars listing 103 additional instances, involving 149 independent theatres, in which the majors are charged with coercion by either refusing to sell product, acquiring an interest in the independent theatre, or threatening to build in opposition. On March 6th, the Department of Justice filed 550 names of independents who were cited as having knowledge of monopoly in their territories.

The Government's new list, containing the name and place of the independent and the name of the major defendant who is accused of having coerced the independent, follows:

U.S. CHARGES COERCION IN NEW BILL

might be brought by exhibitors seeking to be bought off, by the provision that arbitration costs can be assessed against either party.

Government Must Open Files If Demanded

A delay in the scheduled start of trial of the Government's "key" New York anti-trust suit on May 1st appeared inevitable this week as the Government experienced its second consecutive setback in pre-trial skirmishes on Monday before Henry W. Goddard, federal judge, who will try the case.

Judge Goddard, in the federal district court, New York, directed the Government to provide the defendant film companies with detailed information and to "open its files" in Washington, if necessary, to defense counsel.

Paul Williams, trial lawyer for the Government, in response to the court ruling, said that he would comply with these instructions by Friday. His statement was made after Judge Goddard had said that the Government had not complied with a stipulation in which it had promised to provide details of acts called discriminatory, in addition to the names of witnesses.

The court session afforded a preview of the industry's "million dollar" legal battery.

Joseph Proskauer of the law firm of Proskauer, Rose and Paskus, and one of New York's outstanding corporation lawyers, made his first appearance in the case as counsel for Warners, having been retained only the day before. With him was Robert W. Perkins, Warner general counsel.

Also on hand were Thomas D. Thacher, former U. S. solicitor general, of counsel for Paramount. Appearing with him were A. C. Bickford of the Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett law firm; Austin C. Keough, Paramount general counsel, and Louis Phillips of the home office legal staff.

Colonel William J. Donovan of Donovan, Newton, Leisure & Lumbard, appeared for RKO with John Howley of the same firm. Monroe Goldwater of Goldwater & Flynn represented Keith-Albee-Orpheum.

John W. Davis, chief defense counsel for Loew's-M-G-M; Louis Frohlich of Schwartz & Frohlich, Columbia counsel; John Caskey of Dwight, Harris, Koegle & Caskey, 20th Century-Fox counsel, and Benjamin Pepper of O'Brien, Driscoll & Raftery, United Artists and Universal counsel, were among the other legal luminaries on hand.

In the course of the Friday court argument Mr. Williams admitted that the Government lacked detailed information as to monopoly claims in the production field. No investigation had been made of the situation in production since 1936, Mr. Williams said, and reports from Government agents dating from that year did not supply the Department of Justice with more than a general statement of conditions.

The Government was charged with prosecuting the suit without sufficient evidence to back its complaint after Mr. Williams had conceded that his information was limited.

Unless the Department of Justice comes forward with detailed evidence of anti-trust violations in the production field, the majors will apply for an order dismissing charges of discrimination in production set forth by the complaint, attorneys told Judge Goddard.

Questioned by Judge

Mr. Williams was questioned by the judge for reasons for agreeing to furnish detailed information if it did not have the information available. Mr. Williams explained that the Government always had maintained that it was bound to supply only those details of which it had personal knowledge.

Mr. Williams expressed willingness to open the Government's files in Washington to defense attorneys "if his superior approved." Mr. Williams made this offer to prove his contention that he was prepared to give the majors all available information.

In addition, attorneys took up the question of a pre-trial conference to simplify the issues and effectively to shorten the trial. Majors' counsel criticized the proposed admissions which the Government has asked the defendants to concede.

Cites Basic Dispute

Mr. Thacher, spokesman for the defendants, said that it was "utterly impossible" for the defendants to agree to a major part of the Government's proposals since there was a basic dispute as to definitions and the history of the industry.

Columbia would not concede that it was anything but an independent producer, Mr. Frohlich said.

In discussing the pre-trial conference, Mr. Williams said that the Government was attacking the fundamental conditions in the industry. It was the control of production, exhibition and distribution by the majors that the Government claimed was in violation of the Sherman anti-trust act, he said. As a result, the industry was not "open and competitive," he added.

Mr. Thacher, in reply, said that the defendants for the time being would withhold their hand but that they were prepared to prove on trial that any so-called discrimination was "strictly lawful."

Another reason why the trial may be delayed is that Mr. Davis and Ralph Harris, Twentieth Century-Fox attorney, are now engaged in the trial of a suit in the New York supreme court against a number of oil companies.

A third reason, and considered probably the strongest, is the settlement discussion now taking place in Washington.

U. S. Charges Coercion In More Trust Answers

The Government on Monday filed a second supplemental bill of particulars in its "key" New York trust suit, in the U. S. district court in New York in which it listed additional instances of alleged coercive acquisitions of theatres and of discriminatory selling practices.

The bill itemized 149 theatres in which the defendants are charged with obtaining an interest in 103 listed instances by refusing to sell product to the independent owner or threatening to open rival houses. Details of dates and methods are set forth. Names of the theatres appear in other columns.

A list of 68 instances in which "major distributors, including Columbia, permitted an exhibitor to overbuy motion pictures" also is annexed to the bill. In 28 instances Twentieth Century-Fox theatres were permitted to overbuy, the bill claimed. Paramount followed with 24 listings, then Warner Brothers with eight and RKO and Loew's with one each. The balance were independent houses.

Columbia received special attention in the Government statement. The bill detailed five instances in which the company is claimed to have prohibited the exhibition of its pictures as part of double bill and 38 examples where the company is claimed to restricted admission prices in houses to which it sold product.

BAIL DENIED BIOFF PENDING RULING

The Illinois supreme court on Tuesday denied the petition of Willie Bioff, studio union leader, for a writ of supersedeas and bail to allow him freedom pending decision to renew an appeal court ruling in 1922, which affirmed a Chicago jail sentence. Bioff had been free on bond to the lower court, after extradiction from California.

In St. Louis John P. "Big" Nick, deposed head of the city's projectionists' Local 143, and Clyde Weston, its deposed business agent, have been denied a review by the state supreme court, of a recent decision by Ernest Oakley, circuit judge, permanently enjoining them from interfering with, or controlling, the union.

Film Officials To Be Questioned by U. S.

William Kupper, western, and William Sussman, eastern, sales managers of Twentieth Century-Fox, were scheduled for questioning Wednesday, but the hearing was postponed due to another court engagement of John Caskey, attorney. Abe Montague, sales head of Columbia, was to be questioned before the weekend.

Government attorneys said this week that efforts were being made to arrange for the appearance of Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board of Paramount, and Darryl F. Zanuck, production chief for Twentieth Century-Fox.

Neil F. Agnew, vice-president of Paramount in charge of sales, last Thursday wound up his testimony by describing negotiations of his company for first run sales in the Governments list of 36 key cities. Most of Paramount's first run accounts have remained unchanged for a period of years, Mr. Agnew said.

$16,000,000 Loew Indebtedness Listed

Loew's, Inc., disclosed a fixed indebtedness of $16,081,000 in answers to the Government's New York trust suit interrogatories last week. The replies also said the company had no current outstanding loans. Out of 4,000,000 authorized shares of Loew common stock, 1,665,713 shares are outstanding, the company said. In addition, 136,722 shares of $6.50 cumulative preferred stock have been issued, the answers disclosed.

Fixed indebtedness is divided into two categories. Listed are $12,331,000 in 3½ per cent sinking fund debentures maturing in 1946 and which will be purchased or redeemed by a sinking fund created by semi-annual deposits of $375,000. Notes totaling $3,750,000 at 2¾ per cent maturing in 1944, payable at $375,000 annually from Feb. 1, 1940 constitute the remaining part of the indebtedness, the answer said.

U. S. Will Answer Columbia Questions

The Government will answer seven of Columbia's ten separate interrogatories in the New York suit, it was announced Monday after a conference between Louis D. Frohlich, Columbia counsel, and William P. Farnsworth, special attorney for the Department of Justice.

The seven answers will be in addition to the set of consolidated answers furnished all defendants by the Government.

SENATE, RETAILERS, BUSINESS HIT FCC FOR ITS STAND ON TELEVISION

FCC To Study Anew Policy on Television; Channel Dispute Over FM Broadcasting; Commission Ends Hearings

The Federal Communication Commission's order rescinding its grant for limited commercialization beginning September 1st, and ordering another television hearing, has occasioned vigorous protests which include a move in the United States Senate for an investigation into the Commission's action, a protest by the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York and by the dealer's section of the Electrical and Gas Association of New York.

Other groups also have objected to the order and newspaper criticized the FCC decision. A few of RCA's competitors privately have applauded the action.

FCC Chief in Defense

James L. Fly, chairman of the FCC, defended the Commission's position on television Tuesday night over a national Mutual and NBC-Red radio hook-up. The Commissioner explained that all action taken was to foster 'the young art' of television and to protect the public's interest.

The FCC head said, "Let me make it clear that we neither have nor desire any regulatory power over the sale of receivers or over advertising. But any action we take under our duty to license experimental operations and to encourage advances in radio, must of course be taken in the light of actualities."

Hints at "Extravagant Promotion"

"Our course can be influenced, for example, by the rare case where a licensee might engage in extravagant promotion of sales to people of modest incomes while failing to inform the public of the limited and experimental character of the service now available, and of the mobility of the service, where it appears that such activities threaten to make his system dominant among both transmitting stations and the public," Mr. Fly added.

In conclusion Mr. Fly praised the research activities of television inventors and encouraged the public who lived in areas where television is available and could afford receivers to buy sets and enjoy the new form of entertainment. First of all, he said, the Commission wanted the public to know all the facts before making any purchases.

Introduced by Lundeen

The resolution calling for the investigation of the FCC's action on television was introduced in the Senate on Monday by Senator Ernest Lundeen, Farmer-Laborite of Minnesota. If the measure were adopted the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee would determine whether the Commission had exceeded its authority and "whether it had interfered with the freedom of public and private enterprise."

On March 23d the Commission cancelled the television regulations and ordered the new hearing. Dissatisfaction with the RCA marketing campaign was given as the reason for the action. RCA published an advertisement in two New York newspapers and in radio and motion picture business publications announcing its television plans.

Authority Questioned

Senator Lundeen, in introducing his resolution asking for an investigation, said, "I am not at all sure that the FCC was ever delegated such authority as it is attempting to exercise in connection with television, and for that reason I believe that the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee should place the facts before the United States Senate." The resolution was referred to that committee.

The Senator also said, "I have read where an official of the Radio Corporation of America stated publicly that his company has spent about $10,000,000 in developing television and in trying to create a new art and a new industry. Unquestionably other interests have likewise spent tremendous sums and I, for one, do not believe that such development should be arbitrarily retarded by some bureau here in Washington."

New York Chamber Acts

On the same day the FCC action on television was criticized by Senator Lundeen, the Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York attacked the FCC action as did many other groups. The executive committee of the Chamber, in a report to be acted on Thursday by the whole organization, condemned the action of the Commission as "a demonstration of the lengths to which government bureaucracy can go in interfering with the legitimate functions of the American system of free enterprise."

200 Dealers in Sets Protest

Some 200 television-set dealers in the New York area, represented in the dealers section of the Electrical and Gas Association of New York, protested the action. The FCC television move occasioned by an attempt to sell more television receivers was said to have done "irreparable harm to public confidence in television." Mortimer H. Fogel, chairman of the section, wrote to the FCC urging that the Commission restore limited commercial operation of television.

Mr. Fogel estimated that the premature end of the campaign to sell television sets cost at least 5,000 potential jobs in factories, shops and offices.

Manufacturer Protests

One manufacturer, Robert Robins, head of the Catho-Ray Television Corporation, which was visited as well as the large laboratories on the recent FCC tour, threatened to sue the Commission for the harm done to his business. He asserted that the FCC had no authority to regulate the sale of receiving sets. Mr. Robins said, "That commission—it's a regular flying circus."

Dealers pointed out that the public seemed willing to purchase television sets at the present state of the art and further that the commission has no power to regulate merchandising. Liberty Music Shops, a retailer of radio and television equipment, addressed a letter to the Commission. The letter said in part, "We believe . . . the Commission is attempting to put its protective wings over the public to a degree which the public itself does not ask for nor desire. . . . We are convinced that the public does not wish to wait until a perfect receiving set is created."

The letter went on to point out that the public believes that standards will improve and has the right to buy sets now and not wait until the final stage of development.

FCC Target of Senate Attack for Delaying Commercialization; Chamber and Radio Dealers Protest

The eight-day hearing on Frequency Modulation before the Federal Communications Commission in Washington ended last Thursday with the whole radio industry indorsing the new broadcasting system. The Radio Corporation of America, expected to oppose FM, surprised the industry by completely indorsing the FM method of transmission and pleading for immediate commercialization. A total of 109 applications for FM licenses has been received by the Commission and only the problem of allocation of channels for FM has not been settled. FM supporters have asked for one of the channels used by television.

Part in Spectrum Unsettled

The hearings brought out that even the fundamental question of what part of the radio spectrum television is to operate is not yet settled. W2XBS, NBC's television station in New York and probably the most active in the country, operates on the channel which FM wants. It was said that television could operate as successfully, or more so, in a higher band. RCA-NBC, opposing a complete change, suggested that the No. 1 television channel be left for television in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles but elsewhere be given to FM. The compromise would permit only 5 FM stations in New York. There are four now and more than twice that number have applied.

Elmer W. Engstrom, director of general research for RCA Manufacturing Company, told the FCC it would cost the company $100,000 if the television channel was given over entirely to FM. It also was said that the NBC station in New York, W2XBS, would be off the air several months if it had to change its wave length.

Frank W. Wozencraft, general solicitor for RCA, told the Commission, "We believe the public interest will best be served by the Commission action giving frequency modulation a green light." He also said that RCA believed that "ultra-high frequency broadcasting is ready for commercial use" and concluded that "ultra-high frequency broadcasting, when sound alone is broadcast, should use frequency modulation because of technical advantages."

W. C. Lent, assistant director of development and research for RCA, presented an allocation plan for FM.

Wr. Wozencraft said television will not use FM, although Major Armstrong, FM inventor, has expressed the opinion that FM would be better than the regular AM for television.

Mr. Lent explained that 11 FM channels would be needed to give one station each to 64 Eastern metropolitan areas and 22 would be needed for complete national allocation.

Educational organizations and others also asked the FCC to refrain from interference with the 41-42 m.c. band, now assigned to non-commercial broadcasting.

Although the RCA representatives backed FM, they did not agree with Major Armstrong that FM would rapidly replace regular broadcasting.

Thirteen FM stations are now licensed and in operation. Nine construction permits have been granted and 87 additional applications received. Twenty-two television stations have been licensed and 27 applications are pending.

THREE FILMS SHARE PREMIERE SPOTLIGHT

Gala Openings for "Dark Command", "One Million B. C." and "Biscuit Eater"

Republic's "Dark Command," the Hal Roach-United Artists "One Million B.C." and Paramount's "The Biscuit Eater" are the latest productions to receive world premieres in special exploitation coverage.

The "Dark Command" had its premiere in Lawrence, Kan., Thursday.

"One Million B.C." is set for Friday in Louisville, Ky.

"The Biscuit Eater" will bow at Albany, Ga., next Thursday with exhibitors, trade press and newspaper representatives the guests of Paramount on a trip that starts by plane out of New York on Wednesday.

"Dark Command" Opens

"Dark Command" had its world premiere Thursday night in two theatres in Lawrence, Kan., the Granada and Dickinson, with James R. Grainger, president of Republic, and Herbert J. Yates, president of Consolidated Film Industries, in attendance. The film will continue at the Dickinson for a regular run.

Two hundred exhibitors in the midwest area were to attend the opening and celebration staged by the Lawrence Board of Trade and city officials. A parade Thursday afternoon was to be climaxed by the burning of a replica of the frontier town as it was in the days of Quantrill the Raider, whose exploits are the basis of the picture. William Saal of the Republic studio supervised arrangements.

A studio delegation included several players, Claire Trevor, John Wayne, Roy Rogers and George (Gabby) Hayes among them.

Circuit executives who were to attend included R. J. O'Donnell, Interstate, Dallas; Harry Arthur, St. Louis; Elmer C. Rhoden, Fox Midwest, Kansas City; Ralph Goldberg, Omaha; Howard Federer, Dent circuit, Lincoln, Neb.; Ed Dubinsky, Kansas City, and Clarence Schultz, Commonwealth Theatres, Kansas City.

Republic franchise owners in the party were Irving Mandel, Chicago; Gilbert Nathanson, Minneapolis; E. J. Tilton and Harry Warren, Omaha and Des Moines; A. C. Bromberg, Atlanta; Claude C. Ezell and W. G. Underwood, Dallas; Sol Davis and Morris Loewenstein, Oklahoma City; Nat Steinberg and Barney Rosenthal, St. Louis, and A. B. Busby, Little Rock.

Premiere of Hal Roach Film

The world premiere of the Hal Roach production, "One Million B.C.," will take place Friday at Loew's State theatre in Louisville, Ky. The Hal Roach and United Artists exploitation staffs have formulated a campaign to launch the film.

The campaign has been built around the visit of Victor Mature, who plays the leading role in the film and is regarded by the Hall Roach organization as an important new discovery. Louisville is Mature's native town. Mayor J. D. Scholtz of Louisville and Governor Keen Johnson have indicated their intention to participate in the festivities. Jules Seltzer, of Hal Roach's publicity department in Hollywood, was in Louisville this week to arrange the advance exploitation.

Set Georgia Preparations

Trade press and newspaper representatives have been invited by Paramount to attend the world premiere of "The Biscuit Eater" at the Albany theatre, Albany, Ga., next Thursday. The group will leave New York by plane on Wednesday, spending the night in Atlanta, and continuing from there to Albany the following day for the premiere.

Oscar Morgan, Paramount southern division sales manager, will head a home office delegation attending the opening.

Among theatre operators who have signified their intention to attend the opening are William K. Jenkins of the Lucas-Jenkins circuit; R. B. Wilby of the Wilby-Kincey circuit; M. A. Lightman of Malco Theatres, Memphis; Mrs. Alma King, theatre executive of Brunswick, Ga.; Clark Gurley of Bainbridge, Ga.; Joe Schmit of Valdosta, and R. H. Dunn of Camilla.

Y. Frank Freeman, Jr., left Hollywood March 25th with a print of the film which he was to show in nine key cities to Paramount exchange managers and exhibitors. The cities are Salt Lake, Des Moines, Minneapolis, Chicago, Memphis, Dallas, Beaumont, New Orleans and Atlanta.

Billy Lee, nine-year-old star of the film, will make a series of personal appearances in connection with the opening of the picture throughout Georgia.

"Pinocchio" Gross

"Pinocchio," Walt Disney's second feature length cartoon, grossed an estimated $240,000 in its run of seven weeks and five days at the Center theatre, Rockefeller Center, New York. This compares with a gross of $530,000 for the five weeks' run of the producer's first feature length cartoon, "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" at the Radio City Music Hall in January-February, 1938.

The indicated RKO-Disney net share of the gross at the Center is $125,000, after advertising and premiere costs are paid. The producer-distributor's share of "Snow White's" five-week gross was approximately $150,000. The gross rental on "Pinocchio" was approximately $168,000.

The company reports that "Pinocchio" has been held over in 150 situations throughout the country following reports of big grosses for its opening days of Saturday, Sunday and Monday.

The film opened in London March 18th and on its first day topped the gross of "Snow White" by 10 per cent, according to the company.

"Rebecca" Gross

The Selznick-International production "Rebecca" grossed a total of $194,000 in 21 theatres in 19 cities for opening five-day runs, according to Jack Schlaifer and Harry Gold, United Artists vice-presidents in charge of western and eastern sales, respectively. The period included the Easter weekend.

The film, which opened at the Radio City Music Hall, New York, last Thursday played to 117,735 persons in the first four days of its engagement.

The picture is playing in four theatres in the Miami area simultaneously, United Artists officials report. The theatres are the Lincoln and Surf, Miami Beach, and the Miami and Mayfair, Miami.

RADIO TO HERALD "LIBERTY" FILMING

Two coast-to-coast radio programs, taking in two large networks on successive nights, will herald the start of shooting on "The Tree of Liberty", which is being produced by Frank Lloyd for Columbia. Both broadcasts, arranged by the Columbia exploitation department, will emanate from Williamsburg, Va., where the filming will begin.

On Monday evening, Dr. Harry Hagen's "True or False" program will be broadcast from the Phi Beta Kappa Hall on the campus of the College of William and Mary over the National Broadcasting Company's Blue Network. Six college girls will compete against Cary Grant, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Richard Carlson, Frank Lloyd and two other members of the troupe.

On Tuesday night the "We the People" program will hold a remote control broadcast from Williamsburg featuring members of the "Tree of Liberty" production staff and cast. A Columbia Broadcasting System feature, the program will emphasize that the principal players, more than 40 technicians and 15 baggage cars full of costumes were transported 3,000 miles to shoot exterior scenes.

Montague Westmore, Studio Makeup Artist, Dead at 39

Funeral services were held on Monday, in Hollywood, for Montague, "Monty," Westmore, makeup artist, who died last Saturday of heart disease, at the age of 39. Mr. Westmore was the eldest of the Westmore brothers, Perc, Ern, Walter and Hamilton, all makeup men, and Frank, in school.

Mr. Westmore had been under contract to the Selnick International studios and had been in charge of makeup for "Gone With the Wind." He had been borrowed recently by Warner Brothers, to aid Perc Westmore, head makeup man in that studio.

Mrs. Louise Dunlap Dies

Mrs. Louise Dunlap, mother of Scott R. Dunlap, vice-president in charge of production for Monogram Pictures, and a former musical comedy and vaudeville singer, died Sunday at 80 at her home in Hollywood. Funeral services were held Tuesday at the Hollywood Cemetery Chapel.

SALES MEETING SEASON STARTS; FIVE SET DATES

Twentieth - Fox Will Be First to the Wire with Annual Gathering Beginning Next Friday in Chicago

The distributors' 1940 sales convention officially opens next Friday, in Chicago, where Twentieth Century-Fox Film, first to the wire of the ten companies this year, will signal the formal beginning of the formulation, on paper, of the quantity and identity of product for 1940-41, and the sales policies and procedure to govern the sale of that product, subject to changes in industry operations which can be expected from any "consent" decree or other settlement of the Government's anti-trust actions. (See page 12.)

Three Weeks Behind 1939

And so the distributors are about to take the first step which will send their field salesmen to the doors of regular and prospective exhibitor customers with portfolios on a line of new product. The convention season opening this time parallels last year's, which started March 18th, when Warners took the lead. It is running less than four weeks behind 1939, despite the trials and tribulations of recent months with labor, foreign markets, and legal interferences.

The distributors this year, however, are much further advanced as a group with convention dates and product totals and costs set in advance, though tentative.

It will be noted from the following summary that production totals for the 1940-41 season, on early promises, differ little from plans for the present season.

Twentieth Century-Fox will again have 52 features, budgeted at $30,000,000.

Monogram Convention will be held April 21st-22nd in Dallas. 26 features and 24 westerns are planned.

RKO has scheduled 50 to 52, budgeted at $20,000,000. The convention will be in New York, May 27th-30th.

Republic plans 50 features and four serials. The convention will be in late May or early June.

Universal is arranging 43 features; convention in May, probably in Atlantic City.

Warner Brothers promised 48 for the current year; figures for the new season are not yet available. The convention is tentatively scheduled for July.

United Artists promises 30 features, to cost about $29,000,000.

Paramount plans 30 top-budget pictures and as many "B" films.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lists tentatively 52 features, convention probably in June, in Chicago.

Columbia still is to be heard from. It promised 42 features and 16 westerns for the 1939-40 schedule.

The Twentieth Century-Fox sales policy for the 1940-41 schedule will be discussed by 248 delegates at the Drake hotel in Chicago April 12, 13 and 14. Executives, salesmen and bookers of the United States and Canada will be present.

Herman Wobber, general manager of distribution, will preside at all meetings. The principal addresses will be given by Sidney R. Kent, president, and Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board, who will come from Hollywood.

52 Fox Features, 52 Shorts

The program of 52 features, 52 shorts and 104 issues of Movietone News will be discussed in detail and sales plans explained to the exchange men.

The home office delegation will leave New York for Chicago next Wednesday on a special train.

The executives attending will be Joseph M. Schenck, Sidney R. Kent and Felix A. Jenkins.

The sales department, led by Mr. Wobber, will be represented by the following: Jack Sichelman, Martin Moskowitz, William Sussman, William Kupper, William Gehring, William Clark, E. H. Collins, Clarence A. Hill, Theodore A. Shaw, Roger Ferri, Jacob Bloom, Isadore Lincer, H. A. Mersay, Eugene McEvoy and S. J. Epstein.

The censorship department will be represented by Miss H. G. Baker and the legal department by Percy Heiliger.

Truman H. Talley is to lead the contingent from Movietonews, which will include Edmund Reck, Lowell Thomas, Ed Thorgersen, Lew Lehr, Vyvyan Donner and Tony Muto.

The advertising and publicity department, headed by Charles E. McCarthy will include Arch Reeve, E. W. Wingart, W. C. Wilbert, Rodney Bush, Morris Kinzler and Eddie Solomon. The ad sales department will be represented by Edward Hollander and Jerry Novat.

Walter J. Hutchinson is to lead the foreign department group.

Others to attend are Irving A. Maas, L. F. Whelan and E. S. Fraser. Paul Terry, Harvey Day and W. Weiss will represent Terrytoons.

Guests will include Spyros Skouras, William Powers, Elmer Rhoden, W. J. Fitzgerald, Alan Friedman, Edward Zabel, Milton Hossfeld and Aubrey Schenck.

Delegates from the company's exchanges in 37 cities in the United States and Canada will be present, including seven district managers, 35 managers, nine sales manager, 99 salesmen, 35 bookers, two office managers, one ad sales manager, two assistant managers, two student salesmen and two secretaries.

Howard Hughes is reported to be negotiating with Twentieth Century-Fox providing for the release of four pictures in the 1940-41 season. The pictures are budgeted at $750,000 to $1,000,000 each.

The budget on "Brigham Young" will reach about $2,250,000 and production is expected to take five months.

Monogram Sales Meeting

Monogram has scheduled its annual sales convention at Dallas on April 21st-22nd so that franchise holders and branch managers may attend the annual Variety Club convention before the company meeting. Production plans and sales policies will be discussed. New plans call for 26 features and 24 westerns. The company on Tuesday made some new financial arrangements and additional convention plans. See page 44.

RKO Meets May 27th–30th

Ned E. Depinet announced that the ninth annual convention of RKO would be held in New York May 27th to 30th, in the Sert Room at the Waldorf-Astoria. The company will produce a total of 50 to 52 pictures and not 61-66 as reported from Hollywood last week.

The list of speakers will include George J. Schaefer, president; Phil Reisman, vice-president in charge of the foreign department; Cresson E. Smith, western and southern sales manager; A. W. Smith, Jr., eastern and Canadian sales manager; Harry J. Michalson, short subjects sales manager; Herb MacIntyre, captain of the Ned Depinet Drive and Walter Branson, last year's Drive captain and studio executives and independent producers.

District managers including Nat Levy, E. L. McEvoy, L. E. Goldhammer, Robert E. Mochrie, H. C. Cohen and L. M. Devaney will attend. All branch managers and salesmen from the 38 exchanges in the United States and Canada and special field men will be present.

The convention committee includes A. A. Schubart, manager of exchange operations; M. G. Poller, head of the playdate department; S. Barret McCormick, director of advertising and publicity; Leon J. Bamberger, sales promotion manager; W. J. McShea, assistant manager of exchange operations; L. E. Gaudreau, Rutgers Neilson and Harry Gittleson.

The budget on the 52 pictures planned will be from $18,000,000 to $20,000,000. The current season budget is $20,000,000. The 1940-41 product is expected to cost as much or more than the amount being spent this season. At least 20 top-budget pictures will be produced under the direction of Harry Edington and others will come from "outside" producers—Max Gordon and Harry Goetz, Herbert Wilcox, Towne and Baker, Orson Welles and Harold Lloyd.

Harry Edington was in New York this week for conferences with home office executives. S. Barret McCormick and Erich Pommer arrived from the Coast on Monday. Mr. Pommer will produce the RKO picture based on the Broadway play, "Two on an Island."

The RKO 1940-41 schedule includes the following pictures: two Charles Laughton, two Carole Lombard, one Ronald Colman, two Anna Neagle, two Cary Grant, two Ann Shirley, two Maureen O'Hara, one Irene Dunne and one Lucille Ball.

The period from April 13th to April 26th has been named Harry Michalson Weeks in honor of the short subject sales manager.

"Photo Finish" is listed as one of the most important pictures on the RKO 1940-41 schedule. The film will be produced and directed by David Butler. The original story was writ-

RCA AND EASTMAN ADD TO FAIR DISPLAYS

The Radio Corporation of America and Eastman Kodak have effected extensive additions and improvements to their displays for the 1940 New York World's Fair.

At the RCA exhibit a new 200-seat television theatre will enable visitors to see how television programs are produced and broadcast.

Changes in the Eastman Kodak exhibit include a new foyer and entrance to the Hall of Color, where 11 twin projectors will present color pictures.

ten by Mr. Butler, James Kern and James Edward Grant. The same men prepared the screen play.

May Convention for Universal

Universal plans one or more sales conventions in May, according to William A. Scully, general sales manager. It has not yet been determined whether a national convention or regional meetings will be held. Mr. Scully and William J. Heineman, western sales manager for Universal, have arrived at the studio for conferences on the new season's product.

Sears on West Coast

Gradwell L. Sears, Warner Brothers general sales manager, left Monday for studio conferences to formulate plans for the annual convention and decided on sales policies for the remaining pictures on this season's schedule. Mr. Sears said that "plans for what well may be the most unique sales convention in the history of the motion picture industry will be the subject of discussion with Burbank executives this week and ready for announcement in complete detail upon my return." Mr. Sears was accompanied to the Coast by Samuel Schneider, home office executive.

Forthcoming release on which sales policies are to be settled include: "The Sea Hawk," Errol Flynn; "All This and Heaven, Too," Bette Davis and Charles Boyer; "Torrid Zone," James Cagney, Ann Sheridan and Pat O'Brien; "'Til We Meet Again," Merle Oberon, George Brent and Pat O'Brien; "Saturday's Children," John Garfield, Anne Shirley and Claude Rains; "It All Came True," Ann Sheridan, Humphrey Bogart and Jeffrey Lynn.

"Sante Fe," starring Errol Flynn, is to be the 1941 successor to "Virginia City," according to an announcement by Warner Brothers. Robert Buckner, author of "Virginia City" will write the screen play.

Bronston with Roosevelt

Samuel Bronston's new production company has closed a deal with James Roosevelt's Globe Productions, involving financing for Globe, according to Wall Street reports. Globe Productions will be released through United Artists.

Negotiations are underway for William Anthony McGuire to form his own producing company and release through United Artists. The first of the proposed pictures is "Faith, Hope and Mary Potter," and Claudette Colbert would be sought for the lead. Charles Feldman, agent for Mr. McGuire, has opened negotiations with United Artists. Mr. McGuire is now a writer-producer for Twentieth Century-Fox, working on a life of Sam Dreben.

MGM Managers' Session

Thomas J. Connors, Eastern, Southern and Canadian division manager for MGM, held a two day meeting this week for district managers at the home office. Those scheduled to attend were E. K. O'Shea, New York; John J. Maloney, Pittsburgh; Robert Lynch, Philadelphia; Maurice Wolf, Boston; Charles E. Kessnich, Atlanta; Henry Nathason, general manager of Regal Films, Toronto or Gordon Lightsone, Regal sales manager. "Gone With the Wind" sales, Summer sales drive and other matters were to be discussed.

MGM has announced that Katharine Hepburn has signed a contract to play in "The Philadelphia Story," the Philip Barry play which has just completed a year's engagement at the Shubert theatre.

Columbia Sales Meeting

Columbia district managers and managers of branches without district supervision met Friday at the Gothham Hotel in New York for a conference with home office executives. A. Montague, general manager, presided. The "Montague Fifteenth Anniversary Campaign" has passed the half way point and Columbia reports that it has exceeded expectations.

District and branch managers scheduled to be present were Phil Dunas, midwestern division manager; Carl Shalit, central division manager; Sam Galanty, mideast division manager; Jerome Safron, western division manager; Nat Cohn, New York division manager, and the following branch managers: Phil Fox, Albany; Joe Miller, Buffalo; H. E. Weiner, Philadelphia and Irving Wormser, New York. Home office executives attending were Rube Jackter, Lou Weinberg, Louis Astor and Max Weisfeldt.

Three films will be made in England for Columbia by the Two Cities Film Company. The first film, based on a story concerning the use of radio in Germany will be produced by Mario Zampi, directed by Anthony Asquith and will star Clive Brook and Diana Wynyard.

Columbia will distribute "The Accidental Father" which Nat Ross will produce at the Biograph studio in New York. The picture will star Constance Bennett. Production is scheduled to begin in May. Richard Wallace will direct and Grover Jones will write the script.

John Stahl, after 10 years with Universal, has reported to Columbia for his first picture. He will have a voice in the selection of the story and of the stars to appear in the film.

New War, Foreign Product

Jesse L. Lasky, pioneer in motion pictures, at present a radio impresario, and intent upon resuming independent production through a major distributor, last week signed a contract with Sergeant Alvin C. York, World War hero, in Nashville, Tennessee. There probably will be a picture based on York's life; he will be technical adviser; Gene Fowler will write the story, Mr. Lasky said.

In the Twentieth Century-Fox Movietone News newsreel issues for the first part of this week, are footage taken by George Mejat, Movietone camerman now with the French Army, of Truman H. Talley, managing director of the newsreel, and Russell Muth, its European manager, touring the Maginot Line.

Edgar Lloyd is readying, in New York, a national release of the Czech historical film, "The Maidens' Guild of Kutna Hora."

MGM is expected to release "The Stars Look Down," British picture from the pen of A. J. Cronin, produced by I. Goldsmith, and starring Michael Redgrave and Margaret Lockwood.

World Pictures Corporation, in New York, has acquired distribution rights to the Lenauer International's French films, including "Pearls of The Crown," "The Puritans," "Crime and Punishment" and "Pasteur."

RKO will distribute the French picture "Double Crime in the Maginot Line" in all foreign areas except Canada, England and Europe.

The French Cinema Center has acquired the U. S. distribution rights to the French picture, "Heroes of the Marne," from Variety Film Distributors.

CALL CURRENCY AND QUOTA BAR IN SPAIN

Foreign department executives of the large companies last week heard reports on trade conditions in Spain from Ben Miggins of Twentieth Century Fox and Fred Lange of Paramount, both of whom were in New York on annual home office visits.

The reports of both foreign representatives are said to have pointed out continuing obstacles to American film distribution there. It was indicated that the currency embargo would stay on indefinitely. In addition, it was said, Spain's production quota requirement is a serious handicap due to the reported absence of necessary production facilities and equipment in the country.

Under existing conditions, it was explained, it does not appear possible to make a type of quota product in Spain which could be marketed profitably in other Spanish language markets.

Rodner Sets Production For Will Rogers Film

Harold Rodner, Warner Brothers executive and vice-president of the Will Rogers Memorial Hospital at Saranac Lake, N. Y., returned to New York this week from the coast, where he arranged for the production of the one-reel film which will be shown in theatres in the Will Rogers National Theatre Week, April 18 to 25.

About 3,000 prints of the subject will be distributed to theatres. All major studios participated in the production of the film which will feature Kay Kyser, Bette Davis, Judy Garland, Bing Crosby and others.

Columbia Wins Title Dispute Over Metro

Columbia Pictures may use the title, "Three Weeks Together," the title registration committee of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors ruled on Tuesday, over an MGM protest. The latter has the title right to "Three Weeks," the novel by Elinor Glynn, and it served notice, on Tuesday, that it would appeal from the committee's decision, to the MPPDA board of directors.

Columbia wants the title, "Three Weeks Together," for a British-made picture, starring Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier, which was known as "21 Days."

Ginsberg General Manager of Studio

Henry Ginsberg, for the past month assistant to Y. Frank Freeman, vice-president in charge of Paramount studio operations in Hollywood, Tuesday. Mr. Freeman said Mr. Ginsberg's duties would not conflict with those of George Bagnall, who is vice-president and executive studio manager, nor with those of T. Keith Glennan, manager of operations.

RKO Signs Hinsdell

Oliver Hinsdell has been signed to take full charge of the dramatic training of all RKO contract players.

PRESS-FILM RELATIONS SEEN BETTER, BUT HIGH AD RATES ARE PROTESTED

Comparatively Few Increases in Charges Recently Indicates Saturation Point Reached, Says Doob, as Appropriations Rise

Relations of theatre men generally with newspapers are now considered cordial. Amusement advertising rates are still called too high and editorial cooperation not all that it could be, but now exhibitor leaders say motion picture affairs are running smoothly in the placing by the industry of some $80,000,000 annually in advertising.

A year ago the attitude of the industry towards newspapers was summed up in an open letter which Arthur Schmidt of Loew's wrote to Editor and Publisher, newspaper trade journal. Theatre managers were called "stepchildren" in newspaper offices, lost somewhere between the business office and the editor's desk. At that time many film pages in newspapers were called slipshod.

The amusement rates, which are considerably higher than department store and other commercial advertising prices, are always a subject of controversy, traced in part to the fact that national and local rates in different cities and rates in the same town vary without apparent reason.

Few Rate Increases

Oscar A. Doob, advertising and publicity director of Loew's theatres, said that "there have been comparatively few rate increases despite the increased cost of publication for newspapers, which indicates that they were getting all the traffic could bear." On the other hand, he added, "It is so seldom that amusement advertising rates are lowered that it could not be called a trend."

The consolidation of newspapers has resulted in an over-all rate reduction in some cities. Over a hundred papers were consolidated or ceased publication last year. When two newspapers are merged the advertising rates of the remaining paper are usually increased but not to an amount equal to the two old rates. In this way some theatres which previously split their advertising in two publications can now place the advertising in one paper with a small saving.

Cooperative advertisements usually are placed at the lowest rate, unless there is a special reason for doing otherwise. If the local rate is less than the national, the ad is placed through the theatre, and if the national rate is cheaper than the local the advertisements usually are placed through the major company's newspaper advertising agent.

Appropriations Increase

Newspaper advertising appropriations in the big cities have gone up substantially in the last ten years, according to Mr. Doob, because the producing and distributing companies are going in and doing extensive newspaper exploitation on "big" pictures in key cities.

For the exhibitor the newspaper has been and is one of the most important advertising media. A theatre spends from 4 to 10 per cent of its gross on advertising and most of the advertising goes to newspapers. In general, it was said, a successful theatre has to pay a smaller percentage of its gross for advertising.

Motion pictures are reported to be receiving more attention than ever before in the daily press. The unprecedented amount of editorial attention given to "Gone With the Wind" has made newspapers more aware of the interest their reading public has in films, it was pointed out.

"I believe that 'Gone With the Wind' did more for the newspapers than the newspapers did for 'Gone With the Wind,'" Mr. Doob said.

Test polls in the past have shown that the motion picture page is one of the best read pages in the entire newspaper. It was reported that only the "funnies" and front page ranked ahead of films when both men and women readers are considered, and that the amusement page generally gets more attention from women than men.

Mr. Doob said that the Hollywood column and other studio reports should not be allowed to crowd out the local material.

The present advertising rates over Loew's Circuit is about $2.25 per milline.

Uses Lowest Rate

The RKO circuit in placing newspaper advertising takes advantage of the lowest rate—national or local.

Paramount also makes use of both advertising rates, depending on the local situation.

Though local and national rates vary, with little or no apparent reason, it was reported that there is no tendency to "jack up" one set of rates against the other. The local rate guarantees a position on the amusement page; the national rate does not, but in this case the ad is put on the page opposite the amusement page or on it.

The highest agate line rate in the country for amusement advertising is for the New York Daily News, with the rate of about $1.70 a line. New York rates are high. The Chicago Tribune rate is the highest outside New York. Rates in other cities go down to the low teens—13, 14, 15 cents a line and on up, depending on the local situation.

UPS AND DOWNS OF ATTENDANCE

While New York City theatres were jammed with Easter Week crowds, and while many boasted attendance records, theatres in four states, in hundreds of localities, some within a few hours of the metropolis, were unable to draw crowds, and some were closed. Flooding rivers, beginning Sunday in New Jersey, in Pennsylvania, upper New York State, and Delaware, made persons think of their homes and safety and damaged or closed theatres interfered with film deliveries.

In the Wilkes-Barre area (the Susquehanna river territory), business virtually suspended, after an estimated 35,000 persons were deprived of their homes. Film deliveries from Philadelphia were crippled. About 30 theatres were closed in Central Pennsylvania. There were flooded basements in Pittsburgh and McKeesport.

Ban on 2 Films is Detroit Precedent

"Strange Cargo," the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film, co-starring Clark Gable and Joan Crawford, and the RKO Radio picture, "Primrose Path," with Ginger Rogers and Joel McCrea, were banned last week in Detroit, marking the first time in many years that major American-produced films have encountered complete censorship there.

The National Legion of Decency placed "Strange Cargo" in the "C" or condemned classification, and "Primrose Path" in the "B" or objectionable in part classification. Both films were passed by Hollywood's Production Code Administration.

Police Censor Objects

The banning of the two films in Detroit followed the recommendation of the police censor, Sergeant Charles W. Synder, that the pictures be denied display there on the ground that they were "obscene and indecent." Commissioner Frank D. Eaman viewed the films and sustained the censor's recommendation.

A letter was sent to MGM by Mr. Eaman notifying the studio that "Strange Cargo" would not be permitted on Detroit screens and a similar letter was to be sent to RKO Radio concerning "Primrose Path." In both cases, it was held that undesirable characters were portrayed, that the dialogue was objectionable and the subject matter "obscene and indecent."

If a local exhibitor attempts to show either of the pictures, he will be charged in court with displaying indecent films, police officials said.

William F. Rodgers, MGM general sales manager, has instructed J. E. Flynn, district manager at Chicago, to make a first-hand investigation of the Detroit banning of "Strange Cargo." The company plans to obtain a review of the censor's decision and will appeal to the courts only as a last resort.

"Strange Cargo" was based on the book "Not too Narrow, Not too Deep," by Richard Sale.

Chicago Censorship Battle

One more fight has arisen against censorship, this time in Chicago. The Chicago case concerns an independent release, "The Living Dead," banned two weeks ago by the Chicago police lieutenant, Harry Costello, in charge of censorship there; and, early this week, after liberal groups, and others opposed to local censorship, had attacked the ban, J. H. Hoffberg, New York distributor of independent films, and the distributor of this picture, was endeavoring to "line up" all the anti-censorship groups, and take the matter into the courts, if necessary.

"The Case of the Living Dead" was made in Germany six years ago, by Gabriel Pascal. According to the Hoffberg office in New York, it was lately smuggled from Germany. Hoffberg obtaining United States rights to it, and the print, this year. The office refuses to name the source from which the film was obtained, claiming reprisals upon the man's relatives may be expected from the National Socialist authorities, who banned the film.

The picture has a morbid theme, dealing with murder, and homicidal insanity. However, it has received the Production Code Administration seal, was passed by the New York censors, and has already played in Los Angeles and San Francisco.

THREE EXHIBITOR UNITS SET CONVENTION DATES

National Allied Meets June 19th in Chicago; Pacific Groups to Gather May 8th

Problems and practices of the day this week prompted three state exhibitor organizations to called their members to convention for open discussion and committee action, in California, Virginia and Arkansas.

Allied States Association of Exhibitors, national, will meet in Chicago's Morrison hotel in annual convention June 19th to 21st, and not this month, as previously reported. Jack Kirsch, president of Allied of Illinois, already has started arrangements.

Frank Hornig has been reelected president of the MPTO of Maryland.

Pacific Groups Meet May 8th

The first annual Pacific Coast Conference of Independent Theatre Owners will open on May 8th, and close on the 10th. The convention will be held at the Ambassador theatre in Los Angeles. The sessions will end each day at 5:30 P. M. Meeting rooms will be arranged for small groups, to discuss special problems.

Convention date and preliminary plans were approved at a meeting at the Ambassador Hotel, attended by Robert H. Poole, executive secretary of the Conference; Mrs. Jenne Dodge, Ventura; Hugh Bruen, Whittier; Jack Y. Berman, Los Angeles and Nat Tanchuck, editor of the Conference's publication, Ind-Ex.

Virginia MPTOA Sets June 24th

William F. Crockett, president of the MPTO of Virginia, has announced that the mid-summer convention of the organization will be held at the Chamberlin Hotel, at Old Point Comfort on Monday, June 24th. Entertainment will be arranged for the members who arrive the day before the convention opens. Business meetings will be held Monday morning, and the meeting will close with a banquet and dance Monday night.

Sydney Gates is chairman of arrangements. Other members include Graham Barbee, Leo Greenwood and Leonard Gordon.

April Meeting for Arkansas ITO

O. G. Wren, Little Rock, Ark., president of the Independent Theatre Owners of Arkansas, has announced that the board of directors have set April 28th-29th for the annual convention, at which officers will be elected for the new season. The meeting will be held in Little Rock at the Hotel Marion. Other officers of the organization are W. A. Malin, Augusta, vice-president, and K. K. King, Searcy, secretary.

Denver Business in Summer

With over 360 attending the Founders Day banquet of the Rocky Mountain Screen Club, in the Shirley hotel, Denver, last weekend, the Theatre Owners and Managers of the Rocky Mountain Region decided to drop discussion of business until the regular annual convention this summer.

Robert J. O'Donnell of the Interstate circuit, and chief barker of the Dallas Variety Club, was chief speaker. He outlined Variety club work in many cities.

Two short subjects depicted the Variety club's charitable work.

Frank H. Ricketson, Jr., president of the Rocky Mountain Screen Club, was toastmaster. The club is considering joining the Variety Clubs.

Among the guests was Harry Sherman, producer of the "Hopalong Cassidy" series.

The Paramount local exchange staff was host at a luncheon for theatre and exchange men.

There was a midnight premiere of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," at the Broadway theatre. Proceeds went to the Screen Club's charity fund.

New York Allied Convention

The Government's New York anti-trust prosecution, scheduled to start on May 1st, may force the postponement of a scheduled statewide meeting of the New York Allied, and a testimonial dinner to Max Cohen, its president, in Syracuse, on May 22nd, officers of the unit said in New York on Tuesday. The decision will be made soon.

National Film Carriers Will Convene May 12

The seventh annual convention of National Film Carriers, Inc., will be held at the Park Central hotel, New York, May 12-14. Members from all key cities will attend. There will be an executive committee meeting May 12th and the regular convention business meetings May 13-14. The usual annual luncheon for the branch supervisors of the exchanges will be held on closing day.

A matter for discussion will be the Interstate Commerce Commission's new safety regulations.

Officers will be elected at the meeting. James P. Clark of Philadelphia is the retiring president.

Studio Fires in France and Italy

The Pathe motion picture studios at Joinville-le-Pont, outside of Paris, have been destroyed by fire, according to information reaching this country in La Cinematographie Francaise, French trade publication. The fire began in stage C and spread rapidly through adjoining stages. In a short time the studio was in ruins.

Two stages at the Cinecitta studio in Italy burned last month, it was reported.

Leaving Columbia

Harriet Parsons, producing "Screen Snapshots" for Columbia, will leave the studio after completing the current short subject series and will be succeeded by Ralph Staub, who originated the idea years ago. Miss Parsons is the daughter of Louella Parsons, Hearst columnist.

INCORPORATIONS

N. Y. Companies Incorporate

Three motion picture companies have been granted incorporation papers in New York State, according to Michael F. Walsh, secretary of state. The concerns are: Mozart theatre, Inc., Brooklyn. $10,000 capitol stock and formed by Edward F. Brady, Gertrude Richter and John G. Drotos. Papers were filed by Alfons Richter, attorney. The Bessall Theatre Corporation was formed by Jacob B. Biernman, Brooklyn; Irving Goldman and Lawrence E. Hoffman, New York. Papers of the company which issued 200 shares of no par value were filed by B. Robbins. Cadlow, Inc., Manhattan, formed by Alfred Rice, Sidney Goldstein and Mitchel Klausner to "furnish amusement to the public, either indoors or outside," also issued 200 shares of no par value.

Newport Company Formed

The Newport theatre company has filed papers of incorporation with the Secretary of State of Rhode Island to engage in "general business," and issue 100 shares of common stock at no par value. The company was incorporated by Arthur J. Levy, Edgewood, R. I.; Charles C. Remington, Providence, and Ruth M. Hill, East Providence. The three are members of the same law firm. Mr. Levy declined to say who his clients are or to outline the projected business of the new company. The Colonial theatre in Newport, now leased by E. M. Loew, may be taken over by the new firm. It was reported that if the E. M. Loew company vacates the Colonial it would lease the Shay's Paramount which has been dark for many months.

W. E. Mick Forms Company

William E. Mick has formed Special Film Attractions in Kansas City, to distribute special product, including "The Little Flower of Jesus," which opened at the Fox Apollo there last Saturday.

N. Y. U. Films Degree?

New York University may install a course in motion pictures, leading toward a bachelor of arts degree, Dean Charles Maxwell McGann announced this week. Conferences between faculty members and executives of the motion picture industry were held recently in New York.

Flint Adopts Duals

Theatres in Flint, Mich., have abandoned the single bill policy in favor of duals. Competitive conditions are said to be responsible for the change in policy.

McClure Promoted

Warner Brothers has promoted A. G. McClure to the managing directorship of its New Zealand territory, succeeding George Dillon, who came to New York for medical treatment.

Resume Vaudeville

The St. Louis theatre, in that city, begins a stage-show policy on April 12th, after many years of showing only films. Fanchon and Marco operate the house.

10 AUTOS, $5,000 IN ONE GIVEAWAY; PHILADELPHIA HAS AIR PRIZE PLAN

Patrons Suggest Titles for Pictures in Fox Midwest Circuit Project; Pennsylvania Legislative Sanction Sought

A record theatre giveaway is now in full swing in Kansas City. In ten weeks, starting last week and running to May 30th, the Fox Midwest theatres will give away 10 automobiles and $5,000 in cash.

Described in the territory as the biggest promotion since "bank night" began to blanket the area, the wholesale giveaway was inaugurated by the National Theatres-Fox Film-Chase Bank circuit subsidiary at Kansas City's Uptown and Esquire first-run houses, and at their subsequent and others in nearby territories.

Weekly prizes include a Ford V-8, two prizes of $50 each, 20 prizes of $10 each, 40 prizes of $5 each and 100 pairs of tickets, for a total of 163 individual prizes a week.

Titles for Pictures

Awards are being made on the basis of suggested titles for motion pictures, not over five words long. Participants can enter as many titles as they wish. Entry blanks, obtainable at Fox Midwest houses, must be used, and must be accompanied by two adult tickets stubs when the patron deposits the entries in a lobby box. The contest closes each Thursday night.

The judges are Jack Moffitt, motion picture critic of the Kansas City Star; Mae Claussen, chairman of the Kansas State Board of Movie Reviews (Censors), and Senn Lawler, advertising manager of Fox Midwest Theatres.

Participating, besides the Uptown and Esquire, are the Plaza, Rockhill, Warwick, Madrid, Vista, Linwood, Isis, Waldo, Gladstone and Brookside.

Game Developments In Other States

The Pennsylvania State legislature will be asked to legalize bingo and other socalled chance games at the special session next month. Petitions requesting this action are being circulated in Lancaster county. A county jury ruled that bingo is gambling when it convicted Richard Landis of Rothville on the charge of maintaining and setting up gambling devices. Mr. Landis headed a committee of the Neffsville fire department which arranged the bingo game for the test case.

The question whether Bank Night is legal in Ohio is to be decided shortly when the courts settle the case of the Troy Amusement Company. The company operates the Mayflower theatre in Troy. A theatre patron filed a civil suit in a justice's court in Troy asking for a refund of admissions paid and discontinuance of Bank Night. It was said that the action was caused by the manager's refusal to permit the plaintiff's daughter to sign registration cards for three adult members of the family. The jury returned a verdict for the theatre company and a temporary injunction was granted preventing the plaintiff, Andrew Attenweiler, from seizing Bank Night equipment as evidence under a search and seizure warrant.

The temporary injunction obtained by Hoy Simons and Alice Smoots Payne, operators of the Fayette theatre at Washington Court House, Ohio, restraining city manager Edwin Dulcy and police chief Jack Wolfe from stopping Bank Night, will continue in force pending the final decision in the Mayflower theatre case. Meanwhile city solicitor Norman L. McLean at Washington Court House filed a demurrer to plaintiff's petition and awaited the precedent to be established in the Mayflower theatre case which will be decided by the Ohio state supreme court.

The Paramount, the largest of the three Northio theatres in Hamilton, Ohio, has been holding a game called Sweepstakes weekly for five years without interruption. The series was started on April 10, 1935.

A number of Wisconsin theatres are operating games of various sorts even though the supreme court refused to review its decision that bingo is illegal.

Other Chance Games

H. J. Hirsch's Oriental and Tower theatres, neighborhood houses in Milwaukee, are now offering Movie Kwizzo, Warner's Rialto at Racine has inaugurated "Mu$ico" and Eskin's Rialto at Kaukauna has announced Bank Quiz Nites on Fridays and Saturdays.

The Griffith Brothers Amusement Company circuit's weekly goodwill cash award is not a violation of the Nebraska state lottery laws, according to Judge T. S. Morton. The judge held that three things are necessary, under the Nebraska laws, for a lottery: prize, chance and consideration. He ruled that only money spent is consideration. In another court action some time ago Bank Night was ruled illegal because the registration of a contestant's name was held to be a consideration. Under the goodwill award offered by the Griffith circuit a prize is given whether the winner is present or absent, has or has not an admission ticket.

Massachusetts Test Case

Although the Massachusetts supreme court gave a decision which seemed to mean that Bank Night is illegal, a test case is being planned in Lowell. Games are being permitted until a case is decided. Theatre men from Lowell, Cambridge and Somerville have conferred with Robert F. Bradford, district attorney, in East Cambridge, Mass.

Philip Berger, manager of the Treat theatre in Newark, was arrested and equipment for what the police called a variation of bingo was seized. The game was called "Pay Me" and the raid was made after an audience of 700 had played. A test case is planned to determine whether the game comes under the ban placed on bingo by county prosecutor Wachenfeld. "Tally and Darts" is another game which has been ruled illegal in New Jersey.

The Marina theatre in St. Andrews, N. B., is presenting bingo two nights each week. Under the plan, if the winner is not in the theatre when his name is called, $10 is added for the next drawing.

MAYOR RESCINDS BAN ON GIVEAWAYS

Reversing his previous decision after 65 merchants at Bowling Green, Ohio, attested that "bank night" increased their business by attracting patrons from the surrounding territory, Mayor Alva W. Bachman is permitting the Cla-Zel theatre to resume the game.

He had ordered it discontinued last December after having fined the management $400 on a charge of operating a lottery.

Sixty-five Independent Exhibitors Would Join in Sponsoring "Movie Bank Night"; Five Cases to Justice Department

Far exceeding, numerically, Kansas City's new 10-autos, $5,000 cash giveaway (see adjoining column) is the plan for a "gigantic movie bank night" radio program now on the fire in Philadelphia, which 65 independent exhibitors jointly would sponsor.

Five Cases to Justice Department

An influencing factor might be the Federal Communications Commission's new attack against "radio lotteries," the FCC this week turning in five stations conducting such "games," two of them in Philadelphia, to the Department of Justice for possible action. The FCC some weeks ago submitted to the Department of Justice the case of exhibitor complaints against radio's "Pot o' Gold," the $1,000 Horace Heidt weekly cash award. The Department has net yet acted on the case.

Meanwhile another radio station has discontinued "Pot o' Gold." Station WDAF, of the NBC-Kansas City Star, abandoned the program in view of the controversy.

Continuing its campaign against radio lottery programs, the Federal Communication Commission this week referred to the Department of Justice the following five programs, which, it was alleged, violated the lottery provisions of the Communications Act:

"Mu$ico," at WGN, Chicago; "Songo," WIP, Philadelphia; "Especially for You," WFIL, Philadelphia, "Sears' Grab Bag," WISE, Asheville, N. C., and "Dixie Treasure Chest," KRLD, Dallas, Tex.

In all five cases, the Commission charged, winners of money awards or merchandise prizes are selected by lot or chance in one of several ways.

65 in Philadelphia Plan

Plans for a "movie bank night" radio program with 65 independent exhibitors in the Philadelphia area jointly sponsoring are understood to have progressed to the point where the participating operators already have been signed for the proposed program and the promoters have arranged for the necessary time on a local station. Attorneys for the station, unnamed, were studying the program as to any possible violations of the lottery law, although the show is said originally to have been cleared on those phases by a law firm representing the exhibitors, also unnamed.

The "movie bank night" program was intended to circumvent the local ban on bingo games and "bank nights" in film theatres, and at the same time strike at the "Pot o' Gold" program. The intention was to have the program broadcast to coincide with the Horace Heidt show, paying cash prizes to names selected from the local telephone directory provided the party was in one of the participating movie houses at the time. The program was to be heard in all the theatres.

Move Over, Says Oldtimer, 30 Years in the Business

G. A. Duncan of Kentucky Showed First Reel in 1910

IN November of this year G. A. Duncan, owner of the Lyric in Carlisle, Kentucky, will have completed his thirtieth year as a motion picture exhibitor. Having read in the MOTION PICTURE HERALD of December 2, 1939, an interview with Ed T. Burgan, Kansas City, Kansas, exhibitor, in which Mr. Burgan discoursed on the changes in exhibition in the last 25 years, Mr. Duncan moves for membership in the oldtimers circle with a letter covering his 30 years in the business.

"Mr. Burgan started in the flicker business just 25 years ago," Mr. Duncan begins. "I started November 19, 1910. My first show was 'Life for a Life,' which I bought from the old General Film Company. When I started there was no such animal as a feature. They were all one-reelers and I paid the enormus sum of one dollar per reel.

G. A. DUNCAN

"A little later I ran a big three-reeler, 'The Four Dare Devils,' and I paid $10 for it. You had to pay the General Film Company a license fee of two dollars on the machines. I bought a second hand projector in Philadelphia for $125—a Powers Five—and I have it now as a keepsake.

"The one dollar per reel fee continued until the two-reeler of the sinking of the Titanic was issued. I paid $20 a day for that.

Pickford Films from Famous

"About the time Mr. Burgan started in the business there were four, five and six-reel features on the market. The price ran from $5 to $12.50 top for me and I had to get them any place I could find an exchange. At that time there was only the General Film exchange in Cincinnati. If you wanted to run any of the Mary Pickford pictures you had to get them from Famous Players in Pittsburgh. In Cincinnati now you can get anything from a sprocket to a projector and from a newsreel to 'Gone With the Wind.'

"I don't say I am the oldest man in the business but I have had 29 years as operator, janitor, usher and manager. However, I still am not the boss. My wife is better at it than I am. She looks after things, especially the box office.

"I have records of every picture I have had from November 19, 1910, to the present time. In my many years in this town I have had three houses, two of them only made-over stores. The third is the Lyric, which I built.

"In closing, may I ask Mr. Burgan to pardon me if I have tried to push him out as an old timer? May all of you prosper and stay off relief."

National Decency Legion Classifies 12 Pictures

Of 12 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week five were approved for general patronage, four were listed as unobjectionable for adults and three were found objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "Buck Benny Rides Again," "Blazing Six Shooters," "Courageous Dr. Christian," "Rancho Grande," "Stage Coach War." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "Black Friday," "Florian," "Over the Moon," "Rebecca." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Bill of Divorcement," "The Human Monster," "Primrose Path."

Set Picture Pioneers Dinner April 26th

The Spring Dinner Conference of the Picture Pioneers will be held April 26th, according to Jack Cohn, vice-president of Columbia and house manager of the Pioneers. The place at which the event is to be held will be decided shortly, he said.

Fourteen new members of the organization have been accepted. They are R. J. O'Donnell, W. Ray Johnston, Gilbert Josephson, Douglas D. Rothacker, Charles L. O'Reilly, P. J. Morgan, Jack Bowen, Lou B. Metzger, Jerome Safron, J. L. Barkey, J. R. Malcolm, Louis W. Schine, J. Myer Schine and Samuel Strausberg. It is planned to present gold membership cards to the new members at the dinner.

Dinner for Max Factor

Max Factor, formerly Great States booker, was guest of honor at a testimonial dinner last Thursday at the Congress hotel in Chicago. Over 100 bookers from Chicago and vicinity attended. Mr. Factor has become assistant to Harold Field, president of the Pioneer theatre circuit. Those attending included: Harry James, United Artists booker, who presided; Rolland Viner, Anderson circuit; Russell Hurt, Alger theatres; Sam Traynor, Bailey chain, and Harry Grampp, Hainline circuit.

Van Schmus Operating Center

W. G. Van Schmus, managing director of the Radio City Music Hall, has taken over control of the Center theatre, also in Rockefeller Center. Kenneth L. Hyatt, in charge of the Center for the last five years, will be transferred to the Rockefeller Center executive offices.

Australia's Trade Holds: Michalove

General business conditions and the theatre business in particular are keeping an even keel in Australia despite the war, Dan Michalove, assistant to Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, said Monday on his return to New York.

Mr. Michalove made a six and a half month trip to Australia in connection with a proposed merger of the Hoyt circuit with Union Theatres. He said the deal is expected to be completed soon.

Australian motion picture production offers little competition to American companies, Mr. Michalove said. Subsidies have been granted the industry in New South Wales by the government in the amount of £52,000 (about $154,500 at current exchange) for five pictures, but the American producers will continue to supply most of the product for the market, he said. Australian business leaders have criticized the subsidies as unnecessary.

In addition to currency restrictions, American film companies faced a decline of 22 per cent in the exchange value of the Australian pound sterling which is now about $2.97.

The war in Europe has resulted in more Australian exports to England and increased industrial activity, including the establishment of an aviation industry, Mr. Michalove reported.

Y. A. Fazalbhoy Writes Book On India Film Industry

Y. A. Fazalbhoy, a director of Fazalbhoy, Ltd., Bombay, India, and organizer in May, 1939, of the first Indian Motion Picture Congress, of which he was honorary secretary, has written a book on the problems of the film industry of India, entitled "The Indian Film." In it he discusses capital investment, organization of production, the art department, the technical staff, problems of distribution, royalties and minimum guarantees, collective minimum guarantee, artists and their salaries, distribution commission, publicity expenses, exhibitors, newsreel production, educational films, the Indian Film Congress and after, sectional conferences, national planning in relation to the film industry and foreign exploitation.

In a summation of the points covered in the book Mr. Fazalbhoy remarks: "Readers might have seen how necessary it is to have in India a healthy and well organized film industry.

"We, who are in such close contact with the industry which is responsible for our maintenance, should realize that we have only laid the foundations and have in spite of difficulties and handicaps nursed it for 25 years to its present level. . . . We must see that every branch of the industry is organized by setting up associations and trade bodies."

The book has a preface by S. Saryamurti, who was president of the 1939 Indian Motion Picture Congress.

M. A. Fazalbhoy, brother of the author and chairman and managing director of Fazalbhoy, Ltd., is now in New York on a visit. (Picture in Pictorial Section.)

U.S. SEES HIGH FILM STANDARDS OFFSETTING LOSSES FROM THE WAR

Need for Close Attention to Changing Conditions and Film Tastes Are Greatest in Decade, Says U. S. Bureau

The United States Government this week advised Hollywood and its production and corporate officers that "not for decades has there been such an imperative need, with respect to our foreign markets, for incessant watchfulness, keen scrutiny of the changing scene, quick appraisal of new developments and modifications, a shrewd 'keeping in touch' with everything that happens, and an alert readiness to take advantage of all openings," as a result of the changing scene, both commercially and artistically, brought about by the upset conditions of the world.

Sees Ultimate Gains

The Government credits the industry with productions of a new high quality, "which, in certain outstanding instances, is now mounting to unprecedented heights," and "surely will help our pictures abroad as well as at home." In the domestic market, it is said, "such achievements will compensate for any foreign losses—and, regardless of wars, they may win such favor abroad that the losses will be followed by gains."

The foregoing, basically, are foreign market prospects, on the basis of events of 1939, reported to the industry by Nathan D. Golden, Chief of the Motion Picture Division of the U. S. Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. They were founded upon formal and official disclosures made to Washington by the various consular officers, commercial attaches and others of the commercial diplomatic corps stationed in the world's capitals.

Lighter Themes Wanted

The Government finds that "the shocks and repercussions from the European outbreak proved eventually much less devastating than had been feared at first." It does note many new stringencies of censorship and taxation, and it foresees a possibility that post-war conditions will curtail and hamper operation in the affected countries.

It has found a demand, even governmental insistence, that sad and morose film subjects be supplanted by light and entertaining films.

Showings of American films abroad rose 2 per cent from the 65 per cent of the total in 1938 to 67 per cent in 1939, the Bureau reports, but says the dollars-and-cents return for American pictures since the outbreak of the war has fallen by perhaps 10 per cent. Foreign exchange it calls the major problem. It sees some possible "favorable shifts" in world markets aiding Hollywood and growing out of the war in Europe, pointing notably in this connection to Latin America, where "there would appear to be a promising field for expansion for Hollywood."

Admissions in December 1939 and for the first two months of 1940, for all of Great Britain, were down about 10 per cent, with the London-area attendance curtailed by as much as 20 per cent, says the report. In Belgium the weekday attendance was 35 per cent below normal at the end of 1939, with the weekend receipts 15 to 20 per cent lower than usual.

In neutral countries close attention is being given motion pictures lest their contents enhance the danger of embroilment. "Thus any act, word, scene, or even facial semblance that might have the faintest likelihood of offending a belligerent, became utterly taboo in certain countries."

"In one European country we find a feature production summarily banned and banished because someone had imagined that he detected a resemblance, in the visage of one of the characters, to the foreign minister of a major power. Films have been banned, right and left, because they were alleged to contain concealed propaganda.

"In another country, farther away from the conflict, film importers were recently notified by the police that news reels connected in any way with the war or with belligerent countries must not even be submitted or approval, and special police regulations prohibit audiences from expressing approval or disapproval 'of any film shown'."

Production Competition

"When the war first broke out, all production plans in England came to a complete standstill. By the end of 1939 a new and more auspicious situation was apparent. It then seemed probable that British production during the first six months of 1940 will be well maintained. The pictures made may be fewer, but present plans indicate that a higher proportion of the production may be of pictures of a type suitable for international distribution.

"In France, too, we have witnessed a gradual approach, during recent months, toward conditions more nearly resembling the pre-September status.

"It is reliably reported that the number of features turned out by the German studios in 1939 was considerably higher than the figure for 1938. Manifestly, the war has not choked or curtailed German production, but a variety of potent factors are decreasing greatly the exportation of Reich pictures to world markets.

"Non-belligerent Italy, with its modern facilities and ambitious program at Cinecitta, is going ahead boldly, the war apparently acting as a stimulus, if anything. In 1939 the number of Italian films produced advanced to about 90 as against only 35 to 47 in former years."

The Bureau adds this:

"The war-created shipping difficulties and production curtailment in Britain and France have made foreign nations which formerly relied upon England, France, and Germany for a certain proportion of their films dependent upon the United States to a vastly greater degree. And, the longer hostilities last, and the more intense they grow, the more dependent will the entire world become upon our American pictures for its screen entertainment. This is particularly true in Latin America and the Far East. Even Britain and France themselves are today desiring a somewhat increased number of American pictures. France has abolished its quota limiting the number of American films entering the French market, and Britain, while maintaining its quota law, has made significant concessions in the matter of transferring to the United States the funds representing American pictures exhibited in the British market."

Changing "Tastes"

"The war has already brought about a marked change in 'film tastes' in the belligerent countries," it is noted. "Where during normal times the best revenue pictures were those with historical and romantic subjects, there is now a keen desire for pictures such as comedies, mystery stories, or any kind of light but engrossing entertainment that is likely to afford escape from wartime anxieties. In some markets of the warring nations, sad and morose scenes are actually barred by censorship boards. Exhibitors in some markets are taking pains to emphasize in their advertisements the cheerful and enlivening character of their programs. It goes without saying that our American producers and distributors are preeminently well equipped to supply films that will satisfy these tastes which are now dominant throughout great regions of the earth."

Legislative Restrictions

Significant developments in 1939, especially in Europe, in legislative restrictions included the following:

In Estonia, a quota limiting the number of foreign films is set at 195 from March 1939 to July 1, 1940. Of this amount the American share has been reduced from 60 to 30 films by reason of a scarcity of available dollar exchange.

Finland requires a permit to import American films.

Plans in Hungary call for a quota law which will reduce the importation of American films by 50 per cent.

Importation into Greece was put upon an annual global import quota on Aug. 1, 1939. This quota totals 370 features.

On Jan. 22, 1940, the Italian Council of Ministers presented to the Italian Parliament the text for establishment of a new body to carry on the management of the film monopoly created in September, 1938. This contemplated decree eliminates the commercial organization ENIC from connection with the Monopoly, and the latter's functions are entrusted to a body

Decrease of Sound Film Exports Shown in Two-Year Comparison

The following table shows the decrease in exports of American negative and positive sound films for the years 1939 and 1938:

	1939		Percentage	1938
Negative—	Feet	Value	Change	Feet	Value
Sound	8,079,437	$ 339,602	— 4.9%	8,498,012	$ 300,351
Positive—
Sound	152,502,878	3,061,055	—18.3%	186,739,117	3,968,467
Total	160,582,315	$3,400,657	—17.8%	195,237,129	$4,268,818

LATIN AMERICAN FIELD CALLED OPEN

(ENAIPE), National Organization for the Acquisition and Importation of Foreign Films, which is under the control of the ministers for foreign trade and exchange, popular culture, and finance. The highlights are: "The Monopoly ceased to be the agent for purchasing foreign films, although it will act as agent in remitting payment to foreign companies. A list of Italian firms will be established, which will deal directly with foreign companies for the purchase of films. These firms must be either producers of Italian films or distributors who participate in the financing of Italian films. Distribution by a foreign company through its own company in Italy is no longer possible, and the total quota of films to be imported for the year will be determined as to value by the ministry of foreign trade and exchange, separately for each country of origin. No film may be distributed unless a license is issued."

Foreign exchange remittances are controlled in Latvia.

Malta requires permits for all imports not from the United Kingdom, as well as exchange transactions.

"It is expected," says the Bureau, "that the Spanish ministry of commerce and industry will issue regulations to control practically all phases of the picture business in Spain.

Import Control Increases

Feature imports into Switzerland are now subject to contingents.

All items imported into Yugoslavia from countries not under a clearing arrangement (this includes the United States) are subject to import control, and exchange shortage makes permits scarce.

In Argentina in October a relaxation of exchange limitations came about, restoring the privilege of importing American films without restrictions as to quantity. The 1940 budget law assesses a 5 per cent tax on the full amount of remittances and is retroactive to 1934.

Chile's Exchange Commission makes film exchange funds subject to a higher rate of exchange than necessities.

In Peru it was disadvantageous for American companies to obtain dollar exchange.

Foreign exchange in Uruguay must be purchased at the "free" rate, 40 per cent higher than the "controlled" rate.

Venezuela, too, exercises strict control over its foreign exchange.

The French Moroccan government prohibited the importation of goods from countries other than France and Algeria, except under special license, but all films are received from France and Algeria.

Up to Sept. 15, 1939, foreign exchange was available in Canada, on an open, free-market basis, but on that date the foreign exchange control board was created. Import permits are granted freely and foreign exchange is readily available. Virtually the same conditions exist in Australia, New Zealand, Burma, Ceylon, and Palestine.

Japan, with rigid regulations already, enacted new laws under which, since Jan. 1, 1940, no theatre is permitted to show more than 50 foreign features a year. American funds continue to be frozen, and no exchange permits have been granted since 1938.

In Egypt close government control is exercised, but American dollars are available. Iraq's exchange regulations virtually parallel Egypt's.

American Exports Drop

Statistics of American film exports for the 12 months of 1939 show a decrease of 34,600,000 linear feet in positive and negative sound films shipped, compared with 1938. This is a decrease of 17.8 per cent. A total of 160,582,315 linear feet, with a declared value of $3,400,657, was exported in 1939 as compared with 195,237,129 linear feet, valued at $4,268,818 in 1938 (valuation based upon raw stock film costs).

Foreign Film Production

Production in 39 foreign countries last year totaled 1,738 feature films, an increase of 32 over the 1,706 in 1938. The Far East led with 1,025 produced in 1939, as against 967 for 1938. Japan, leader in the Far East, accounted for 500 features, followed by India with 205. Hong Kong produced 100, the Philippine Islands 60, Burma 50, China 44 and Manchuria 38. Siam during 1939 accounts for 12, Chosen 7, Australia 6, and Java 3.

European production continued to drop, 562 features being produced as compared with 609 during 1938. Germany had the greatest number, 155, while England's total was estimated 104, Mr. Golden said "about 75 features produced" would come closer to being correct. Italy jumped its production to 90 features from 47 in 1938. French dropped from 122 in 1938 to 62 for 1939.

In the Near East, Egypt produced 16 feature films during 1939, the same as in 1939, and Turkey accounted for 4 features as against 3 the year before.

Latin American countries maintained production schedules, with 131 features. Argentina led in South America with 60, an increase of 10. Mexico dropped to 42, compared with 60. Cuba accounted for 12, against 2, and Peru dropped from 11 to 7. Brazil turned out 6 compared with 4. Chile, with no production in 1938, turned out 2 features, and Uruguay and Venezuela each produced one, compared with two and one respectively in 1938.

Features produced in Mexico and Argentina continued to provide significant competition to American films in various Latin American countries, particularly among the poorer classes.

The gay, comic pictures from those countries, usually instinct with the spirit of the Latin American races and localities, and always fully intelligible to the Spanish-American spectators, naturally exert a strong pull.

Of the Latin American market the Bureau says, in conclusion:

"In Latin America there would appear to be a promising field for expansion and for productions of a somewhat new character—fitted more precisely, more foresightedly, to the requirements of a great territory which comprises a variety of distinctive markets."

American exports of photographic goods in February of this year dropped by $216,000, compared with the same month of last year, the Department of Commerce reports. The figures are: February, 1940, $1,306,000; February, 1939, $1,522,000.

Hays Discusses Educational Film Before Indiana YMCA

Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., at the dedication of the new Y.M.C.A. Building in Terre Haute, Indiana, on Sunday addressing his remarks to the youths of today and the problems they faced, said that the organized motion picture industry, acting upon the recommendations of its Advisory Committee on the Use of Films in Education, was without profit, making available to educational institutions several hundred non-current theatrical short subjects selected by experts as suitable for teaching purposes.

Mr. Hays said that the trustees charged with responsibility for supervising the distribution of these films "in accordance with the conditions covering their use, which fully protect the exhibitor from any unfair competition, have completed arrangements for including the teaching classes of the Y.M.C.A. in this program."

MGM Wins Basketball Title

The Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer basketball team this week defeated the National Screen Service team by a score of 39 to 34 to win the championship in the New York metropolitan area.

HOLLYWOOD'S WORLD TAX BILL ON FILMS AND THEATRE TICKETS

PART II

Taxes in the Latin American Countries

STEPS taken by Latin American nations to build up their own motion picture production industries both for monetary profit and for the spread of propaganda, as well as to translate a part of foreign distributors' potential earnings into national income by assessment, are the subject of this week's installment of the research project completed for MOTION PICTURE HERALD by the Motion Picture Division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Nathan D. Golden is Chief of the Division.

Twenty-seven countries in Central and South America are included in this week's study, which analyzes import taxes and customs duties on motion pictures, censorship fees and taxes, assessments on distribution, and levies on theatres.

American dollar equivalents of the monetary units are listed in a footnote.

The Near East, Africa and the Far East are studied in the final installment to appear next week.

Europe's taxes were recorded in Part I last week.

BROADCASTERS' OWN "ASCAP" STARTS, IN ANSWER TO SOCIETY'S HIGH RATES

Broadcast Music, Inc., Gets Underway with Catalogue of Six Songs but Says More Will Be Added Daily

Radio broadcasters' new cooperative music company, Broadcast Music, Inc., formed to be a source of music in addition, to or eventually supplant the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, began actual operations Monday, with a "catalogue" of only six songs. But it was said additional music would be added daily.

News of the actual start of music operations by Broadcast Music was welcomed by the radio industry, which received last week ASCAP's new and higher schedule. Broadcasters had formed a music organization because they considered that the society's annual bill of $5,000,000 to the radio industry was excessive. It was thought by some that Broadcast Music was organized to force concessions from the Society. Instead of concessions, however, ASCAP's proposed radio schedule represents, according to Neville Miller, head of the broadcasters, a 100 per cent increase over present rates.

Compromised 1934 Raise

In 1934, ASCAP presented the motion picture industry with a schedule that provided for increases ranging from 20 to 1,000 per cent. However, after a campaign by exhibitors and action by the Government a compromise was reached under which medium sized theatres paid 50 per cent more and large houses 100 per cent.

The Columbia Broadcasting System immediately came to the support of the Broadcast Music organization when the first songs were announced. The network sent a letter to all its member stations announcing that it saw no prospect of using ASCAP music after 1940 (when the contract expires) on the basis of present demands made by the Society. The National Broadcasting Company said the fees imposed and proposed by ASCAP were "intolerably burdensome" and would act in cooperation with the radio industry in setting up its own source of music.

The radio industry is anxious to have the motion picture industry help popularize non-ASCAP music. Efforts are being made to have film companies use BMI music or any music composed by persons who are not members of the Society. The radio group has offered to play without charge such music over the air and to make no charge for BMI music used in theatres.

Six Songs as Starter

The six songs with which BMI begins its reservoir of music to compete with the library of the Society will be heard first on sustaining programs and it was announced that sheet music would be published within a few days. The first six songs were selected from about 1,000 submitted by non-ASCAP members. It was conceded that many of the songs were by amateurs, but BMI believes that talented musicians and song writers will be discovered.

Up to the present time 284 radio stations have pledged $1,253,189 in support of Broadcast Music, Inc., to build up a music library before December 31st when the contract with ASCAP expires.

Broadcasters and representatives of the Society are to begin negotiations on April 15th. Radio men say the ASCAP rates are too high. If no basis for a settlement is reached by the end of the year, the radio industry plans to use exclusively BMI music and standard classics which are in the public domain. ASCAP controls almost all the popular tunes of the last 25 years and many for the last 56 years, the term of the copyright.

Stations' Action Awaited

Although the networks are leading the fight against the Society at the present time, the member stations are expected to take the same position because the individual stations began the fight against ASCAP. The new schedules proposed by the Society reduce the fees for individual stations and increase the charges for the networks.

The first song in the radio group's music catalogue is "Here in the Velvet Night," with music by Ernest Gold, an 18-year-old Viennese refugee, and lyrics by Dan McCray. BMI will pay royalties on sheet music sales but has not yet worked out an arrangement on performing rights. ASCAP pays members for performing rights.

Radio stations must pay 40 per cent of their present ASCAP assessment to use BMI music. For this year stations using the radio organization's music will pay the 40 per cent in addition to the whole fee due ASCAP.

The Society's assertion that the music it controls comprises 75 per cent of all radio programs was denied by the radio music company. The Society has argued that $5,000,000 is too low a fee for the music which occupies a great part of radio time.

NBC made a survey of 12 sample weeks and reported that 58.2 per cent of all program time was occupied by music. The Federal Communications Commission gives 53.1 per cent as its figure. BMI further asserted that the ASCAP claim that "music constitutes some 70 per cent in commercial time on the air" was "even more incorrect and misleading." The NBC survey reported that music took 20.7 per cent of the time of all sponsored programs.

Defendant in Several States

Meanwhile ASCAP continued in the role of defendant in the many state legislature and court attacks made against it, many of which are generally considered to have been prompted in some way by radio.

Action to restrain ASCAP from collecting fees for the playing of copyrighted music in Wisconsin because the Society has failed to comply with a 1935 law which requires that it pay 25 per cent of its gross receipts in the state as a license to operate has been filed in the Federal court in Milwaukee by Wiley Young, West Allis, Wis., tavern keeper.

The suit is the second of its kind against Leo Feist, Inc., New York, and ASCAP. The first, brought by Charles Hymek, dance hall operator at Manitowoc Rapids, Wis., has been taken under advisement by F. Ryan Duffy, federal judge. The Feist company, representing ASCAP, instituted action first against both Young and Hymek on a charge of playing copyrighted music without permission.

New Jersey Tax Bill

A bill is pending in the New Jersey Assembly which would tax the earnings from copyrighted music. The measure was introduced by J. Stanley Herbert, assemblyman from Monmouth County. Mr. Herbert specifically mentioned ASCAP as one of the "combines" at which the bill is aimed. The bill would impose a tax of 5 per cent on all ASCAP revenue in the State. Also publication of a list of titles controlled would have to be published in newspapers in each of the 21 counties in the state.

A three-judge federal statutory court in Omaha denied last week the application of the State of Nebraska for a new trial on the case testing the constitutionality of its anti-ASCAP law. Herman Finkelstein, of Schwartz & Frohlich, representing the Society. No announcement has been made yet whether Nebraska will appeal the case to the United States supreme court.

Schedule Florida Trial

The trial to test the constitutionality of Florida's anti-ASCAP law is scheduled for April 15th at Gainesville, Fla. The Society is seeking a permanent injunction to restrain the state from enforcing the law. A temporary injunction has been in effect for about two years. Louis D. Frohlich, ASCAP counsel, and E. C. Mills, chairman of the administrative committee, will go to Florida for the trial.

The State of Tennessee has decided not to appeal the decision of the federal court which ruled that the anti-ASCAP law was unconstitutional. The state took no action and let the period fixed for filing an appeal lapse.

Polesie Putts

Just completed, and previewed to enthusiastic Hollywood response, is the first short subject (see page 43) which has engaged the attentions of the melodious Bing Crosby since the start of his starring days. The short pictures set him in films through the Pathe Campus Comedy and Mack Sennett route.

Herb Polesie, who produced the picture, pithily called "Swing with Bing," had been awaiting favorable weather the last several years to catch the Crosby golf talents at actual work in the singer's annual Rancho Santa Fe Pro-Amateur golf tournament. This year he not only caught Bing but such other assorted talent as Byron Nelson, Jimmy Thompson, Walter Hagen, Bud Ward, Lawson Little and Leo Diegel, all of fame on tee and green; Richard Arlen, of the screen Arlens; Arthur Q. Bryan, of radio's "Grouch Club" program, cast as "Wilbur Dubb"; Ty Cobb, baseball immortal; Jimmy McLarnin, representing the prize ring, and Marshall Duffield, former All-American gridiron star.

Bing sings, appropriately, "The Little White Pill on the Little Green Hill," by John Burke and James V. Monaco, who have written before for the Crosby voice, while Polesie, in addition to producing the short subject, was director and narrator.

Starting out in radio, Polesie traveled to Hollywood in 1936 to produce the Wallace Beery air show, and put Judy Garland and Deanna (then Edna Mae) Durbin on their first transcontinental air shows, as guest artists. Hollywood's history has been compressed within a short span, its buildings constructed always in a hurry. Those were the days when the National Broadcasting Company studio, where the Polesie shows were produced, was on the RKO Radio lot, and not entrenched in its present chromium and neon grandeur on Sunset Boulevard.

Polesie has been making pictures with Crosby for the last three years, since leaving the J. Walter Thompson Agency, for which he'd done his production work on the air. Prior to that, and after graduation from the Carnegie Tech Dramatic School and producing for Pittsburgh's radio station KDKA, he'd been on Broadway as the author of the 1932 stage play "Heigh-Ho, Everybody," foretelling, perhaps, the vocal affiliation to come. The play concerned a crooner who caught cold when called for an audition. His voice registered so well despite, or because of, his attack of grippe, that his agent had to keep him in a draft from then on.

Most recently, Polesie produced and was co-author with David Butler of Universal's "East Side of Heaven," and associate producer of Paramount's "Doctor Rhythm."

PRODUCTION SLIGHTLY OFF

Slacking off slightly from its high point of last week, Hollywood production this week accounted for the completion of nine films, two fewer than the week before, started five, against the seven of last week, and had 27 shooting, 28 being prepared and 62 being edited, respectively four fewer, nine more and one less than in the preceding period.

Completed were the third of the Elliott westerns, at Columbia; "Waterloo Bridge" and "Twenty Mule Team," Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer; "Cowboy from Sundown," Monogram; "The Ghost Breakers," Paramount; "Women in War," Republic; "Million Dollar Diamond" and "Maryland," Twentieth Century-Fox, and "Ski Patrol," Universal.

Columbia started "Babies for Sale," Monogram "Land of the Six Guns," Republic "Gangs of Chicago" and "Doctors Don't Tell" and Twentieth Century-Fox "Rain or Shine."

Warner Brothers succeeded MGM as the studio with the greatest number of pictures shooting, having before the cameras "The Sea Hawk," "All This and Heaven, Too," "Torrid Zone," "Brother Orchid" and "The Life of Knute Rockne." Shooting at MGM were "Pride and Prejudice," "The Mortal Storm," "Susan and God," and "Boom Town." Columbia had "The Lone Wolf Meets a Lady," Paramount, the untitled Henry Aldrich feature, "North West Mounted Police" and "I Want a Divorce"; RKO Radio, "Tom Brown's School Days," "Anne of Windy Poplars" and "The Villain Still Pursued Her"; Republic, "The Crooked Road" and "Gaucho Serenade"; Edward Small, for United Artists release, "South of Pago Pago"; Twentieth-Fox, "The Young People"; Universal, "If I Had My Way," and Walter Wanger, for UA, "Personal History."

Two short subjects were finished and the same number started.

'Rebecca' Double-Checka $115,000 On B'way;

Cock of the walk this week is 'Rebecca.' It opened at the Music Hall Thursday (28) and did $16,500 on the day, the biggest the theatre has ever done on any Thursday that wasn't a holiday. An extra show was added the first three days, making a total of five stage shows and six for picture except Saturday (30) when a seventh reeling was added. The gross the first seven days for 'Reb' will be a smash $115,000 or better, one of the biggest takes ever in house's history, being beaten only five times. All the more remarkable so far as the Dave Selznick picture is concerned is that four of the attractions topping it have done so on New Year's, Labor Day or other holiday weeks. A preponderance of women, including last week when youngsters were away from arithmetic and history, are pounding at the Hall doors.

REPUBLIC'S BUSINESS UP, COSTS CUT, CONSOLIDATED STOCKHOLDERS TOLD

World Gross 7 Per Cent Above 1938; Distribution Costs Reduced 7 3/10 Per Cent; Consolidated May Reorganize

As they heard that Republic Pictures are being shown in more theatres than ever before (12,132 last year), that its world gross was almost seven per cent more than the year before, and that its distribution costs had been slashed from 37 per cent in 1937 to 29 7/10 per cent in 1939, stockholders of Consolidated Film Industries, controlling Republic, also learned, at their annual meeting last Thursday, in New York, that the management of the parent corporation is considering a plan for financial reorganization of Consolidated.

Plan May Be Presented This Year

M. H. Lavenstein, general counsel of Consolidated, in announcing that a financial rearrangement was being considered, noted that within six months the courts of Delaware may decide on the legal situation on recapitalizations of corporations of that state, and that the financial reorganization plan may be submitted to stockholders this year. The original recapitalization plan of Consolidated was invalidated in that state about three years ago.

M. J. Siegel, president of Republic Productions contrasted the number of theatres in which Republic films played last year with the 10,856 theatres in 1938. In observing that distribution costs had been reduced in the last three years, Mr. Siegel remarked that the company was seeking further revisions of percentage terms with its franchise holders.

The business of the company in Great Britain is normal, only currency restrictions interfering, Mr. Siegel said. He anticipated better business in that territory this year, continuing the upward trend of 1939 over 1938. He looked for better sales this year not only in Britain but throughout the world, despite the war.

He gave comparative figures for business last year and the year before, as follows: in 1939, domestic gross, $6,169,057, foreign revenue, $1,793,277; in 1938, domestic gross, $5,983,382, foreign, $1,504,468. The gain was approximately seven per cent.

Yates Notes Profit

Herbert J. Yates, president of Consolidated, reported that Republic showed a small profit last year, and that there would probably be a profit shown for the company, in the current fiscal year, which ends April 30th.

Foreign revenue is about 18 per cent of Republic's total, Mr. Yates said.

Consolidated owns 48 per cent of Republic's stock, he said. The investment is $900,000. Answering stockholders' questions, he classified the investment thus: 150,000 shares at $5; 75,000 shares at $2.

The Cajo Company, Inc., the Setay Corporation, and Nat Levine, principally, own the remaining 52 per cent of Republic's stock, Mr. Yates said.

There is a loan by Consolidated to Republic, less than one year old, and amounting to $3,250,000.

The laboratory work from Republic amounts to about 18 per cent of Consolidated's total business, Mr. Yates said.

In the discussion, at the stockholders' meeting, on the possible financial reorganization of Consolidated, interest was expressed in any plan which would wipe out arrearages of $8 a share on the first preferred stock, amounting now to approximately $3,200,000.

Shares of preferred and common stock represented at the meeting totaled 506,179.

Directors and Officers Reelected

Directors Herbert J. Yates, Walter W. Vincent, Ralph I. Poucher, and W. P. Stevens, were reelected.

Officers reelected were H. J. Yates, president; J. L. Aller, R. I. Poucher, M. J. Siegel, W. W. Vincent, vice-presidents; H. J. Yates, Jr., vice-president and treasurer; J. E. McMahon, secretary; R. S. Rodgers, E. H. Seifert, N. K. Loder, assistant treasurers; and A. E. Schiller, assistant secretary.

Mr. Poucher, a vice-president in charge of sales, reported an increase in 1939 business over 1938. He noted that net sales last year, from 35 mm operations, were $4,216,392. In 1938, they were $4.149,791. There were 35 mm sales by the Hollywood laboratory last year, of $1,057,936. In 1938, these were $898,780.

Sixteen millimetre operations, he said, increased 20 per cent.

The 16 mm operations in 1939 were $68,824. In 1938 they were $57,519.

There were no 16 mm sales in the Hollywood plant in 1938. Last year these amounted to $2,367.

The corporation's total sales in 1939 were $6,183,305; in 1938 they were $5,921,489.

These included various sources of revenue; for instance, Magnacolor. Sales in that were $14,541 in 1939; $26,571 in 1938.

Notes Plant Improvements

Mr. Poucher noted improvements in the Fort Lee, New Jersey, and Hollywood plants. Among these improvements are a more efficient personnel; use of ultra violet light in the laboratories; a more economical system of silver recovery.

On April 15th, he said, the operations of the East and West coast still plants will be coordinated.

Mr. Poucher termed company affairs since January 1st of this year, "favorable." He pointed out that the Fort Lee plant, during March, had processed 30,000,000 feet of film, more than the laboratory had processed in any previous month.

According to the company's annual report, for 1939, total Consolidated current and working assets are $5,973,225; its plants and other properties are worth $3,892,577, after deducting reserves for depreciation, in the amount of $1,595,206; prints and negatives were worth $233,346.

The organization's directors are conservative in policy, Mr. Yates emphasized to the stockholders, in replying to questions about dividend payments. He said payments may be made in one or two years, if Consolidated's business continues to grow better.

The corporation's plants may soon be able to handle color work, Mr. Yates said.

There will be no great use of color films until the total assets are reduced to approximate those of black-and-white film work, Mr. Yates said. Color costs now are almost five times greater than black-and-white, he said, and added that, when the cost of the former goes down, his company would have a plant able to process color, on 24 hours' notice.

The use of Technicolor, in several pictures, had not affected the amount of processing done by Consolidated, Mr. Yates noted.

Mr. Siegel, Republic president, left New York for the Coast, on Tuesday, after a one-week visit.

Legislative Gains In New York

The New York State legislature, which represents more than 13,000,000 people and has many of the largest theatres in the country within its confines, concluded its 1940 labors last week after rejecting proposals regarded as inimical, directly or otherwise, to the motion picture industry.

Favorable developments from the session, from the exhibitors' viewpoint were:

Two defeats were sustained in the Assembly by billboard curbing advocates, one last week on the Wright-Griffith bill, which was beaten 87-48, with Assemblyman William T. A. Webb, manager of the Smalley Circuit, playing the leading role in its defeat, and another a few hours before adjournment Saturday night on the Todd measure to create a committee to study the problem of outdoor advertising. Webb cited last week on the floor the loss of revenue to farmers if the thousands of theatre and other billboard ads were restricted. The Todd measure, reported out by Rules Committee, was turned down 115-25.

Passage of a merit rating bill to effect the reduction in unemployment insurance levy on employers whose employment is stable throughout the year and defeat of Governor Lehman's suggested $15,000,000 increased income tax.

Passed by the legislature and sent to Governor Lehman was a bill by Assemblyman MacNeil Mitchell transferring to the Secretary of State licensing of ticket brokers and limiting resale of theatre tickets to 75 cents above printed admission price, advocated by the League of New York Theatres.

Failing to prevail after favorable report from a Senate committee was the Condon bill amending the general business law to set up additional necessities concerning plans and specifications for the construction of moving picture projection booths.

Killed outright were:

An Anti-ASCAP measure, favored by small theatre owners.

Many anti-discrimination bills by Assemblymen Daniel Burrows, William T. Andrews, Bernard Austin and Senator Charles Perry.

Three per cent Bewley-Whitney sales tax.

Bingo legalization bills by Assemblymen Max Turshen and Aaron Goldstein and Senator John T. McCall.

Bill amending the civil rights law in relation to the right of ticket holders to admission to theatres.

For the first time in years the Motion Picture Division was not even mentioned as the subject for a censorship repeal bill, while the two-men-in-projection booth measure was also not introduced. Similarly, previous perennials such as the no-sale-without-a-seat, more matrons for children, etc., were not introduced.

Lomba Sails

E. F. Lomba, Central American home office representative for Twentieth Century-Fox, sailed Friday for Venezuela, where he will be the acting manager, succeeding the late Julio Amadeo. Mr. Lomba will arrange a sales meeting of Central American managers in Havana under the direction of Walter J. Hutchinson, director of foreign distribution, while en route to attend London and Paris conventions in May.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

WHEN SAMUEL GOLDWYN got to Arizona, the other week, to film exterior scenes for his new "Westerner," he found it necessary, as is customary, to build a few shacks to house the unit, also wooden structures to dot the desert scenery and some other odds and ends. With the flair for publicity that marks so many Goldwyn enterprises, word soon came that Arizona's Governor, in tribute to Mr. Goldwyn, had named the temporary outpost "Goldwyn City," the announcement getting all expected newspaper type and pictorial treatment.

The press pictures apparently trickled eastward, reaching Fort Dodge, Iowa, from where one enterprising and ambitious gentleman dispatched the following postal request to the Tucson, Arizona, Chamber of Commerce:

"I would like to ask about a small town about 38 miles from Tucson. The name is 'Goldwyn'. As I am a stranger to that part of the country, I would like your view toward establishing there. If it is not too much trouble, I would like you to describe 'Goldwyn', its business establishments, etc."

The request stopped the Chamber of Commerce "cold," freezing them so stiff that they could not reply, left the writing in the hands of the Arizona Republic newspaper editor, who wrote to the Iowan as follows:

"Goldwyn City rests on the side of a hill. Surrounding its one sunken-roofed building and adjoining corral is the beautiful Arizona desert, sagebrush, cactus, mesquite, palo verdes and all. Through its streets and in its outskirts roam the cattle of Howell Manning, upon whose land rests the famed city that once impersonated Langtry, Tex., for the purpose of making the movie known as 'The Westerner'. Gary Cooper, Doris Danvenport and Walter Brennan raised h— all around the place, impersonating Judge Roy Bean and tough western people for some three weeks. They were paid for doing it by Samuel Goldwyn, Inc.

"Goldwyn officially obtained its name by proclamation of Gov. R. T. Jones of Arizona, who did it as a publicity stunt and to accommodate the movie company. It must have been a pretty good stunt or you wouldn't know of its existence.

"Honest, Mister, it's a shack on the desert and a long, tough drive from civilization (Tucson). You'll have to pack your grub and your water in, along with any other little necessities that go with living anywhere. There's no light, heat or water, no grocery store, hotel, barber shop, bar or restaurant—just a deserted building and corral.

"Goldwyn has the distinction of being the only city that close to Tucson that hasn't been full of winter visitors for months. We don't think you would like it."

And now Mr. Herbert J. His story is told in Republic's new "Dark Command."

For reasons inexplicable, few outside of Kansas and Missouri know much about this "Black Knight of Kansas," and to make up for that inattention by biographers, Republic's Charles Reed Jones went out and had Kathleen Lamb do quite a piece on the brigand for the edification of exhibitor customers, spreading the story in quite a fashion in the press book he just finished for "Dark Command," a big press book, done in multi-colors with many an eye-arresting piece of type and art.

Bad Bill Quantrill did not engage in single murder. One of his choice bits was the leading of his gang of "Red Leg" guerillas—so called because of the red leggings they wore—into the town of Lawrence, Kansas, one night, in August, 1863, murdering the 180 persons who got in their way, pillaging and plundering everything in sight, destroying all buildings, save one, a hotel, which Quantrill "sympathetically" spared because he remembered he had once spent a night there without being charged the tariff, but Quantrill shot the hotel's proprietor.

THEY gave Anna a funeral the other day. Eight venerable work horses, wearing the funeral plumage of another day, hauled a gun carriage up to the 40th St. entrance of the Metropolitan Opera House on Broadway, in New York.

A man who said he was Jim Moran and called himself the "world's leading purveyor of useless information" tried to read an oration beginning, "We are here to bury Anna, not to praise her," but the crowd made too much noise and he gave up. (Copies of the oration were made available, thoughtfully, for the press.)

Another man named Pat Baron of the Somerset Stables said he didn't care much about the funeral as long as he got paid for the use of the eight horses.

The plumes and the gun carriage drew a crowd the police had trouble controlling. Few in the crowd knew that Anna was a mare and had made many a Metropolitan Opera entrance in the triumphal scene of "Aida," hauling the chariot that bore the Carusos and Giglis and other tenor greats of her time. Or that she had carried Rudolph Valentino in "The Sheik," and Marion Davies in "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

The eight old horses reared and bucked and caused trouble. At last they pulled the gun carriage away from the entrance, supposedly starting the ashes of Anna for her last resting place at the Pegasus Club, in Rockleigh, N. J., to which Anna was retired three years ago.

Except that Anna's ashes were never in her funeral anyway. Somebody forgot them and they were in New Jersey all the time.

NEW EXHIBITORS COUNCIL OPENS FIRE ON BRITISH FILM RENTALS

Circuits Join Independents in Preparing National Campaign; Call Percentages High; Imports from U. S. Drop

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

Reflecting the warlike spirit of the times, the new General Council of the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association have lost no time in going to war themselves. With the first meeting of their new official year they have set forth to battle in the cause of film hire.

Demand Lower Rentals

They held their initial meeting the morning after they were voted into office, and made it their first and determined purpose to set about a new campaign for the reduction of film rentals. Decision was taken there and then to organize a national campaign, and a committee instructed to devise ways and means of going about it, to guide local branches of the Association in the appropriate course of action, and to have a cut and dried plan ready this month. The determined urgency of the matter was reflected, too, in the new president's declared readiness, if necessary, to call a special meeting of the General Council.

The new campaign, which has the complete support of both circuits and independents in the exhibitor group, is a symptom of a condition and a potential means to cure it. Discontent, notably among the independents, with the conditions of film hire, particularly its level, was rife before the present war broke out. In the main the privileged booking position of the circuits was an aggrevation to the independent's trading with the distributor. Now, with the economic problem of survival made more acute by wartime conditions, with the product shortage consistently becoming more intense, the exhibitor state of mind, and finance, has sharply impelled a joint and comprehensive instinct to action.

Campaign Proposals Vary

Just what form the campaign will take remains to be decided. There exists a wide feeling in favor of the abolition of sharing terms and the reinstitution exclusively of flat rentals, though such a development is considered unlikely. Boycott of offending distributors has been suggested. Another champion of exhibitor freedom has put forward the idea that with Government aid the film as a commodity should be brought within the scope of the Anti-Profiteering Act. Whatever be the lines of the campaign, whatever its details, there would seem to be every indication even at this early stage that it may take on the embittered flavor of the anti-grading campaign, a campaign which revealed considerable tenacity on the part of exhibitors, which was spiced with acerbity and acrimony, and ended with the exhibitors victorious.

High Percentages Protested

Present moods, too, would suggest that efforts may well be made, if considered necessary, to call in Government aid. A certain cockiness marks the current political operations of the British picture house operator. His relations with the Government, not impossibly because conciliation frequently goes hand in hand with his demands, are not uncordial.

It is contended that film prices are not only too high but far too high for the quality of the films offered on the market at present. Abe Freedman, chairman of the London Branch, to whom went the privilege of moving the initial resolution calling for the new campaign, said that in the next few weeks only 22 films would be released, nearly all of them at 50-50 sharing terms rental. Mr. Freedman foresees terms going up to 60 and 70 per cent if action is not taken here and now.

Such terms, called high enough for first-run product, operate most unjustly with later run films, exhibitors hold. The view obtains that a second or third-run film virtually has become second-hand, and should be offered at a second-hand price, certainly not at that demanded for first release.

Imports from U. S. Decline

How acutely the film hire situation is enwrapped with the product shortage has been forcibly pleaded already by more than one champion of the new crusade. It is believed and suggested by the CEA that there is a disparity between the totals of films released in the United States and those registered here. Indeed, a documented appeal has been made to the Board of Trade for an investigation into the falling off in foreign film registrations. It is, for instance, pointed out that in the United States there were 567 films released in 1937, a total of 550 in 1938, and 535 in 1939. Against this, CEA protestations point out, with oblique indications of its significance, that registrations on this side of the Atlantic have retrogressively decreased. In a year's trading, that of 1938-39, a grand total of 498 was registered. For the ten months from April, 1938, to February, 1939, the total was 364. The same ten months of the 1939-40 trade year found a total of only 279. The inferences of this statistical analysis are obvious.

Though these figures are tied up with the CEA's Quota case, crusaders in the cause of lower film rentals say they color the latter too. At present the demand is uppermost that the large American companies be called upon to honor their promise not to restrict film imports to Britain. At a later stage it is likely to be tied up with the general question of film hire. On both aspects the foreign distributors here will have a ready and reasonable reply. Meanwhile they resent suggestions of unfairness or dishonesty, are in fact becoming a little tired of a succession of flank attacks on varying grounds. Sudden intensification of hostilities on the wider field, mass bombings or other phenomena of modern civilized warfare on the European model, may, of course, put a halt to any lesser battle. But there is a glint on the axes in the exhibitor armory just now.

QUOTA CONTINUES ANOTHER YEAR

With the adjournment of Parliament last week for a long holiday, until late this month, the British film quota is continuing into the next quota year which began last Monday, April 1st.

At the start of the war last September, it was decided to continue the present quota for six months from October 1, and then to take action if such were needed.

Financial circles have indicated that the Government is closely studying the plan for a Films Credit Bank, and that a similar study is underway by the Bank of England, but no Government announcement is expected before the fall.

Practically all American companies are ahead of their quota requirements for the current quota year.

Associated Nets $17,800

A net profit for the last financial year of about $17,800 is reported by Associated Talking Pictures, parent company for the Ealing studios and producers of the George Formby films.

Pasternak of "U" Meets Exhibitors

Universal will not make the "super," the "multi-million dollar pictures"; it will be content to "make the 25, 40 and 50 cent kind for the millions who want them," Joseph Pasternak, Universal producer, told 100 New York theatre operators, Universal home office officials and representatives of the motion picture trade press, at a luncheon in his honor last Thursday at the Hotel Astor.

Mr. Pasternak, praised for his record of seven consecutive "hit" pictures with the same star, Deanna Durbin, responded with an appreciation of exhibitor support, and said Universal would better its record if it continued to receive that support.

William A. Scully, sales manager and vice-president of the company, introduced Mr. Pasternak.

Among those attending were John J. O'Connor, Fred Meyers, Max Fellerman and Harry Mandel, of RKO theatres; Terry Ramsaye, editor of the MOTION PICTURE HERALD; Oscar Doob and Eugene Picker, of the Loew circuit; George Skouras, John Benas, William White, William Powers, Milton Hossfeld, and Edward Zabel, of the Skouras theatres; Clayton Bond, Ed Hinchy, Leonard Schlesinger, Don Jacocks, Harry Goldberg and I. J. Hoffman, of the Warner circuit; Fred Schwartz, Sam Goodman, and Albert Hovell, of the Century circuit.

Leo Justin and Morris Jacks represented Walter Reade Theatres; William P. Phillips, United Artists Theatres; Joseph M. Seider, Prudential Circuit; Arthur Mayer, Rialto; Leo Brecher, Plaza; Joe Philipson, Paramount Theatres; Sam Rinzler, Irving Kaplan and Manny Frisch, Randforce, and J. J. Thompson, Cocalis Theatres. Present also were Si Fabian, Harry Brandt, Jack Hattem, Harry Katz and Harold Eskin.

Universal executives, besides William A. Scully, included Nate J. Blumberg, president; J. Cheever Cowdin, board chairman; Charles D. Prutzman, Joseph Seidelman, William J. Heineman, Peyton Gibson, F. T. Murray, J. J. Jordan, Leo Abrams, Louis Pollock, Hank Linet, Morris Alin, Andy Sharick and Fortunat Baronat.

It All Came True

(Warner-First National)

Urban Comedy-Drama

Treated lightly in the main and with emphasis on the humorous side, this Louis Bromfield novel of coincidence yields 95 minutes of solid entertainment well off the beaten path. In it Ann Sheridan gives her best performance to date, reminding of the latter day Jean Harlow, and Humphrey Bogart provides one of his less murderous and more amusing gangster portrayals. Jeffrey Lynn has a somewhat less successful casting, but there is plenty of acting strength in supporting performances by Zasu Pitts, Una O'Connor, Felix Bressart, Grant Mitchell and the others.

The story opens in a brownstone mansion turned boarding house by two genteel ladies whose modern son and daughter, respectively, are a musician in circumstantial thrall of a gangster and a torrid but virtuous and unemployed cafe singer. The gangster forces the boy to hide him out in the boarding house, where plausible and amusing developments influence him to refinance the home as a "Gay Nineties" night club which succeeds to the point of retiring an overhanging mortgage. At the close of the picture he surrenders to the police without going musky about it but getting everybody else's happiness provided for nevertheless.

Mark Hellinger served Hal B. Wallis as associate producer and the film bears his Broadway imprint in many a particular. It is directed by Lewis Seiler from a screen play by Michael Fessier and Laurence Kimble which misses no opportunities. Miss Sheridan sings two or three new songs and a medley of old ones with much effectiveness.

Son of the Navy

(Monogram)

Comedy-Drama

Jean Parker, persuasively personable star, shares with James Dunn and a talented boy named Martin Spellman chief player responsibility for the fresh charm which places this light comedy drama high above studio average. Not since the early Shirley Temple pictures has Mr. Dunn had so congenial casting as enjoyed and made the most of in the sailor role given him here. These three, ably supported, supply clean, brisk and stimulating entertainment in the best traditions of the American movie.

Directed without waste of opportunity by William Nigh, the screen play by Marion Orth and Joseph West is a business-like adaptation of a story by True Boardman and Grover Jones, first performed on the radio. At bottom it is the amusing and sometimes touching story of an 11-year-old orphan boy who "adopts" a sailor as his father and another sailor's daughter as his mother. The scene is San Pedro and San Francisco, with the fleet and its personnel supplying authentic Navy background.

Grant Withers, recently come from a long acting career to the ranks of associate producer, rates high credit for an impressive job of marshaling worthwhile materials into a soundly worthwhile whole.

Ma, He's Making Eyes at Me

(Universal)

Comedy with Music

An unpretentiously entertaining comedy, this production tells the story of an advertising man for a class dress shop in New York who popularizes the garments by creating a "Miss Manhattan" to demonstrate them and who, after creating a "Mr. Manhattan," gets the crowning idea to have them marry. However the advertising man at the last moment realizes that he loves the model and enacts the role of bridegroom himself.

Tom Brown is the advertising man and Constance Moore the model. In support are Richard Carle, Anne Nagel, Jerome Cowan, Elizabeth Risdon, Fritz Feld, Larry Williams, Frank Mitchell, Peggy Chamberlan, Vivien Fay and Marie Greene and her Merry Minstrels.

Harold Schuster directed the Joseph G. Sanford production from a screen play by Charles Grayson and Edmund L. Hartmann. It is an Ed Sullivan story.

The finale is a show put on by the employees of the shop, and the vaudeville turns introduced met hearty audience approval. Miss Moore sings "Ma, He's Making Eyes At Me," hit song by Con Conrad and Sidney Clare now being revived, and "Unfair to Love" by Frank Skinner and Sam Lerner. Carle sings "A Lemon in the Garden of Love" with music by him and lyrics by M. E. Rourke.

And One Was Beautiful

(MGM)

Mirth and Melodrama

Returning to the screen after an absence of two years, Jean Muir appears here in the title role, one of two sisters in love with the same man. Her beauty, however, is overshadowed by a core of selfishness so that she lets the man be imprisoned for a crime she committed.

The younger of the sisters, portrayed by Laraine Day, the "Maeve" of "My Son, My Son," proves her loyalty and love by unearthing the fact of her sister's guilt and doing all in her power to aid the convicted man.

The young man is depicted by Robert Cummings, the girls' mother by Billie Burke. The screen play is by Harry Clork, based on an Alice Duer Miller story. Robert B. Sinclair directed. All point up the romantic and comedy elements.

Star Dust

(20th Century-Fox)

Hollywood Success Story

Telling of a little known side of Hollywood, the constant hunt for new talent and the heartbreaks facing the screen-struck, "Star Dust" is a human interest document on the production community, its work and its glamour. It is not of the same school of fiction as "Once in a Lifetime" or "A Star is Born." It contains

The Life of Giuseppi Verdi

(Esperia)

Musical Romance

The private life of the composer is presented in the Italian-made production, from his first yearnings to become a student of music, through the numerous hardships and tragedies that befell him before fame summoned him.

With beautifully staged excerpts from operas, from sketches, photographs and actual sets borrowed from the Scala museum, the story is presented as the operas were presented in Italy in the nineteenth century.

The picture also relates a heart-warming love story of Verdi's first wife and, later, the two prima donnas who inspired his works.

Scenes are from "Rigoletto," "Don Carlos," 'Il Trovatore," "La Traviata," "Aida" and others.

The musical direction is handled by Tullio Carafin and Luigi Ricci. From Verdi's works they have arranged the musical accompaniment, and the producers say that unpublished and forgotten fragments have been added.

Contributing also are more than a hundred members of the orchestra of the Teatro Reale dell'Opera, a chorus of almost 200, and solos by Beniamino Gigli, Pia Tassinari Maria Cebotari and others of the Italian opera.

The picture, with English title superimposed by Armando Macaluso, was made by the Great Historical Films, Inc., at the Cinecitta Studios in Rome. Carmine Gallone directed and assisted Lucio D'Ambra, of the Italian Academy, in preparing the screenplay.

The inclusion of Verdi's best known music helps to lift the picture out of the limited audience appeal range of operatic subjects.

Claudine

(French Motion Picture Corp.)

Gallic Glimpse of Young Love

The title character of this production by the Parisian penwoman, Colette, is an adolescent and will remind Americans of the wholesome and appealing "Willie Baxter" of Booth Tarkington's immortal "Seventeen." The young French miss is a year younger than her American prototype.

However, outside of some extremely picturesque outdoor photography of rural scenery, and brief character demonstrations of a few of the minor players, the study of the young school girl, more clinical than natural, is inept and tedious.

"Claudine," more precocious than her tender years warrant, knows all about the amours of Casanova and has introduced to the greedy girl readers the naughty but not nice work, "Aphrodite." In between getting into and out of school scrapes, little "Claudine" is the object of an unnatural passion from the school's headmistress. The arrival of another woman teacher starts a shift in the amatory situation. Then a new doctor comes to town and his appearance apparently releases "Claudine" from the evil spell of the lady "schoolmarms." When she is introduced to the medico's fiancee, she just laughs through her tears and soliloquizes that at her elastic age nothing really matters.

Seen at a midafternoon performance at the Little Carnegie Playhouse art cinema showshop, in New York, where a fair sized audience was non-committal except during the more normal and appealing comedy moments.—JOSEPH F. COUGHLIN.

Dr. Kildare's Strange Case

(MGM)

Round Four of Kildare-Gillespie Bout

The semi-professional, semi-platonic bickering between senior "Dr. Gillespie" and the young medico, "Dr. Kildare," enters its fourth stretch, with attentive audiences assured, even if a newcomer may see in the present offering more talk than action.

Lew Ayres and Lionel Barrymore again are the two professional principals and Laraine Day is again the romantic and pulchritudinous asset. Other faithful "Kildare" players are Samuel S. Hinds, Emma Dunn, Alma Kruger, and the comedy team of Nat Pendleton and Marie Blake. Harold S. Bucquet again directed.

The case concerns a brain operation patient who loses his mind. It is the business of "Dr. Kildare" to bring the sufferer back to normalcy.

Lights Out in Europe

(Mayer-Burstyn)

Documentary on War

After difficulty with foreign censors, Herbert Kline, producer-director of the Czechoslavakian documentary, "Crisis," has returned to the United States with additional film, here chiefly on the Polish Corridor.

James Hilton, author of "Goodbye, Mr. Chips," wrote the commentary, which is recited from the screen by Fredric March, stage and screen star.

Showing England's preparation for war and the occupation of the Corridor by Nazi Germany, "Lights Out in Europe" is an interesting and revealing study of the effects of conflict on various peoples of Europe.

In England are depicted the training of citizens in the use of gas masks, assignment to medical groups and the drafting of men for the army. From Poland's gallant fight come many gruesome scenes, including a machine-gunned young girl, a farmer's bullet-ridden body attended by his wife and child, cattle burned to death. Included also are scenes from the last World War. All this makes the picture suitable only for adult consumption.

Lupino Lane, one of England's foremost stage and screen entertainers, leads a lighter side with his interpretation of England's new marching song, "We'll Hang Out the Washing on the Sigfried Line."

Alexander Hackenschmied was again the cameraman. Rosa Harvan Kline was production manager.

Produced and directed by Herbert Kline and to be released by Mayer-Burstyn. Peter Mayer, associate producer. Rosa Harvan Kline, production manager. Alexander Hackenschmied, photographer. P. C. A. No. 6138. Release date, April 13, 1940. Running time, 66 minutes. Adult audience classification.

Ghost Valley Raiders

(Republic)

Western

Republic, which has two western series featuring singing cowboy stars, Gene Autry and Roy Rogers, and one series depending primarily on action, The Three Mesquiteers, has balanced its western production with the addition of Donald Barry. "Ghost Valley Raiders" is the first of the new series and action is the keynote. Barry makes a promising start, with some polishing still to be done.

In supporting roles are Lona Andre, Leroy Mason as the heavy, Tom London, Jack Ingram, Horace Murphy, Ralph Peters, Curley Dresden and Yakima Canutt. George Sherman produced and directed from a screen play by Bennett Cohen. The original story idea was by Connie Lee.

"Tim Brandon," a government agent, under the assumed name of "The Tolusa Kid," bandit, is sent to Silver City to solve the mystery of repeated stagecoach holdups. "Frank Ewing," manager of the stagecoach line, is secretly the head of the gang.

George and Margaret

(Warner Brothers - British)

Domestic Comedy

The original play ran long and successfully on the London stage. The screen version deserves a success no less prolonged and infinitely more widespread. A hilariously funny searchlight on the upper middle class family, it has point as well as polish and is a picture of which any Hollywood studio would be proud. George King herein reveals a very deft hand at directing comedy, and though the film is an adapted play it has unceasing movement and incident. Seldom has a cast—headed here by the irresistible Marie Lohr—worked with a keener zest. There is a laugh in every sequence, several in most of them.

Best of all is of course the impeccable Marie Lohr whose "Mrs. Garth Bander" is an epic comedy creation. Ann Casson, too, a peculiarly fascinating girl, is an interesting "Gladys," the comedy creation.

There is technical finish throughout.

"George and Margaret" is certainly one of the films of the British year.

A London trade audience laughed incessantly at the Phoenix Theatre preview. Critical minds hailed its polish and humors. Exhibitor reaction, very favorable without obvious exception, inclined to the belief that apart from the film's intrinsic qualities it was something of an antidote to wartime blues.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

Produced and distributed by Warner Brothers. Directed by George King. Produced by A. M. Salomon. Screen play by Rodney Ackland and Brock Williams. Editor, Terence Fisher. Photography, Basil Emmott. Swing with Bing

(No release set)

Crosby Golf and Song

Seldom has a short subject contained such box office potentialities as this, starring Bing Crosby, a host of professional golfers, other athletes, and Arthur Q. Bryan of the "Grouch Club" radio program, against a background of the fourth annual Crosby-sponsored Rancho Santa Fe Pro-Amateur Golf Tournament. Crosby sings "The Little White Pill on the Little Green Hill," original song by John Burke and James V. Monaco, and comedy lightens the introductions of the various golfers and other athletes. The narration is by Roger Keene. Those introduced include Byron Nelson, Jimmy Thompson, Bud Ward, Walter Hagen, Clayton Heafner, Jimmy Demaret, Jug McSpaden, Lawson Little, Ed Oliver, Frank Rodia, Leo Diegel, Tony Penna, Ty Cobb, Marshall Duffield, Jimmy McLarnin, Scotty Chisholm, Henry McLemore and Richard Arlen.

John Scott Trotter and his Divot Diggers provide the music. Herbert Polesie produced and directed, with Everett Crosby, Ltd., handling the business management.

No release has been set for the subject.

Running time, 13 minutes.

Experts at Work

The combined knowledge of the regular board of experts and the guest expert, Clarence Budington Kelland, is encyclopaedic in scope, but it can miss, as Clifton Fadiman, who fires the questions, can testify. Oscar Levant, F. P. Adams and John Kieran are on hand as usual. Mr. Levant, musician, wit and now author of the best selling book "A Smattering of Ignorance," always has his hand up and usually makes a good fling at the question.—Running time, 10 minutes.

The Domineering Male

(MGM)

Pete Smith Specialty

An interesting and entertaining subject that should find many a chuckle forthcoming from the harassed male was probably inspired by Leap Year. The story has to do with a woman's tactics in pursuit of man. The man in the case, of course, is quite certain that he is doing the pursuing, but Pete Smith has taken his cameras behind the scenes to show the snares set by the girl. Johnny Hines, former star of the silent screen, wrote the script, prepared the screen play, and directed the film.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Seattle, Gateway to the Northwest

(FitzPatrick-MGM)

Travelogue

James A. FitzPatrick, continuing his tour of the United States, has stopped off at Seattle, to make a travelogue for his new domestic series. Seattle, the gateway to the northwest, is a thriving city and typically American. Traveling by airplane, automobile and by foot, the cameramen have caught glimpses of the commerce, buildings and play resorts in the Washington city.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Climbing the Spirit's Home

(20th Century-Fox)

Exploring in Alaska

The series of subjects edited from filmings by the Jesuit, Father Hubbard, during his explorations of glaciers in Alaska, is continued with this reel in which the priest and three students of Santa Clara University climb to the birthplace of one of the territory's mightiest rivers of ice, a vast snowfield held in superstitious awe by the native Indians. The purpose of the expedition is to take temperature readings of the ice at various levels in the glacier, and to this end one of the party is lowered into one of the dangerous crevasses which crisscross the surface. The commentary, by Father Hubbard and Lowell Thomas, is not as smooth as that in previous reels.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Stranger Than Fiction, No. 73

Oddity Reel

A miniature stone mansion constructed by a mason as a hobby opens this interesting reel. Shown also is a one man school where the only pupil is a boy about seven years old. In Louisville, Fritz Bade makes pictures with various types of natural colored wood, later inlaid. A man in Kirksville, Mo., trains a horse to do tricks and mind the baby. The highlight of the reel is a photographer, "Slim" Summerville (not the actor) of San Antonio, who looks, acts, speaks and dresses like Abraham Lincoln. —Running time, 9¼ minutes.

Over the Seven Seas

Thorgersen Sport Review

Because sailing yachts and small craft are among the most photogenic of subjects, this reel should appeal to an even wider audience than solely of those who feel the fascination of salt water and a spanking breeze. The subject includes many individual shots of sailing craft which are singularly beautiful and is only slightly marred by a lack of continuity and one or two instances of photographic shortcoming.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Going Places, No. 73

(Universal)

R. R. and Canines

Number 73 of the Going Places series enjoyably concerns itself with the latest developments in railroad economy and passenger comfort. To give longer life to tracks and to eliminate the monotonous clicking from the rails, companies now are laying tracks one quarter mile long by electrical welding (they're 39 feet now). The second portion of the reel deals with thoroughbred dogs and a visit to the Morris and Essex Dog Show in New Jersey.—Running time, nine minutes.

STOCK PLANS FOR DISNEY, B & K, CONSOLIDATED, MONOGRAM, KEITH

Twentieth - Fox Lists Salaries; Pathe and General Theatres Report Profits; Columbia Declares Dividend; SEC Reports

Five companies—a producer, two circuits, and a large film processing company with varied interests—drew attention in financial pages this week, with new financing arrangements or revelations of financial operations. They were Walt Disney Productions, whose first public stock issue, on Tuesday, was oversubscribed; Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation, whose impending recapitalization was hinted to stockholders; the Balaban and Katz Corporation circuit (a Paramount Pictures subsidiary), the remaining preferred stock of which is being retired; Monogram, with a $100,000 stock sale; and Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., whose possible recapitalization was announced at the annual stockholders' meeting, in New York, last week.

Disney Underwriting Approved

Officials of Walt Disney Productions announced the oversubscription on Monday. Public offering of the stock was made on Tuesday by a financing syndicate, headed by Kidder, Peabody and Company.

The Securities Exchange Commission, on Monday, formally approved the $3,875,000 underwriting.

The stock issue comprises 155,000 shares of six per cent cumulative, convertible preferred stock, at $25 par value, at $25 per share. Five thousand shares of this stock are being offered to the company's personnel, at par value. The rest is open to the public.

The new stock may be converted into common stock at the rate of one share of common, if converted on or before April 1, 1944; 9/10 of a share thereafter, until April 1, 1945; 8/10, until April 1, 1946; 7/10 until April 1, 1947; 6/10 until April 1, 1948; one-half share, if converted after these dates.

On, or before April 1, 1941, a fixed sinking fund of $50,000 will be set aside, with $100,000 on or before October 1st and April 1st. The company will also set aside, out of the excess of consolidated profits, over $500,000 of a sum equal to 20 per cent of such excess, but not exceeding $200,000 additional in any one year. Both sinking funds are to be applied to the acquisition of preferred shares, either by redemption or purchase.

$1,500,000 Life Insurance

A feature of the preferred stock is a provision for the insuring of Walt Disney's life, for ten years, at $1,500,000. Should he die on, or before, April 1, 1944, while any preferred stock is outstanding, the proceeds of the insurance would be put in trust for the outstanding preferred stockholders' benefit.

Should he die after that date, the proceeds of the same will be taken by the company.

The preferred shares can be redeemed at any time, at prices ranging from $27.50 per share through April 1, 1944, to $25 per share after April 1, 1949.

After the financing, the company will have, in addition to the preferred, 355,000 shares of common stock, at $5 par value.

Walt E. Disney and members of his family own all of the outstanding common stock.

In the financial syndicate in the underwriting are Kidder, Peabody and Company; Harriman Ripley and Company, Inc.; Pacific Capital Corporation, and Mitchum, Tully, and Company; William R. Staats Company; W. E. Hutton and Company; Lee Higginson Corporation; Graham, Parsons and Company; Stone, and Webster, and Blodgett, Inc.; G. M-P. Murphy and Company; Merrill Lynch and Company, Inc.; Alex. Brown and Sons; the Pacific Company, of California; Baker, Watts and Company; Schwabacher and Company; Page, Hubbard, and Asche; Moore, Leonard, and Lynch; and Banks, Huntley, and Company.

The net income of the company (Disney) for the 12 months ended on September 30, 1939, was $1,250,130, after all charges and Federal income taxes.

Keith-Albee Recapitalization

In a letter to the stockholders, George J. Schaefer, president, hints that the Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation may be recapitalized soon.

The letter, which concerned the annual meeting of the corporation, in New York, on April 10th, said, in part:

"Pending the plan of recapitalization, the directors have decided that it would be advantageous to the corporation and its security holders if an opportunity were offered to preferred stockholders, to sell to the corporation certain shares of their preferred stock, at a price higher than that which has prevailed upon the New York Stock Exchange during recent months."

If the authorization is given, the corporation's management will ask approval to purchase 3,000 shares at $100 each. If more than 3,000 shares are offered, all offers will be accepted pro-rata; but if less are offered, the corporation will purchase openly, or privately, the difference, at not more than $100 per share.

KAO Earnings $976,627

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation owns most of the common stock. It holds 21,761 preferred shares, of the 64,304 now outstanding.

Keith-Albee-Orpheum is said to have cash of $3,203,502. Its 1939 earnings were $976,627. This was equivalent to $15.18 per share on 64,304 shares of the seven per cent cumulative preferred stock outstanding.

Last Thursday, in New York federal court, Judge William Bondy awarded $7,500 to special master George W. Alger, who confirmed the RKO plan of reorganization. This was a final allowance. Previous awards to Mr. Alger, in the RKO reorganization proceedings, had totaled $34,500.

Retire B. & K. Stock

All remaining preferred stock in the Balaban & Katz Corporation, of Chicago, is being retired on May 31st, this year, it was announced last Wednesday.

An additional bank loan recently negotiated, supplies the funds.

In 1936, the directors ordered 13,061 shares retired, and advised shareholders that the remainder of the original issue of 28,476 shares would be recalled in 1939.

Still out, are 12,745 shares which, plus $1.17 accrued dividends per share, will be retired on May 31st.

The stock was seven per cent cumulative, with a $100 par value.

The First National Bank of Chicago is the depository.

Monogram Stock Sale

Monogram franchise holders have arranged to acquire in excess of $100,000 worth of additional stock in the corporation, according to W. Ray Johnston, who arrived in New York from the Coast to attend a Monogram directors meeting Tuesday.

Mr. Johnston returns to the Coast in a few days to speed up production on the 11 remaining features of the current season and to complete plans for the franchise holders' sales convention at the Baker hotel in Dallas, April 21st and 22nd following the Variety Club convention on April 18th to 20th, which all Monogram officials and distributors also plan to attend.

More 'top-bracket' pictures are planned for 1940-41 season, according to Mr. Johnston, and eight additional westerns to be produced by George W. Weeks will probably be included in the program. The contemplated program at present planned is 50 pictures, consisting of 26 features and 24 westerns, final details of which will be announced at the Dallas meeting.

Attending the board meeting Tuesday were O. Henry Briggs, J. A. Sisto, Thomas P. Loach, William B. Jaffe, Samuel Broidy, John Mangham, and W. Ray Johnston.

Colonel T. C. Davis was elected a director. Mr. Davis is an officer of Standard Statistics Corporation.

Three More Companies' Finances Disclosed

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation revealed its officers and directors' salaries through a proxy statement to the stockholders through the New York Stock Exchange; Pathe Film Corporation's financial statement disclosed a $424,489 net profit in 1939; General Theatres Equipment Corporation stated that it earned, net, $696,062 in 1939, in its annual report to the stockholders; and the Securities Exchange Commission summary of stock dealings for February, issued Friday, revealed heaviest film stock transactions in Pathe film.

The Fox report disclosed $853,943 as aggregate compensation to officers and directors of the company, last year.

To officers, for services, $831,693 was paid; to directors, for attendance fees and as compensation for serving on board committees, $22,250.

The total amount does not include $1,967 to Hayden, Stone and Company, of which John R. Dillon, a director, is a member. This payment was for brokerage fees.

The total, also, does not include any amounts

FOX MIDWEST IN LOCAL NEWSREELS

Local newsreels have been inaugurated by the Fox Midwest Theatres circuit, in its Kansas City office. Cooper Jenkins, experienced in 16 mm. camera work, will make and display the reels, working out of the office of L. E. Pope, purchasing agent, which will handle local routings. Managers are to keep the office informed of important local events. Mr. Jenkins' equipment is an Eastman special camera, and a Bell & Howell Filmo arc projection machine.

GENERAL THEATRES AND PATHE PROFIT

on account of the stock option, or $10,400, the expense allowance to Sidney R. Kent, president of the company.

Under his employment contract, Mr. Kent received, last year, $179,370; under his contract, Joseph M. Schenck, chairman of the board and executive head of production, received $113,-833; under his contract, Darryl F. Zanuck, vice-president in charge of production, received $255,000.

The Chase National Bank, as of March 1st, this year, owned approximately 221,157 shares of common, and 671,915 shares of preferred stock. This is approximately one-third of the present outstanding voting stock.

The bank also holds, in various trust accounts, about 1,000 shares of common stock, and 40 shares of preferred.

The company's annual stockholders' meeting will be on April 16th. Twelve directors are to be reelected. They, and their stock holdings, are listed, thus:

H. Donald Campbell, 6/24 share of common and 6/12 preferred; John R. Dillon, one common, one preferred; Wilfred J. Eadie, one common, no preferred; Daniel O. Hastings, one common, no preferred; Felix A. Jenkins, one common, no preferred; Sidney R. Kent, 3,155 common and 6/12 preferred (Kent, in addition, has a contingent beneficial interest in 500 shares of preferred, held in trust for a member of his family); William C. Michel, 1,393 common and 6/12 preferred; William P. Phillips, one common, no preferred; Hermann G. Place, 6/24 common, 6/12 preferred; Seton Porter, 876 common, no preferred; Joseph M. Schenck, 110,042 common, 15,283 preferred; Sydney Towell, 33 shares common, 67 preferred.

Mr. Campbell and Mr. Place are officers of the Chase National Bank and represent it on the board.

William Goetz, a vice-president of the company, who is not on the board, owned, on March 1st, this year, about 178,342 shares of common stock, and 55,283 shares of preferred.

The holdings of Messrs. Goetz, Schenck, and Zanuck represent about 19 per cent of the voting stock.

At the April 16th meeting, stockholders are to vote on a proposal to grant Mr. Zanuck an option to purchase not more than 100 shares of common stock.

Pathe Report

Pathe Film Corporation, for the year ended December 31st, 1939, had a net profit of $424,-489, its annual report shows. This amount remains, after interest, Federal income taxes, etc., equal after dividend requirements on the $7 cumulative convertible preferred stock, to 64 cents a share (par $1) on 581,271 common.

In 1938, the company had a net profit of $77,158, equal to four cents a share on 581,679 shares of common stock.

The net profit of the DuPont Film Manufacturing was also reported; this was, for the same year ended the same date, $1,650,274, after deduction for Federal income taxes and other charges. This compares with $1,259,566 in 1938.

The Consolidated income account for year 1939 compares as follows:

FILMS TO EDUCATE GEORGIA FARMERS

Visual education of farmers through the use of motion pictures and exhibits is being tried out in 13 north Georgia counties. Conceived by state agents in Whitfield, Walker and Catoosa Counties last year, the novel means to improve farming practices attracted some 30,000 spectators in Whitfield County alone last year after it had been introduced by B. M. Drake, Whitfield agent.

The widespread interest and similar results in Walker and Catoosa Counties prompted the extension service to provide better equipment and more films. Mr. Drake was placed in charge of the expanded project which will also include Union, Dade, Gordon, Chattooga, Floyd, Murray, Towns, Fannin, Rabun and Gilmer Counties.

Balance sheet of Pathe Film Corp. as of December 31, 1939, follows:

Assets: Cash, $9,133; accounts receivable, $2,083; investment in 3,500 shares (35%) of capital stock of DuPont Film Manufacturing Corp., at amount acquired from predecessor company in 1935, pledged to secure bank loan $2,857,143; total, $2,868,359.

Liabilities: $7 cumulative convertible preferred represented by 7,713 no-par shares, $771,-512; common stock, par $1 per share, $581,271; bank note payable, $125,000; accounts and sundry accruals, $5,062; reserve for federal income taxes, $10,500; capital surplus, $1,007,205, earned surplus, $367,809; total, $2,868,359.

GTE Earned $696,062

Net profit of $696,062 in 1939, was reported Monday by General Theatres Equipment Corporation in its annual report to stockholders. This amount is after all charges, including federal income tax and a $51,665 reserve against investment in, and advances to subsidiaries not consolidated.

GTE is a holding corporation, controlling, among others, the International Projector Corporation and the National Theatre Supply Company; which concerns, in turn, control manufacturers of equipment; the latter having an interest in certain lighting equipment manufacturers, and other equipment makers, and the former manufacturing the Simplex mechanisms.

The GTE annual report was sent to the stockholders by Earl G. Hines, president.

The $696,062 net profit is equivalent to about $1.17 per share, on 592,887 shares of capital stock, which was outstanding at the end of 1939. The 1938 net profit was $507,267, the equivalent of 85 cents per share on 597,887 shares.

The 1939 figure includes $185,600 in dividends, received on the corporation's investment in Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation's common stock, one-half the amount received in dividends on this investment, in 1938.

At the present, the report remarks, no dividend is being paid on the latter's common stock.

General Theatres Equipment last year retired 5,000 shares of capital stock in the open market, at approximately $9 a share, the cost being charged to paid-in surplus.

Its directors, last Friday, declared a dividend of 20 cents per share on the capital st This is to be paid on April 18th, to stockhol of record on April 8th. The last dividend, the same, on December 18th, was 15 cents.

The Securities and Exchange Commission port on stock dealings for the month of Fe ary, issued on Friday, declared that the heav transaction by officers and directors of mo picture companies in the securities of their fir occurred in Pathe Films.

Kenneth M. Young, of New York, officer Pathe Film Corporation, acquired 500 sha of that company's common stock, the S said. These are his first holdings in that cl Another heavy transaction was the disp tion, by gift, of 300 Columbia Pictures' c mon voting trust certificates, by Jack C vice-president. This cuts Mr. Cohn's holdi to 31,221 certificates.

Loew's, which has been acquiring Loew's E ton Theatres common stock, acquired se more, in February, giving it a total of 100 shares.

There were other transactions: disposition 50 shares of Universal Pictures first prefer stock, by Preston Davies, a director, of N York, reducing his holdings to 70 shares; obtaining of 100 shares of the common st of GTE by an officer of the company, M. Carroll, of New York, these being his en holdings, as of that month, in the company

Columbia Declares Dividend

The directors of Columbia Pictures last w declared a dividend (regular quarterly) of 6 cents per share on the convertible prefe stock, payable on March 15th to stockholder record on May 1st.

Releasing Six Finnish Films in This Country

J. H. Hoffberg, New York distributor independent pictures, has contracted w Suomi Films, Finnish motion picture stu for six Finnish films. This week five of th were already in the exchange.

One film has English titles, fitted in F land. Hoffberg is not adding English ti here.

It was explained that the pictures, o low budget, cannot compete, in art hou with product from France, and so the ploitation is directed at populations with rect or indirect affinity to Finland. showings will be held largely in conjunct with Finnish war relief work.

J. H. Hoffberg has been touring the M dle Western territories where greatest sponse is expected—Michigan, Wiscon Ohio.

The pictures were made last year Suomi, whose studios in Helsinki remai open throughout the Russian-Finnish w making propaganda films.

All the pictures are in sound.

The titles are "The Smuggler" (with E lish titles), "The Henpecked Husba "Two Victors," "Wife in Name Only," " Rapid Shooter's Bride" and "Inspector Siltala."

The union last Wednesday asked simi- lar wages from the Republic and Walt Disney studios.

It will make similar demands on the large studios, when all independents have signed, it is understood.

Painters' Local Asks Action from the NLRB

The Moving Picture Painters Local 644 threatened to send a representative to the Washington office of the National Labor Relations Board, unless the Los Angeles office speeds action on the local's application for certification as bargaining agency for studio scenic artists.

Walter Spreckels, Los Angeles regional director for the board, declared he would hold an open hearing.

Screen Writers Disagree With NLRB Examiner

Directors of the Screen Writers Guild filed an exception to a report of James Fitzpatrick, National Labor Relations Board trial examiner, which said there was no evidence that producers had failed to bargain in good faith with the guild. The guild claims the producers failed to bargain because of a previous contract with Screen Playwrights, whose pact has been terminated. The report covered 1935 to 1939.

Equity Moves to Get Higher Salaries

A raise in minimum rates for legitimate theatre actors was demanded by resolution last Friday at the year's first quarterly meeting of Actors Equity, in New York. The raise would be to $50 weekly from $40.

At the same meeting, the approximately 500 members attending also asked, by resolution, for a central casting office, for actors earning between $40 and $100 weekly; a national, subsidized theatre; and less delay by the Equity Council's committee on unemployment and an experimental theatre.

Bert Lytell, president, announced last Thursday that he would accept renomination. The decision will eliminate any contest for the presidency, in elections scheduled for late May or early June.

He was renominated the following day.

Ticket Agencies Ask Theatres about Code

The Associated Theatre Ticket Agencies, through Attorney Gustave A. Gerber, was expected this week to ask the League of New York Theatres whether it would sustain the Code Enforcement Authority penalties against three of the Agencies' brokers who have been charged with violating the code's anti-speculation section. It was said by Mr. Gerber that there was no evidence justifying the suspension of the three brokers' franchises.

Move to Dissolve Actors' Fund

Frank E. Lynch, one of the four trustees of the death benefit fund of the American Federation of Actors, applied last Friday, in New York supreme court, for dissolution of the fund. The request was made by Mr. Lynch for himself and Ralph Whitehead, executive secretary of the AFA, which was expelled from the Associated Actors and Artistes of America last summer.

The move was protested, by affidavit, by Alan Corelli, executive secretary, of the Theatre Authority, Inc.

There will be another hearing on April 30th.

Philadelphia Locals Call Off Strike Threat; Musicians Announce Indefinite Postponement after Talk with Weber

A strike, which would have tied up all of the Warner Theatres' Philadelphia houses and showed possibilities of becoming nationwide (with musicians, members of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and other union workers in Warner studios dropping their jobs) was averted 48 hours before its scheduled beginning, on Monday, when the Philadelphia IATSE locals called off the movement.

In sympathy with the four month old strike of musicians against Warner theatres in that city, and under the mutual assistance pact with the national American Federation of Musicians, George E. Browne, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, had issued a "road-call" for a strike against Warners' Philadelphia theatres, by Monday, unless the circuit capitulated to the musicians.

However, last Saturday, A. Rex Ricciardi, secretary of the Philadelphia unit of the AFM, Local 77, announced an indefinite postponement of the sympathy strike. The postponement followed a telephone call from Joseph Weber, president of the AFM, who has been in Hollywood.

It was expected that the musicians would continue to try negotiations with the circuit, and that picket lines would be maintained. The dispute arose from the musicians' insistence that Warners employ their members in every house with a stage show. The circuit dropped stage shows, and musicians, in that city.

The IATSE, immediately upon its announcement two weeks ago, of a sympathy strike, was warned by Warner attorneys that contracts with the circuit precluded any such moves, despite the assistance pact with the AFM.

Meanwhile, the Local 77 last week inaugurated a "music appreciation campaign" in Philadelphia, with free orchestras for groups, speakers, bell-ringing and general canvassing, to explain the union's stand. And it hired a press agent.

The Warner theatres in Philadelphia last week signed a contract with the Steam and Operating Engineers Union, Local 835, providing wage increases. The contract extends to Aug. 31, 1943.

Managers' Union Calls Strike Against Circuit

The managers and assistant managers of the Five-Boro Theatre Circuit of New York having repudiated it several weeks ago, in a signed letter, the motion picture division of the Theatrical Managers, Agents, and Treasurers Union, called a strike against 11 of the circuit's houses last Thursday.

The union claimed it had a closed shop contract, and asked the management to dismiss the recalcitrant managers and their assistants.

QUEBEC OWNERS HIT JUVENILE BAN; VANCOUVER MAY LIMIT FILM SEAT

First of Series of War Propaganda Films to Be Released April 11th; Famous Players Canadian Nets $904,324

Exhibitors in the Province of Quebec were forcefully reminded this week that the 12-year-old law which does not allow children under 16 years of age to attend theatre performances is still in effect, when a Verdun theatre man was convicted and fined $150. Showmen in the Quebec area have renewed their efforts to have the law repealed.

The Vancouver city council has been requested by the British Columbia Theatre Association to set a maximum number of theatre seats to be allowed in each district. The Association held that there are already too many seats in the Greater Vancouver area and that construction should be regulated.

Famous Players Canadian Corporation reported a net profit for the year 1939 of $904,324. Other financial statements on Canadian operations also showed profits.

Quebec Manager Fined For Admitting Children

by R. J. O'LEARY

in Montreal

Cyril Scrivens, manager of the Park theatre, Verdun, Quebec, was found guilty of infractions of the provincial law which does not allow children under 16 years of age to attend theatre performances. He pleaded guilty when confronted with the more than 30 children of 4 to 14 years who were to testify.

The Crown Prosecutor, Lucien Beliveau, asked for the maximum penalty on three charges. The judge ruled that Mr. Scrivens must pay $50 and costs on each count, with the alternative of a month in jail. The fine was paid.

The Quebec law has been attacked by theatre men, the public and members of the government since it was passed 12 years ago. Some Montreal exhibitors expect that the measure will be repealed, soon. Meanwhile, many of the smaller theatres admit children younger than the law allows, partly to arouse public opinion and force repeal.

One move for repeal provides for a measure under which children may attend theatres whose programs have been approved by a special board.

First of Propaganda Series Set

The first of a series of Canadian-produced films, depicting the Dominion of Canada at war, is scheduled for release on April 11th. The first of the monthly series, "Atlantic Patrol," has been filmed and a commentary is being added. Others in the series are: "Private Lives," to show Canadian troops overseas; "Women at Work," to illustrate how Canadian women are helping to win the war and a film based on the War Supply Board which is headed by Wallace Campbell. "Workshops of War" has been suggested as the title for the short on the board.

The Finnish Aid Committee, sponsored by Karl F. Altio, Consul-General of Finland, is still active in Canada, and the Castle production, "Finland Fights," distributed by the Associated Screen News, is being shown to raise money for reconstruction.

"Ski Trails," a colored short depicting skiing in the Laurentian Mountains north of Montreal, is being hailed as one of the better Canadian-produced shorts. The film was produced by the Associated Screen News and directed by Gordon Sparling.

Another in Production

Another Canadian film on skiing is now in production. It will be produced by Louis Cochand, top-notch French-Canadian skier, according to the announcement of Lt. Col. J. L. Boulanger, director of the Provincial Tourist Bureau. The purpose of the film will be to attract tourists, especially from the United States, to the ski centers of the province of Quebec.

The Hamilton United Theatres reported a net profit for the year 1939 of $48,195 against a profit of $54,453 for 1938. Operating profit last year was $73,920 and $77,167 the year before. A dividend was paid on the 6 per cent preferred stock and the earned surplus increased from $85,286 to $87,188. The working capital was $114,049 which compared with $167,702 for 1938.

The Mansfield Theatre Company, Ltd., reported a net profit of $6,048, after taxes and depreciation for the year 1939. The company lost $33,527 in 1938. During 1939 a $3.50 dividend on the 7 per cent preferred stock, in arrears, was paid.

A total of 348,507 radio sets was produced in Canada in 1939, and 246,707 of these in the second half of the year, according to the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. The value of sets sold last year was $20,005,519. There are now 50,000 more radio sets in Canada than in the previous record year, 1931.

Vancouver Group Wants Quota on Theatre Seats

by E. S. ROBERTS

in Vancouver

The British Columbia Theatre Association, composed of owners of surburban houses, has asked the Vancouver city council to set quotas which would limit theatre construction and regulate the maximum number of seats in each district.

R. McTavish, president of the Association, told the council that there is now one the seat to every seven persons in the Greater V couver area and he said, "New theatres are ing built in spite of the fact that the cit already over-seated."

The city council is considering what ac might be taken. Alderman Charles Jo chairman of the city hall licensing commi claimed that the city had the power to l the number of theatre licenses. He said tha former years limitation had been practised cause it was felt that overcrowding in amusement business would lead to lower st ards of presentations service.

In the radio field "overcrowding" in Vancouver area was relieved when two V couver stations voluntarily went off the Operations were suspended by CKCD, bac by the Daily Province and CKFC, sponsore the Vancouver Sun. There were six stat in the Vancouver area. CBR is the Cana Broadcasting Company station. CJOR CKWX have been allowed to increase t power. CKMO keeps the same power it before recent changes.

BLAMES STRAIN FOR INFERIOR PICTURES

Despite the money and talent in Hollywood, the production capital sometimes makes inferior pictures because of the "continual strain on actors, producers and directors, because of lack of coordination of entertainment factors, and because of constant revision of stories," Ernest Haycox, Portland author, told members of the city's Kiwanis club, in a recent address on his experiences during filming of Paramount's "Union Pacific."

Story costs alone in Hollywood "are sometimes fantastic," he said, with as much as $325,000 spent on one story before production.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

BLONDIE BRINGS UP BABY: Arthur Lake, Penny Singleton, Larry Simmms—This series very good but is not building up. Doubled this with "Konga, the Wild Stallion," and drew average business. Played March 16.—Harry L. Buhb, Sylvanian Theatre, New Freedom, Pa. Rural patronage.

BULLETS FOR RUSTLERS: Charles Starrett, Lorna Gray—As good as the usual Starrett picture. Our audience likes this boy very much. The camera work is excellent in this entire series. Running time, 58 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HIS GIRL FRIDAY: Cary Grant, Rosalind Russell, Ralph Bellamy—Exceptional grosses for three weeks run. Fastest picture and dialogue in years. It was a pleasure to run this swell show. Running time, 92 minntes. Played January 19-February 2.—State Theatre. Oklahoma City, Okla. Downtown patronage.

KONGA, THE WILD STALLION: Fred Stone, Rochelle Hudson—Doubled this with "Blondie Brings Up Baby" and drew average business. Played March 16.—Harry L. Buhb, Sylvanian Theatre, New Freedom, Pa. Rural patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Claude Rains, Thomas Mitchell, Edward Arnold, Guy Kibbee, Eugene Pallette—One of the best pictures I've played, but no draw. Just one of the mysteries of the game. Ran a matinee for high school and grade schools. Kids said there must be something wrong with the picture because the school board recommended that they see it. Running time, 130 minutes. Played February 22-24.—Harry L. Bubb, Sylvanian Theatre, New Freedom, Pa. Rural patronage.

First National

CASTLE ON THE HUDSON: John Garfield, Pat O'Brien, Ann Sheridan, Burgess Meredith—Played Sunday-Monday. Good attendance Sunday but bottom dropped out Monday. Better midweek feature. Running time, 89 minutes. Played March 10-11.—C. O. Kintz, Kickapoo Theatre, Gays Mills, Wis. Farming community patronage.

CONFESSIONS OF A NAZI SPY: Edward G. Robinson, Francis Lederer, Paul Lukas—I was looking for something just a bit better than what I presented. However, the material they did have was very interestingly presented. How Francis Lederer, a typical Frenchman, was cast for the part of a leading German spy is beyond me. The picture aroused very little comment. Running time, 102 minutes. Played March 19-20.—Simon Galitzki. Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

FIGHTING 69TH: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Jeffrey Lynn, Dennis Morgan, Alan Hale—The Cagney fans weren't very enthused over the picture but had a very good turnout, doing better than usual midweek business. Played March 13-15.—W. O. Kemp, Victory Theatre, Poteau, Okla. Small town patronage.

FIGHTING 69TH: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Jeffrey Lynn, Dennis Morgan, Alan Hale—One of the best. Wish we had more like it. Played Sunday-Monday to capacity business. Should have given it extra playing time. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 17-18.—C. A. Kintz, Kickapoo Theatre, Gay Mills, Wis. Farming community patronage.

FIGHTING 69TH: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Jeffrey Lynn, Dennis Morgan, Alan Hale—Here's one that will really pep up your box office. The best from Warners since "Dodge City" and the best business we have enjoyed since Christmas.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Clande Rains, John Garfield, Eddie Albert, Jeffrey Lynn, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—Though it was enjoyed by most of our patrons, it definitely is not the box office picture nor the production to deserve top allocation into which the distributor put it. Being a sequel to "Four Daughters" it has, as usually is the case with sequels, a somewhat weak story. Running time, 99 minutes. Played March 3-4.—Egon W. G. Wieselmann, Cactus Theatre, Limon, Col. Small town patronage.

IN this, the exhibitors' own department, the theatremen of the nation serve one another with information on the box-office performance of product for their mutual benefit. It is a service of the exhibitor for the exhibitor. Address all communications to—

MOTION PICTURE HERALD
Rockefeller Center, New York

OLD MAID, THE: Bette Davis, Miriam Hopkins, George Brent, Jane Bryan—Played this late because I was a little afraid of it and kept on setting it out in favor of others. Though not a knockout at the box office, it certainly surprised me and did rather well. It is a splendid picture, and Bette Davis did a good character portrayal. Yes, it did better than some other pictures we have recently given Sunday playing time. Running time, 95 minutes. Played February 25-26.—Egon W. G. Wieselmann, Cactus Theatre, Limon, Col. Small town patronage.

ON YOUR TOES: Zorina, Eddie Albert, Gloria Dickson, James Gleason, Alan Hale—Not a small town picture by a long shot. If it is entertainment, it must be for New York alone. Zorina can toe dance, but certainly can't act. No expression at all in her face. Running time, 93 minutes. Played November 1-2.—C. W. Davis, Rockingham Theatre, Reidsville, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

PRIVATE DETECTIVE: Jane Wyman, Dick Foran, Maxie Rosenhloom—Another "quickie." It may have been a good show if Maxie Rosenhloom had been out of it. Running time, 55 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PRIVATE DETECTIVE: Jane Wyman, Dick Foran—Jane Wyman is okay, hut can't they find anything but crime stories to produce this year.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

THREE CHEERS FOR THE IRISH: Priscilla Lane, Thomas Mitchell, Dennis Morgan, Alan Hale—Boys, here's one packed full of real entertainment. Thomas Mitchell does a real joh in this picture. It's a good story and has a good cast. Played March 21-22.—Morris Littman, Sylvan Theatre, Rutherfordton, N. C. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANOTHER THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy—A swell picture and certainly no one can find anything to find fault with in this one. But it didn't draw, much to our surprise. When they won't come to see pictures like this, they jnst don't want to see any kind. We're sure hoping that something explodes to start the business back soon. Running time, 102 minutes. Played March 3-4.—Horn and Morgan, Inc.. Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neh. Small town patronage.

BABES IN ARMS: Mickey Rooney, Judy Garland, Charles Winninger, Guy Kihbee, Henry Hull—Swell show that had heen shown all around here months ago. Mickey is his usual impudent, conceited self; Judy is at her best, and Henry Hull is very good. An excellent production that pleased. Mickey's impersonation of Lionel Barrymore and Jndy's "My Day" are highlights. Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 8-10.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

BALALAIKA: Nelson Eddy, Ilona Massey, Frank Morgan, Charles Ruggles—Like all singing pictures of this type, it died at the box office. And 75 per cent of those who did come didn't like it. Too much classical singing. Certainly takes a nosedive here. Running time, 102 minutes. Played March 10-11.—Horn and Morgan, Inc.. Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

BRIDAL SUITE: Annabella, Robert Young—Well received. Had a tieup with a clothing manufacturer for Easter fashion show and enjoyed nice business. Feel it would have been better if we hadn't run into bad weather. Many think Robert Young should have bigger and better pictures.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1940: Eleanor Powell, Fred Astaire, George Murphy, Frank Morgan—The teaming of these two dancing stars looked like a smart move on Metro's part but we sensed what seemed apathy on the part of the audience to this new "Melody" and some expressed their views that it was not as good as some of the former ones. Thin story and lack of comedy, except for Frank Morgan's role. Certainly we did not get any raves over it and a few favorable comments. Not nearly as many as on "Balalaika." There is a lady soloist that has a remarkable voice in one song.—A. E. Hancock, Columhia Theatre, Columhia City, Ind. General patronage.

CALLING DR. KILDARE: Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore, Laraine Day, Lana Turner—The picture pleased 99 per cent. It has everything, cast, story and direction. Every memher of the cast acts with teamwork precision. Lionel Barrymore, Lew Ayres, Laraine Day and gorgeous Lana Turner are "the tops." The Kildare pictures are anxiously awaited. Hope the series continue. Running time, 86 minutes.—State Prison Colony Theatre, State Prison Colony, Norfolk, Mass. Prison patronage.

EARL OF CHICAGO: Robert Montgomery, Edward Arnold, Reginald Owen—Swell entertainment if you like this kind hut only about 10 per cent of our regular patrons do. If we hadn't played this on a Giveaway Night, there wouldn't have heen a handful there to see Montgomery do his stuff. He is a swell actor but the people just don't like this kind. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 15-16.—Horn and Morgan, Inc.. Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

EARL OF CHICAGO: Robert Montgomery, Edward Arnold, Reginald Owen—This may be class but failed to please here. Small towns, screen it before playing. No romance. Business second day below average. Running time, 87 minutes. Played February 7-8.—C. W. Davis, Rockingham Theatre, Reidsville, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

EARL OF CHICAGO: Robert Montgomery, Edward Arnold, Reginald Owen—Some like this one and some didn't. They can't seem to see Montgomery in this sort of a role. Average business. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 21-23.—Roy Heffner, Jr., Key Theatre, Middleboro, Mass. General patronage.

FAST AND FURIOUS: Ann Sothern, Franchot Tone—Very good program picture.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

GONE WITH THE WIND: Clark Gahle, Vivien Leigh, Leslie Howard, Olivia de Havilland, Hattie McDaniel—We expected the usual good performance from Gahle. Vivien Leigh and Hattie McDaniel were swell. Of course, the rest of the cast gave splendid performances in their roles. It is already sold, if you can get. Being sandwiched between two cities, 24 miles each direction on main decent highway, milked this town of our $1.10 patrons. Matinees were fair. Small towns within 25 or 40 miles of a city will feel their effect on playing time. Our share one-third below average week. Running time, 228 minutes. Played March 18-23.—C. W. Davis, Rockingham Theatre, Reidsville, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

HENRY GOES ARIZONA: Frank Morgan, Virginia Weidler—A good comedy. Not strong hut OK in the lower allocation.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

LAMBETH WALK: Lupino Lane, Sally Gray—Here is a picture that will run the critic's scale. It is strictly an audience picture, and expect no fun or laughs if you have a small crowd. Will not entice anybody in but will please them after you devise some way to get them in. Better double hill it. I thought the picture had a lot of very good comedy and on a good house we had a lot of hilarious laughing at it. Running time, 66 minutes. Played March 13-15.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

MAN FROM DAKOTA: Wallace Beery, Dolores Del Rio, John Howard—Good picture; fair business. Beery plays the lazy, no account man at which he excels. Running time, 74 minutes. Played March 20-21.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MAN FROM DAKOTA: Wallace Beery, Dolores Del Rio, John Howard—This picture turned in a better than average business, taking advantage of the increased prices on "GWTW" at opposition house. Slightly slower and not as robust as most Beery vehicles, it has a few slightly incredulous sequences, but generally pleased and entertained our audiences. Running time, 75 minutes. Played March 9-12.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

NORTHWEST PASSAGE: Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan—Good show, as are all Metro pictures. How can a theatre run without Metro? They have everything. Business 'way off on account general conditions. Film rentals high for my town. Played February 25-27.—H. Ford Taylor, Ritz Theatre, Ballinger, Texas. Small town patronage.

ON BORROWED TIME: Lionel Barrymore, Bobs Watson, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Beulah Bondi, Una Merkel—A picture containing some of the best acting I have ever seen. A plot that is so refreshingly different that it deserves the special attention of every showman. Children should be made to see it or their parents should be made to bring them. Solves the riddle of what to tell children old enough to understand the meaning of "death." Running time, 99 minutes. Played March 13-15.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

ROSE MARIE (reissue): Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy—I have been in the picture business since 1912 and can honestly say this is a production without competition in its class. I showed this in sub-zero weather in a village of 240 and must say I was surprised at the number of people that turned out to see this. My, if this had been in color. This is the first MacDonald picture that I have shown and can certainly recommend it to any spot at any time. It seems that it is impossible to buy Metro product in Western Canada in a small community, but productions like this, when we can buy them, are a treat. Play it. Running time, 112 minutes. Played March 21.—A. L. Dove. Bengough Theatre, Bengough, Saskatchewan, Canada. Rural and small town patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan—A very enjoyable picture which pleased everyone. From a production standpoint, it is, however, definitely a small picture. Business was poor chiefly probably because of the European setting which is so much emphasized by the MGM trailer. I regret that we did not think to alter the trailer or not run it at all. By all means play the picture but sell it without letting on that it has a European setting. Frank Morgan in a straight role was good. Other minor roles were overdrawn. Running time. 100 minutes. Played March 12-14.—Egon W. G. Wieselmann, Cactus Theatre, Limon, Col. Small town patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan, Felix Bressart—A swell picture if there ever was one. Our audience just ate it up. Plenty of laugbs, and Felix Bressart stole the show. Tops in any house, so give it your best days and step on it. Running time, 100 minutes. —A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan, Joseph Schildkraut, William Tracy—I wouldn't have believed that such a trio as James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan and Frank Morgan could have made such a dull, tiresome show as this. If this had been Marshall Field's in Chicago, or Wanamaker's in Philadelphia, what a swell picture it would have been, but we are very definitely not interested in Matuschek's in Budapest. It is talk, talk, talk. William Tracy is especially good, and with American names it would have gone over, but people are fed up on foreign names and places. Running time, 100 minutes. Played March 15-17.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

STRANGE CARGO: Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, Ian Hunter, Peter Lorre—A picture which gave general satisfaction but did a very poor business. Running time, 113 minutes. Played March 10-12.—R. L. Matson, Crystal Theatre, Flandreau, S. D. General patronage.

STRANGE CARGO: Clark Gable, Joan Crawford, Ian Hunter, Peter Lorre—An unusual adventure picture with a strong preachment. It will entertain and make you think afterwards. It has so much depth that I did not catch the full meaning until the second day, seeing it in spots as I have to always. I don't think Crawford could carry a picture alone, I mean at the box office. Running time, 113 minutes. Played March 13-14.—C. W. Davis, Rockingham Theatre, Reidsville, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

TARZAN FINDS A SON!: Johnny Weissmuller, Maureen O'Sullivan—Excellent thriller suitable for adults and children. Takes you out in the "wide open spaces" into jungleland. The picture is full of action from start to finish. The antics of the animals got plenty laughs. Running time, 81 minutes.—State Prison Colony Theatre, State Prison Colony, Norfolk, Mass. Prison patronage.

WOMEN, THE: Norma Shearer, Joan Crawford, Rosalind Russell, Mary Boland, Paulette Goddard, Virginia Weidler, Joan Fontaine—A picture that held their interest here. Contained many reasonable situations and a practical way out of them. Something rare in current films. The picture was very well liked here. Any house should do business because of the star value. Running time, 134 minutes. Played March 17-19.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

YOUNG TOM EDISON: Mickey Rooney, Fay Bainter, Virginia Weidler, George Bancroft—Pleased almost 100 per cent but did not do only an average business. Would advise all exhibitors playing this picture to get out and boost it, as it will not only please but will also help to increase the attendance when it comes to showing of the companion picture, "Edison, the Man." Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 17-19.—R. L. Matson, Crystal Theatre, Flandreau, S. D. General patronage.

Fourteen More Exhibitors Join Contributors on Product Shown

Eleven exhibitors report on product for the first time in the current issue of "What the Picture Did for Me", and three others joined the reporters in the issue of March 30th. In the fortnight four additional showmen returned to contributing after long absences, for the most part two to four years.

Following are the names of those making their initial reports to the department:

Harry L. Bubb, Sylvanian Theatre, New Freedom, Pa.
C. W. Davis, Rockingham Theatre, Reidsville, N. C.
H. E. Fulgham, Ideal Theatre, Fort Worth, Tex.
W. O. Kemp, Victory Theatre, Poteau, Okla.
C. O. Kintz, Kickapoo Theatre, Gays Mills, Wis.
Morris Littman, Sylvan Theatre, Rutherfordton, N. C.
P. D. Pearce, Joy Theatre, Belzoni, Miss.
State Prison Colony Theatre, State Prison Colony, Norfolk, Mass.
State Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla.
H. Ford Taylor, Ritz Theatre, Ballinger, Tex.
Egon W. G. Wieselmann, Cactus Theatre, Limon, Colo.
Fred Bailey, Virginia Theatre, Hazard, Ky.
H. L. Capers, New Deal Theatre, Gorman, Tex.
F. X. Faust, Roxy Theatre, Forsyth, Mont.

The four showmen returning to active participation in the reporting are as follows:

Grady Cook, Joy Theatre, Pontotoc, Miss., last report: January 2, 1937.
R. L. Matson, Crystal Theatre, Flandreau, S. D., last report: February 15, 1936.
Charles F. Dearman, Fox Theatre, Smithville, Tenn., last report: May 27, 1939.
Alvin Hables, Reel Joy Theatre, King City, Cal., last report: March 19, 1938.

These exhibitors join the constantly growing list of exhibitors who are cooperating through the columns of this department in commenting on product they have played.

Monogram

GENTLEMAN FROM ARIZONA: Craig Reynolds, John King—Here is a real high class western, all in color. Good enough for best houses. Good business. Played March 10-11.—H. E. Fulgham, Ideal Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas. Family patronage.

HUMAN MONSTER, THE: Bela Lugosi—One of the most creepy pictures since "Frankenstein." Played this one on double feature program with "Come On, Rangers." Seemed to satisfy very well. Good business. Running time, 76 minutes. Played March 22-23.—P. D. Pearce, Joy Theatre, Belzoni, Miss. Rural patronage.

PARADISE ISLE: Movita, Warren Hull—A very pleasing picture. Business good. Played February 27-28.—H. E. Fulgham, Ideal Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas. Family patronage.

Paramount

BEAU GESTE: Gary Cooper, Ray Milland, Robert Preston, Brian Donlevy, Susan Hayward—The picture in brief is spectacular, thrilling and really dramatic. This one should play to capacity houses. It has a well balanced cast but Brian Donlevy steals the picture as the sergeant who abuses his command with mad brutality, ruthlessness and courage. Play this one. Running time, 114 minutes.—State Prison Colony Theatre, State Prison Colony, Norfolk, Mass. Prison patronage.

BOY TROUBLE: Charles Ruggles, Mary Boland—A light picture that pleased. Ruggles would be better off if he would stick to the role the public is used to seeing him in. The picture seemed to move so slowly. It needed life and action. Running time, 74 minutes. Played March 22-23.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

CAT AND THE CANARY: Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard—Good picture and good business. Should please all. Running time, 71 minutes. Played March 22-23.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

DR. CYCLOPS: Albert Dekker, Janice Logan—Saw this at the Paramount Exchange. Was very different and everyone seemed well pleased. Held the interest throughout, and if you can get them in, this one should draw. Running time, 85 minutes.—Roy Heffner, Jr., Key Theatre, Middleboro, Mass. General patronage.

GERONIMO: William Henry, Ralph Morgan, Preston Foster, Ellen Drew, Andy Devine—Did above average business. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 17-19.—Roy Heffner, Jr., Key Theatre, Middleboro, Mass. General patronage.

GREAT VICTOR HERBERT, THE: Allan Jones, Mary Martin, Walter Connolly, Susanna Foster—The sins of some shoddy program pictures can be forgiven when they give you a picture such as this one. Bad weather hurt business but it will rank with the top musicals of the season, both for the splendid music of Victor Herbert and the child star that is a sensation, Susanna Foster. It has the music that the older patrons can appreciate and they understand. This may be heresy, but Allan Jones has just as much on the ball as Nelson Eddy.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

GREAT VICTOR HERBERT, THE: Walter Connolly, Mary Martin, Allan Jones, Susanna Foster—A beautiful picture with grand music and everything it takes to please music lovers. But the first job is to get them in. And that's almost impossible. Say, don't overlook Susanna Foster, because that little gal is going places in the singing world. Running time, 90 minntes. Played March 17-18.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

HERITAGE OF THE DESERT: Donald Woods, Evelyn Venable—An extra good western with not too much hokum and a Zane Grey story behind it. It pleased our patrons generally. Running time, 73 minutes. Played March 1-2.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

JAMAICA INN: Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Emlyn Williams, Leslie Banks—Story and acting was good but this made in England picture was hard to understand, as usual. Business was fair; had a few complaints. Running time, 100 minutes. Played March 17-18.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MAN ABOUT TOWN: Jack Benny, Dorothy Lamour, Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson—Typical Benny radio program but it got over in a big way. "Rochester" steals the show —almost. Lots of honeys in this one that will please the men, lots of comedy and gags that will please 'em all. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 20-22. —W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

OUR NEIGHBORS—THE CARTERS: Fay Bainter, Edmund Lowe, Frank Craven—A dandy down-to-earth family picture which pleased very much. But being new, it didn't have any draw. Running time, 83 minutes. Played March 13-14.—Horn and Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

REMEMBER THE NIGHT: Barbara Stanwyck, Fred MacMurray, Beulah Bondi, Elizabeth Patterson, Sterling Holloway—No business but all that did see it seemed to enjoy every minute. Sterling Holloway got lots of laughs. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 10-12.—Roy Heffner, Jr., Key Theatre, Middleboro, Mass. General patronage.

SEVENTEEN: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field—Good picture; good business. Pleased 100 per cent on family night. Running time, 77 minutes. Played March 19.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

STAR MAKER, THE: Bing Crosby, Louise Campbell, Linda Ware, Ned Sparks, Walter Damrosch—A really fine picture for young and old alike. The ever popular "Bing" Crosby acts and sings through his part in commendable fashion. Louise Campbell, as his endearing and understanding young wife, carries out her assignment as though she really was a "Mrs. Larry Earl." "Sour-puss" Sparks brings forth his customary amount of laughter each time he opens his "trap," and comes closer to smiling in this one than in any we have seen to date, but the one who really gained a prominent place in the hearts of the men here was 14 year old Linda Ware, a very talented young lady. She is a Deanna Durbin and a Judy Garland rolled into one. As many in our audience state, "she has looks, can act, has a very fine voice and can make it opera or 'swing' with equal ability." Too, we must not forget Walter Damrosch. Though his part was small, his pleasant and encouraging attitude in his dealings with Miss Ware seemed to put her at ease and as a consequence made him stand out. Although the picture was slowed up considerably through the interference of a children's aid group, it gradually redeems itself and is clicking again 100 per cent when we see "The End." Running time, 94 minutes. Played March 16.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

WOMEN WITHOUT NAMES: Judith Barrett, Ellen Drew, Robert Paige—Average entertainment. Business normal to low, account of Holy Week. Running time, 62 minutes. Played March 20-22.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

Republic

COME ON, RANGERS: Roy Rogers, Mary Hart, Raymond Hatton—Played this one on double feature program with "The Human Monster." Fair weather. Had best business we have had in long time. Running time, 57 minutes. Played March 22-23.—P. D. Pearce, Joy Theatre, Belzoni, Miss. Rural patronage.

HEART OF THE ROCKIES: Three Mesquiteers (Bob Livingston, Ray Corrigan, Max Terhune), Lynn Roberts—Nice little western. Note to Ed Finney: How about giving us Max Terhune and "Elmer" with Tex Ritter in a series of westerns?—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

IN OLD MONTEREY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, George Hayes—Played Sunday and Monday to good business and customers well pleased. Played March 3-4.—H. E. Fulghman, Ideal Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas. Family patronage.

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Weaver Brothers and Elvirry, Roy Rogers, Lucien Littlefield—Fine program picture. Play it. Let's have more with same stars. Lucien Littlefield was really good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

MAN OF CONQUEST: Richard Dix, Gail Patrick, Edward Ellis, Joan Fontaine—As far as I know, this is the first Republic picture to be screened here and, if Republic scores with any more equally as good, it will not be the last. The picture is based on the story of the up-and-at-them individual named "Sam Houston," a man who helped to win the battle of New Orleans, was twice the governor of Tennessee, was scandalized when his first wife divorced him, joined the Cherokee Indians and fought with them in defiance of his old friend, Andrew Jackson (then President of the U. S.) that they might retain their lands, who had his heart set on making the Mexican province of Texas an independent republic, who barely missed the Alamo massacre, but a man who finally found his revenge in the wiping out of Santa Ana's army and happiness in his union with one Margaret Lea. Richard Dix of "Cimarron" fame (1931) is deserving of much praise for his creditable performance of Sam Houston. Too, it is impossible to leave this without giving due credit to Edward Ellis as Andrew Jackson, Gail Patrick as Margaret Lea, Joan Fontaine as Eliza Allen, and the others who rounded out the cast. And last, but not least, a "bouquet" to Victor Young for his excellent music score, which was a forceful and important part of the production. Running time, 98 minutes. Played March 23.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

MAN OF CONQUEST: Richard Dix, Gail Patrick, Joan Fontaine, Edward Ellis—Never having played it before we picked this up and drew a winner. Though a blizzard ruined our box office possibilities, it drew well enough in spite of the weather to indicate it has the stuff to make them come. Though from a production standpoint it does not come up to a "Union Pacific" or "Dodge City," it certainly is an independent production of major qualities. And we ask why do the independents not do it more often. If you have not yet played it, play it. It still is good. Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 8-9.—Egon W. G. Wieselmann, Cactus Theatre, Limon, Col. Small town patronage.

ROVIN' TUMBLEWEEDS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Carlisle—Today it's Gene Autry, Mickey Rooney and William Boyd here with us for results, although Gene doesn't line them up outside, but he is always a consistent box office draw.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SMUGGLED CARGO: Rochelle Hudson, Barry Mackay—We played this one on a double bill with "Bridal Suite" and enjoyed favorable business. Mediocre public reaction, no raves, no kicks. Good action picture for week end.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Antry, Smiley Burnette—All my customers liked the show very much. Did twice the business of average Autry show. Running time, 69 minutes. Played March 15-16.—C. O. Kintz, Kickapoo Theatre, Gay Mills, Wis. Farming community patronage.

RKO Radio

FIFTH AVENUE GIRL: Ginger Rogers, Walter Connolly, James Ellison, Tim Holt—Smart comedy-drama. You'll like Ginger Rogers and Walter Connolly in this one. There are plenty of laughs and enough drama to make the picture interesting and entertaining. Very well liked. Running time, 80 minutes.—State Prison Colony Theatre, State Prison Colony, Norfolk, Mass. Prison patronage.

ISLE OF DESTINY: William Gargan, Wallace Ford, Jung Lang—Pleasing surprise. Booked in without advance notice in place of "Mexican Spitfire" and customers went in with doubts but came out well pleased. Good lively story and action; performances of Gargan, et al. tops. New color is definitely the thing, especially beautiful in the island scenes. Running time, 80 minutes. Played March 23.—Grady Cook, Joy Theatre, Pontotoc, Miss. Small town and rural patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

ELSA MAXWELL'S HOTEL FOR WOMEN: Elsa Maxwell, Ann Sothern, James Ellison, Lynn Bari—We wonder how much Maxwell paid them to let her be in the picture. She was good but not that good. Sothern was the only name that means box office in this picture. Watch the new brunette in this film. We think you will see lots more of her. Running time, 83 minutes. Played March 22-23.—Simon Galitzki, Coed Theatre, Topeka, Kansas. General patronage.

FRONTIER MARSHAL: Randolph Scott, Nancy Kelly, Cesar Romero, Binnie Barnes—Okay as a he-man quick-on-the-draw western. Good plot, action with outstanding performance by Randolph Scott. And Binnie Barnes plays the dance-hall queen to perfection. Running time, 71 minutes.—State Prison Colony Theatre, State Prison Colony, Norfolk, Mass. Prison patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL: Jane Withers, Joe Brown, Jr.—As usual with Jane Withers pictures of late, no box office. I should like to know where this distributor ever got the notion that Jane Withers is box office as they seem to believe as indicated by the way they have allocated some of this player's pictures. I admit that once Jane Withers was up and coming, promising to be box office. But it certainly did not take this producer long to ruin her for good by putting her in poorly made pictures that did not try to exploit the talents of this youngster. Running time, 74 minutes. Played February 27-29.—Egon W. F. Wieselmann, Cactus Theatre, Limon, Col. Small town patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL: Jane Withers, Joe Brown, Jr.—Strictly a high school picture and very good but did not have popular appeal. Poorest Sunday of the year. They like Jane here if they will give her box office stories.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MAN WHO WOULDN'T TALK, THE: Lloyd Nolan, Jean Rogers—Only a fair picture in which Lloyd Nolan is very badly miscast and painfully noticeable in a role that doesn't suit him at all. Jean Rogers shouldn't have been in this one, either. Would personally say that the picture doesn't even belong under the Fox banner. Running time, 72 minutes. Played March 16-19.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—A small town natural. One of the best crowds for a long time. Play it by all means. Running time, 86 minutes. Played March 23.—Harry L. Bubb, Sylvanian Theatre, New Freedom, Pa. Rural patronage.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—The surprise draw in several months. Brought the rural folks to town. Third day bigger gross than first. Worth an extra day or two in rural sections. Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 19-21.—C. W. Davis, Rockingham Theatre, Reidsville, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

YOUNG AS YOU FEEL: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—The Jones Family is back to where they started; in fact, I thought it must be a reissue. Played March 11-13.—W. O. Kemp; Victory Theatre, Poteau, Okla. Small own patronage.

YOUNG MR. LINCOLN: Henry Fonda, Alice Brady, Marjorie Weaver, Arleen Whelan—The picture was well received because it is packed full of historical fact. Henry Fonda's portrayal of Lincoln is a masterpiece and he deserves much praise. Fonda is given fine support by an able cast. Pleased 100 per cent. Running time, 101 minutes.—State Prison Colony Theatre, State Prison Colony, Norfolk, Mass. Prison patronage.

United Artists

CHUMP AT OXFORD, A: Laurel and Hardy—Glad to see Laurel and Hardy teamed again. Business far below average in opposition to "Pinocchio," but don't think it is the picture's fault. This pair has been separated so long the public has grown cold to them and they will have to be sold all over again. Running time, 63 minutes. Played March 16-19.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

MAN IN THE IRON MASK, THE: Louis Hayward, Joan Bennett, Warren William, Joseph Schildkraut, Alan Hale—Everyone liked the picture. Louis Hayward plays both brothers and does an excellent job. Joan Bennett and every member of the cast deserves no end of praise. By all means see this picture. Running time, 112 minutes.—State Prison Colony Theatre, State Prison Colony, Norfolk, Mass. Prison patronage.

OF MICE AND MEN: Burgess Meredith, Lon Chaney, Jr., Betty Field—Greatly divided opinion among the few that turned out to see it. A good picture, but don't expect a small town public to get excited about it. Played March 10-11.—W. O. Kemp, Victor Theatre, Poteau, Okla. Small town patronage.

PRISON WITHOUT BARS: Corinne Luchaire, Edna Best—A very ordinary picture with an English handicap. People don't go for English pictures here and you just can't fool them. A nice house the first night, but on the second night would have been further ahead to have been closed.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

RAFFLES: David Niven, Olivia de Havilland, Dame May Whitty—Played this on Sunday because we had to fill our time, but it is definitely not a Sunday picture. As a matter of fact would suggest that you swap it for a Goldwyn reissue. You will be better off. From a production standpoint it is not deserving of the Goldwyn reputation. Being too sketchy in its story, it did not develop the character of "Raffles" as it might have. Olivia de Havilland was wasted. Her role was too unimportant. The same goes for Dame May Whitty. Not a small town box office picture. Running time, 71 minutes. Played March 10-11.—Egon W. G. Wieselmann, Cactus Theatre, Limon, Col. Small town patronage.

RAFFLES: David Niven, Olivia de Havilland—Held this one two weeks. Good gross for the first week. Not so hot on the second week. Good story but light and entertaining. Running time, 71 minutes. Played February 1-14.—State Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Downtown patronage.

REAL GLORY, THE: Gary Cooper, David Niven, Andrea Leeds—This picture should not have been made, at least not in the manner it was made. It is as gory and bloody a picture from beginning to end as one can imagine. And people—women, particularly > "Decided to join the scores of exhibitors contributing reviews to this department and shall appreciate your forwarding a supply of your convenient report blanks.

—must have known that in advance. They certainly stayed away from it. In my mind that sort of thing is not entertainment and never can be box office. Even those of our Saturday customers that enjoy a shoot 'em up western thought this too cruel. Gary Cooper and David Niven both were wasted in this picture. All they had to do throughtout the film was to dodge knives, spears, bullets and swords. Running time, 96 minutes. Played February 23-24.—Egon W. G. Wieselmann, Cactus Theatre, Limon, Col. Small town patronage.

SLIGHTLY HONORABLE: Pat O'Brien, Ruth Terry, Edward Arnold, Broderick Crawford—Comedy-murder mystery in which the plot is so involved that it distracted the audience's attention from the many gags that make this picture. Thus those who tried to figure the story out did not enjoy it, whereas those who did not give a darn about "who done it" sat there and enjoyed themselves. Could have been a swell picture had the plot been less confusing. Business much below average. Gags too clever for the week-end small town patrons. Ruth Terry not what she was hailed to be. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 15-16.—Egon W. G. Wieselmann, Cactus Theatre, Limon, Col. Small town patronage.

SLIGHTLY HONORABLE: Pat O'Brien, Ruth Terry, Edward Arnold, Broderick Crawford—A surprise picture that will sell by word of mouth. Let them know you're playing it. You'll be proud of its cleverness. Business better than average. Running time, 83 minutes. Played February 23-29.—State Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Downtown patronage.

Universal

CHARLIE McCARTHY, DETECTIVE: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," "Mortimer Snerd," Robert Cummings, Constance Moore—Best McCarthy picture to date. Universal is making good pictures all the way. No bad ones so far. Fair rentals. Conditions bad here. Played February 16-17.—H. Ford Taylor, Ritz Theatre, Ballinger, Texas. Small town patronage.

CHARLIE McCARTHY, DETECTIVE: Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy," "Mortimer Snerd," Robert Cummings, Constance Moore—Drew some extra patronage and believe it pleased generally, although do not believe "Charlie" is liked in pictures nearly as well as on the radio. Running time, 75 minutes. Played March 8-9.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

DOUBLE ALIBI: Wayne Morris, Margaret Lindsay—Ran this picture at greatly reduced prices on Bargain Night and had the smallest gross since Bargain Night was installed. Still, I think it is a better than average program picture. Played March 12.—W. O. Kemp, Victory Theatre, Poteau, Okla. Small town patronage.

GREEN HELL: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Joan Bennett, John Howard, Alan Hale, George Sanders, George Bancroft, Vincent Price—A very nice show, but did average business for Sunday-Monday showing. Running time, 87 minutes. Played February 25-26.—C. O. Kintz, Kickapoo Theatre, Gays Mills, Wis. Farming community patronage.

GREEN HELL: Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., Joan Bennett, John Howard, Alan Hale, George Sanders, George Bancroft, Vincent Price—Name value plus exploitation, radio, etc., and theatre front on this one resulted in exceptional business. Exhibitors should not pass up this opportunity for showmanship. Running time, 87 minutes. Played February 15-21.—State Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. Downtown patronage.

HONEYMOON DEFERRED: Edmund Lowe, Margaret Lindsay—A good program picture which will please your customers if you can get them to come and see it. Lowe does a good job and so does Margaret Lindsay. Running time, 59 minutes. Played March 13.—Morris Littman, Sylvan Theatre, Rutherfordton, N. C. Small town patronage.

HONEYMOON DEFERRED: Edmund Lowe, Margaret Lindsay—Average program fare for murder mysteries. Played with "Man from Dakota." Business above average for season. Running time, 59 minutes. Played March 9-12.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Col. General patronage.

MAN FROM MONTREAL: Richard Arlen, Andy Devine—A very good little action picture. Played March 14-16.—W. O. Kemp, Victory Theatre, Poteau, Okla. Small town patronage.

MY LITTLE CHICADEE: Mae West, W. C. Fields, Dick Foran, Joseph Calleia—Same old disgusting Mae West and bilious Bill Fields. Nothing changed but the title. Played March 17-18.—W. O. Kemp, Victory Theatre, Poteau, Okla. Small town patronage.

RIO: Basil Rathbone, Sigrid Gurie, Victor McLaglen, Robert Cummings, Leo Carrillo—Poorest midweek business on this in months. In fact, we didn't take in feature film rental. And it didn't please those who came, either. Running time, 75 minutes. Played March 6-7.—Horn & Morgan, Inc., Star Theatre, Hay Springs, Neb. Small town patronage.

UNDER-PUP, THE: Gloria Jean, Nan Grey, Robert Cummings, C. Aubrey Smith, Beulah Bondi, Virginia Weidler—You will make a mistake if you do not play this picture. It is full of good entertainment. The title is misleading. Running time, 88 minutes. Played September 11-12.—Morris Littman, Sylvan Theatre, Rutherfordton, N. C. Small town patronage.

UNEXPECTED FATHER: Baby Sandy, Mischa Auer—A program picture. Baby Sandy very good but picture would not draw. Should have been doubled. Running time, 78 minutes. Played March 2.—Harry L. Buhb, Sylvanian Theatre, New Freedom, Pa. Rural patronage.

YOU CAN'T CHEAT AN HONEST MAN: W. C. Fields, Edgar Bergen, "Charlie McCarthy"—A fair picture, some laughs, but something seemed to be missing. Running time, 75 minutes.—State Prison Colony Theatre, State Prison Colony, Norfolk, Mass. Prison patronage.

Warner Brothers

BROTHER RAT AND A BABY: Priscilla Lane, Wayne Morris, Jane Bryan, Eddie Albert, Jane Wyman, Ronald Reagan—Not so hot. Too much Morris who tries to be a comedian and fails miserably. Do not expect too much. Running time, 90 minutes.—A. J. Inks. Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CHILD IS BORN, A: Geraldine Fitzgerald, Jeffrey Lynn, Gladys George, Johnnie Davis—A rehash of "Life Begins" with some changes in story and a new cast. Struck very bad weather or think this would have been a top grosser. Cast is exeellent but Gladys George and Johnnie Davis walk off with the laurels. They should be given bigger and better roles. The babies acted like veterans and the picture pleased. It is the type show the eash customers like. Running time, 79 minutes. Played Mareh 1-3.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

INVISIBLE STRIPES: George Raft, Jane Bryan, William Holden, Humphrey Bogart—Good cast and the picture well done but it is just another erime story. Nearly one-half of this company's releases this year are crime stories and we can't make any money with them.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

INVISIBLE STRIPES: George Raft, Jane Bryan, William Holden, Humphrey Bogart—Another good one from Warner; business not so hot.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

State Rights

TARZAN AND THE GREEN GODDESS: Herman Brix—This was well liked and business away over average. Don't overlook this one. Played Novemher 26-27.—H. E. Fulgham, Ideal Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas. Family patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

CHARM BRACELET, THE: Phantasies Cartoons—A little out of season. Good for next Christmas.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

NAVY CHAMPIONS: Sport Thrills—An interesting trip around the home of our future officers of the sea, which depicts them engaged in such manly activities as boxing, gymnastics, football, etc. Very well liked here, especially the scenes of the Army-Navy football game. Running time, 9½ minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Direetor of Edueation and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

THREE STOOGES COMEDIES: All the Three Stooges comedies are tops here.—H. E. Fulgham, Ideal Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas. Family patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

BOOKWORM, THE: MGM Cartoons—Excellent colored cartoon. "Gone With the Wind" is fine and the other books very good. Running time, one reel. —Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lehanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

DRUNK DRIVING: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—The strongest preachment against drunk driving or driving with a drink even I have ever seen. If only the right ones could see it. Play it. Advertise it.—C. W. Davis, Rockingham Theatre, Reidsville, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

NEWS OF THE DAY: "News of the Day" seems to go over fine with my audience.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

OLD SOUTH, THE: MGM Miniatures—A trifle dry but still nothing to slide over. Play it with a light feature and you will have a halanced program. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

PEACE ON EARTH: MGM Cartoons—A grand short that everyone should play at this time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

PUSS GETS THE BOOT: MGM Cartoons—One of the best cartoons in many months. An idea with laughs aplenty. Play it. Running time, nine minutes.—C. W. Davis, Rockingham Theatre, Reidsville, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

RHUMBA RHYTHM: Mary Treen, Sally Payne—A reel of high class snappy entertainment with dancing and comedy. Mary Treen and Sally Payne are tops. Wish they would make a series of shorts. This is the kind of short my patrons like. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lehanon, Kans. Small town patronage.

ROMANCE OF THE POTATO: Pete Smith Specialities—Interesting one-reeler which has good comedy at times. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freihurger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WHERE TURF MEETS SURF: MGM Miniatures —The second with these two girls. Very weak and not up to the Metro standard.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

WHERE TURF MEETS SURF: MGM Miniatures —Excellent.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Paramount

BUSY LITTLE BEARS: Paragraphics—This is really swell. Three cub bears break into a house and wreck a kitchen. It's hetter than any cartoon or socalled comedy, as the action is extemporaneous. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freihurger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

FAREWELL VIENNA: Paragraphics—This one was suhstituted for "Blue Danube," and Feher and his musicians were, I can proudly say, very well received. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

WAY BACK WHEN A TRIANGLE HAD ITS POINTS: Stone Age Cartoons—Played the first one. Better than the "Popeyes" and about as good as the "Boops." Not outstanding by any means.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

RKO Radio

INFORMATION PLEASE: No. 3—The second in this series for us. The men find them very interesting, both humorous and educational but registered the same complaint on this one as the first screening, "the recording is poor." Running time, 11 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, No. 6: Republic of Finland—Very timely and instructive.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

TROPICAL TOPICS: Rosita Ortega—An entertaining short feature featuring Rimac's Rhumba Orchestra, Rosita Ortega in a song and dance, and others. Running time, 10 minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

EDGAR RUNS AGAIN: Terry-Toons—Good black and white cartoon about an old race horse who pulls a junk wagon. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freihurger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

United Artists

WANDERERS OF THE DESERT: World Windows —Just fair.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilhury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Universal

GOING PLACES: No. 68—Unusual hirds. Excellent photography and caused favorahle comment.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Vitaphone

CARL HOFF AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—All hand and no melody. Not so good. The singer (male) was terrihle. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

CONFEDERATE HONEY: Merrie Melodies—Played this next day after "Gone With the Wind" and it pleased. A burlesque on same, with "Crimson O'Tara" and "Ned Cutler." Merrie Melodies are good. Running time, eight minutes.—C. W. Davis, Rockingham Theatre, Reidsville, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

MIGHTY HUNTERS: Merrie Melodies—Good cartoon in color. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MIGHTY HUNTERS: Merrie Melodies—Swell cartoon in color. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lehanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

ONE FOR THE BOOK: Broadway Brevities—A good Brevity. Minstrels, Betty Hutton, Joe Miller's dance good. Running time, 18 minutes.—C. W. Davis, Rockingham Theatre, Reidsville, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

REMEMBER WHEN: Broadway Brevities—Nothing extra. Liked a lot, being as good as "One for the Book." Running time, 18 minutes.—C. W. Davis, Rockingham Theatre, Reidsville, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

RITA RIO AND HER ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Good musical reel with all-girl band. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freihurger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ROYAL RODEO, THE: Broadway Brevities—A good colored two-reel short.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

RUBINOFF AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—One of the hest of the Vitaphone band acts and that is saying something.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

SWING STYLES: Melody Masters—Swell variety musical short. Most Vitaphone hand shorts are good. Running time, 10 minutes.—C. W. Davis, Rockingham Theatre, Reidsville, N. C. Small town and rural patronage.

WARDROBE GIRL: Broadway Brevities—Just fair; Vitaphone has hetter ones.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

WILL OSBORNE AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Real corny. Everyhody liked it.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilhury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

Miscellaneous

LOUIS VS. GODOY FIGHT FILM: Fair fight picture. Lost money on it at my theatre. They won't do business here.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Serials

Republic

DAREDEVILS OF THE RED CIRCLE: Charles Quigley, Herman Brix—Not good, not had. This has been a had year as far as serials are concerned. Will surely welcome a real good one.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

Universal

PHANTOM CREEPS, THE: Bela Lugosi, Dorothy Arnold—Have seen much hetter. Only fair.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Ala. General patronage.

IN COURTS

Extend Fox Time

Murray Hulbert, federal judge, in New York this week signed an order extending for two years the time of Capital Company to prosecute proceedings against William Fox for the collection of a judgment of $297,412 won by Capital in 1935. According to affidavits filed, Capital has been restrained from proceeding with its suit to recover over $200,000 still due until the Fox Bankruptcy proceedings have been concluded.

File Plagiarism Suit

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation this week was named defendant in a plagiarism suit filed in federal court in New York by Earl Hobson Smith who seeks an injunction, an accounting and damages. The defendant is charged with pirating the plaintiff's play "Stephen Foster or Weep No More My Lady" in the film "Swanee River."

Two Exhibitor Groups Hit Non-theatricals

Detroit exhibitors are complaining of unfair competition from non-theatrical showings of 16 mm. films, including a number of original Hollywood releases. The basis of the complaint, which is shared by established non-theatrical distributors, is that a few itinerant 16 mm circuit operators have come into the territory with films which they are offering as low as $5 a show in some cases.

In a statement issued by the Associated Theatre Owners of Indiana, Inc., it is maintained that the 16 mm. operator is delivering to the public without admission charges entertainment supplied by producers upon which the theatre owner must depend for a living. "For producers to make features available to 16 mm. operators, who pay a minimum film rental and exhibit the pictures without admission charge, is totally unfair," the statement said.

Miles Joins Lloyd

John Peere Miles, recently publicity director for Samuel Goldwyn, has joined Frank Lloyd Productions, Inc., in the same capacity. Lloyd is producing "Tree of Liberty" for Columbia.

Carey in Stage Play

Harry Carey, returning to the Broadway stage after 27 years, will appear in the play "Heavenly Express," which is to open in New York next week after a week's tryout in Washington, D. C.

Badgley Reelected

Captain Frank C. Badgley, director of the Canadian Government Motion Picture Bureau, has been reelected president of the Red Chevron Club, an organization of war veterans.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

Wherein Chairman Goes a-Visiting

It's good to get out. Man sits in one spot too long, seat grows to chair. (Confucius, eh?) There's a lot to say about meeting up with the members on their home grounds. An interesting lot, these Round Tablers. On and off the record, they have plenty to offer. Listening to what the boys had to say filled us a couple of notebooks in the month away from the old nest.

One day, at the Brown Derby with a crowd of the members, the talk veered around to "eyewash" in exploitation. You know, the stuff the boys claim is put together to impress the bossman without especially helping the boxoffice. Funny thing about it was what one man termed "eyewash" might be rated helpful by another. It all depended. We opined the expression was overworked, a lot of better-than-average stuff thoughtlessly labeled "eyewash" which deserved better rating. While many ideas in use might not be startlingly effective, they were good enough to keep the theatre and attraction in the public eye. That's something. The lad who sits back waiting for a smash tiein has a lot of time on his hands. Where the big-shell selling slant was absent, we thought it better to shoot small ammunition than to mark time doing nothing at all.

At the United Artists, in Los Angeles, it was Tom Soriero who offered the opinion that football pictures should not be released in football season. The pigskin epics were nothing less than trailers for local games, Tom said. In excepting newsreel shots of current contests, the Round Tabler vouchsafed that grosses on football pictures would be better if they were released during some other season of the year.

Floral displays are seasonally a conspicuous part of lobby decoration in most sectors. What with the mild climate in San Francisco, theatremen there go for elaborate showings as a permanent addition to theatre decoration. The customers make much of it, to judge from admiring throngs around the different floral arrangements in the spots visited. The lobbies sure looked attractive.

In San Francisco, as well as Los Angeles, hoss racing is blamed for denting matinee business. It appears that the women now spend their afternoons at the track, betting the long shots on the nose.

Now, if the theatres could only take bets . . .

What with the job being done by the Dallas Variety Club in soliciting attendance from among managers to the three-day national convention, starting April 18th, the status of the theatreman in industry activities is to be pegged quite a few notches higher. Personal invitations over the signature of R. J. O'Donnell, Interstate Circuit general manager, have gone out countrywide. From plans divulged to your Chairman while in Dallas, the gathering shapes up as one to be long remembered.

The party promises to approximate the nearest thing yet to a managers' convention. There is the further inducement of an opportunity to meet exhibition and distribution leaders, in addition to a flock of top stars and directors, slated to be on hand. Quite a few of the Round Tablers have indicated they will be there. We look forward to meeting them.

From now on, this writer's idea of pure pleasure is a duplication of the three-hour showmanship "bull session" arranged in Oklahoma City by Standard Theatres. The discussion, led by headman W. B. Shuttee, and vigorously followed through by publicity chief, Pat Patchen, plus the complete roster of the circuit's managers, made up an inspirational afternoon for all of us. Everyone learned something from everyone else. It was that kind of a party.

Deep bows of appreciation are here in order to all of the theatremen who made us to home in the different stops. Our especial thanks go to Dean Hyskell and Bill Hendricks, in Los Angeles; Lou Christ, in Phoenix; Louis Charninsky, Paul and Besa Short, in Dallas; Pat Patchen, in Oklahoma City; Alex Manta, Jack Rose, John Burhorn, in Chicago, and Dinny Dinerman, in Cincinnati.

"Hasta la vista."

Round Table In Pictures

Obtained from the nearby Terry-Toons studio were the display panels on the making of an animated cartoon and set of original color paintings, which Joe DiLorenzo of Proctor's, in New Rochelle, proceeded to prepare for an eye-arresting lobby display as illustrated above.

Used in prominent downtown window and later transferred to his lobby was the Mickey Rooney crownhead constructed by C. H. Stewart as buildup for "Young Tom Edison" at the Waco Theatre, in Waco, Tex. Copy atop cut-out tied in to the picture.

Promoting artist specializing in pencil portraits, Ansel Weinstein, for his date on "Abraham Lincoln", planted him in the lobby of the New York RKO 58th Street Theatre sketching heads of Raymond Massey in character. Artist worked in theatre week ahead of opening.

Corner store on one of L. A.'s busiest streets devoted all its window to display of jewels tied in to Harry Wallen's "Adventures in Diamonds" engagement at the Paramount Theatre. In addition to miniature cutouts of the stars, scene stills were spotted strategically.

Welcoming the season, Sam Gilman, Loew's, Harrisburg, dressed his lobby as illustrated above. Lattice work was covered with white, pink, and green apple blossoms. The picture titles were painted on cutout tulips and mounted; blossom sprays were added to the row of coming attraction enlargements, with spotlights playing over all.

WIRES ON LATEST DATES

"Primrose Path" Approved By Women for MacEachron

Not having seen "Primrose Path" and after reading various reviews and radio commentators' reports, I hesitated advertising it too strongly due to this being big church town. Advertised as the most discussed picture of year and it not being recommended for children. However, after first showing, secured opinion of several ladies for their reaction, which was very favorable; so changed newspaper advertising in form of an apology, stating it was spendid entertainment presenting a new Ginger Rogers. Other than newspaper, used regular routing advertising consisting of special heralds, radio, billposting, etc. Ran trailer during the final days' showing of GWTW.

University Officials Aid Corker on "Rat"

Student of the University of Georgia dressed in V. M. I. uniform, along with a co-ed, paraded streets pushing a baby carriage accompanied by appropriate copy, two days in advance and during run of "Brother Rat and a Baby." Contest was sponsored by the local newspaper and leading department store which offered Brother Rat dolls as prizes. A large window display was also given the picture by the store. University officials in charge of gym in which state high school basketball tournaments were being held gave permission for planting banners on all sides, constantly before the eyes of several thousands.

University Officials Endorse "Abe Lincoln"

Used every available avenue of approach in selling "Abe Lincoln." Papers carried large photo breaks weekend in advance. Special mailing list of 20,000 to educators. Screening for board of education resulting in endorsement by principals. Endorsement used in mailing piece.

Radiofilm broadcast made in advance on WCAU by well-known commentator. Announcements spotted on all stations in advance. Special screening was held for Dr. Jos Forte Newton, famous Lincoln authority and other Lincoln lovers. Screening attended by press with Newton addressing the group resulting in newspaper breaks. Libraries, women's clubs and others cooperated.

EVERETT C. CALLOW,
Director of Advertising, Warner, Phila.

"CYCLOPS" EXHIBIT IN ART MUSEUM

For the date of "Dr. Cyclops" at the New York Paramount, an exhibit of stills, studio drawings and sketches from the picture is on display at the Film Library of the Museum of Modern Art.

Original drawings by Ernst Schoesdack; studio drawings, completed stills, as well as Kodachromes from the picture, are included in the exhibit.

Lincolnia Display Planted In Libraries by Lehman

"Abe Lincoln in Illinois" campaign tied up with local organization of Patriots and Pioneers Memorial Foundation sponsoring erection of Lincoln statue in Kansas City. Invitational screening for schools, ministers, lawyers. Organization created seven follow-up committees, securing announcements in schools, sermons in churches. Announcements at women's luncheon clubs and Parent-Teachers followed on telephone. Campaign tieup with book and department stores, counters, window displays, essay contest at Kansas City University, public library display of Lincolnia, original letters, photos, full-page roto sections in Kansas City Star and Journal; double-space ad campaign in papers; trailers three weeks in advance.

LAWRENCE LEHMAN,
Manager, Orpheum, Kansas City.

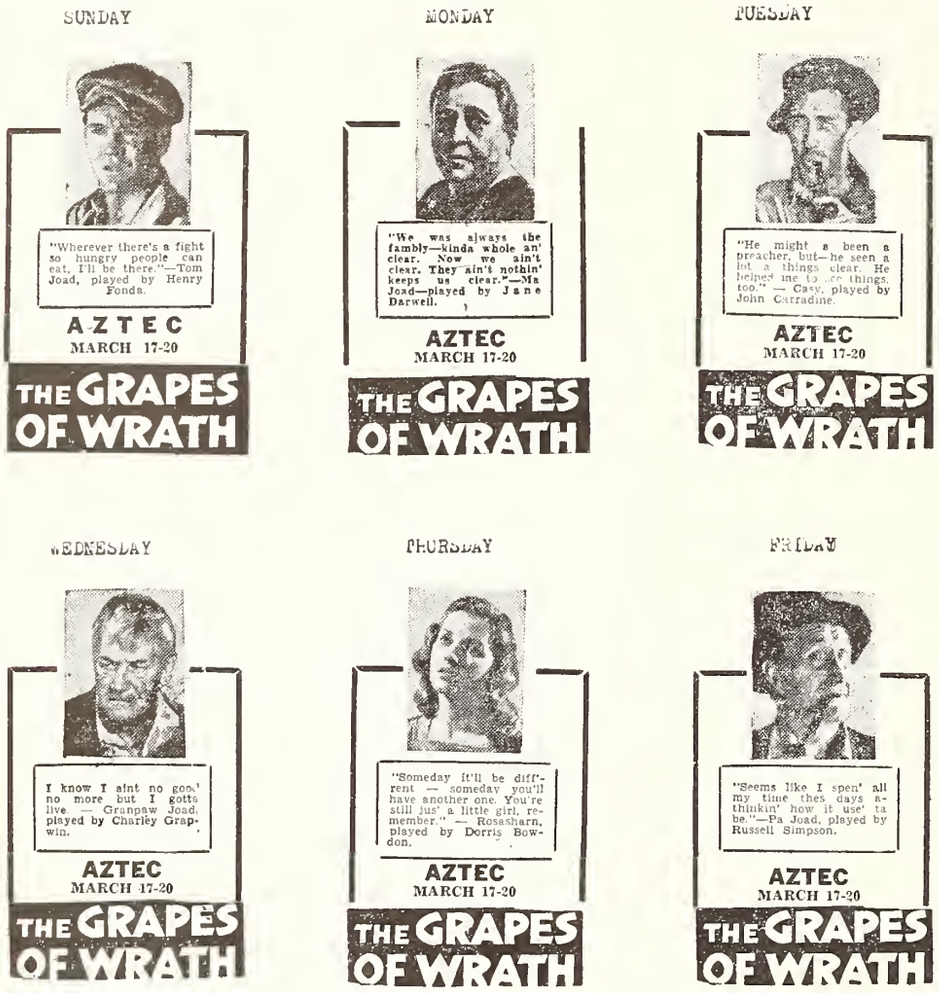
School Aid Enlisted By McCoy in Athens

On dress parade a company of cadets accompanied by their band from the local high school paraded through the city streets for about two hours carrying a banner on the picture. The commanding officer halting the unit at intervals, giving the command of right or left face, rest ease, etc., then spelling forth facts on the story. As the University of Georgia R.O.T.C. unit was holding its annual ball at this time, a special number was promoted and dedicated to the "Dead End" Kids starring in this film.

Several window tieups were promoted on Gulliver's Travels, each carrying a great flash on the picture, mentioning the theatre and date. A coloring cartoon contest was also featured by the local newsoaper.



P. E. McCOY,
Manager, Georgia, Athens.

De Petro's Theatre Anniversary

To celebrate his theatre's twentieth anniversary, Round Tabler Phil De Petro at the Jamaica, Jamaica Plain, Mass. arranged for the 60 piece local Angel Guardian Band to parade to his house, performing for a short time on stage. Much was made in the newspapers when City Censor John Spencer purchased the 10,000,000th ticket sold. Congratulatory letters received from Mayor Maurice Tobin, City Councillor James Langan and other notables were used for publicity purposes.

TEASER ADVERTISING

To be remembered for his ingenious and original ads, Griffith City Manager George Limerick, of Enid, Okla., comes through this time with his endeavors for "Grapes of Wrath." Running daily week ahead of opening, thumb nail of each of the characters was used with tiein copy. Last-day ad ran two columns on 95 lines with complete cast and appropriate lines.

Patrons Compare Figures With Astaire and Powell

Reporting on the ingenuity of student assistant Russell Grant of Loew's Poli, in Hartford, Round Tabler Jack A. Simons sends along details of the stunt arranged on "Broadway Melody" which was conceived and carried out in its entirety by Russ.

From an eight by ten still of Fred Astaire and Eleanor Powell, a lifesize blowup was made, the two characters were then cut out and mounted on a poster for lobby tieup. The thought behind this was to have a person step into the cutout and see how closely his or her dimensions comes to those of the stars. With this completed, Grant made a tiein with prominent dancing school which offered lessons to the winners.

Cutouts were placed in the theatre lobby and dancing school week ahead with an attractive attendant to supervise. School plugged the stunt in all their literature and newspaper ads. Paper announced the contest in a news item on the dramatic page and likewise ran a two-column photo of the cutouts along with pictures of the winners. During run of picture, the blowups were planted in prominent store window with appropriate tiein copy.

McCormack Uses Supplement For Settos' Grand Opening

For the opening of the Settos New Grand Theatre, in Linton, Ind., Manager W. Ray McCormack arranged for an eight-page supplement which featured congratulatory ads from local merchants. Front page carried cut of the Round Tabler, together with a four-column statement from the management and signed by the theatreman. Personnel list, theatre policy, forthcoming features, etc., etc., were also stressed.

On "Charlie McCarthy, Detective," Ray lucky numbered heralds, front cover of which carried tinted cut of the dummy. Numbers were posted outside theatre and those holding corresponding numbers received guest tickets to the show.

'Quiz-U' Contest Proves Boxoffice, Declares Marquis

Capitalizing on the intense popularity of the various quiz programs, Round Tabler Joe Marquis of the M&P Egyptian Theatre, in Brighton, Mass., forwards details of his weekly "Quiz-U Nite."

Each patron on entering theatre is handed a Quiz card containing lines for answering questions, name and address. As soon as the final question is asked by the master of ceremonies, patrons are requested to pass all cards towards the center aisle where they are collected by ushers. Beauty of the stunt is that announcement of winners and awards are not made the same night, thus Marquis is sure of getting them in the following week at which time they must be present to receive prize. Any monies not claimed due to absence of winners are added to following week's award.

Fifteen questions are prepared in advance, 14 of which carry a two-dollar cash award. The 15th question, which may be asked at any time during the period, carries a ten dollar award; 20 seconds for answering. In the event the persons do not answer correctly, the money goes over to the following week when the major question merits a twenty dollar prize and so on.

On the lesser questions, incorrect answers earn for the patrons a pair of passes, money which is not paid out due to incorrect answers also accrues to the following Quiz night and is used to build up money prizes on the 14 lesser questions.

Queries Are Diversified

In order to insure a variety of questions, Marquis includes some that are tricky, historical, local, humorous, etc., and stresses that none of the questions should be too difficult so that the box office value of the quiz may not be sacrificed. However, the key question for which ten dollars is paid is a rather difficult non-technical one. In any event, the Round Tabler advises that no question should require a lengthy answer, the briefer the better.

Quiz questions are divided into three parts: 14 small cash prizes are directed to individuals seated in the audience; one key question is asked somewhere near the middle of the program and the quiz cards are used for six questions, thus giving every patron a chance to participate. Entire stunt takes but 15 minutes to execute.

Three microphones are attached to one public address system, so that the person conducting the quiz from the stage may talk directly to patrons and the other two are spotted in the orchestra and balcony.

Graefe's Crossword Puzzle

With folks in his territory going strong for crossword puzzles, Herb Graefe at the Badger, Marshfield, Wis., evolved one which ran week ahead of opening. Questions pertained to his forthcoming attractions, thrift book going to top winner, passes to "Ninotchka" to runnersup.

School Cooperation Landed By Walsh on "Tom Edison"

An essay contest for high school students on "Thomas Edison's Contribution to Progress in America," was one of the highlights of Bill Walsh's campaign for "Young Tom Edison" at the Comerford, Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Contest was conducted by high schools with the cooperation of local paper. Heads of English and Science departments issued bulletins to all teachers and these were prominently displayed throughout the school. Paper gave plenty of space to the contest and published the winning essay.

In cooperation with a local bank, which has a weekly evening radio program, radio contest was held several days ahead, program dedicated to the memory of Edison and his favorite music was played. The feature was the reading of Edison's tribute to his mother and announcement of a contest for guest tickets for the best tribute sent in.

Lobby Displays Features In "Northwest" Opening

Original set sketches prominently displayed in the main lecture hall of the Los Angeles Public Library proved highly effective as part of the "Northwest Passage" campaign for its day-and-date State and Chinese showings in that city. In addition, bookmarks, plugging both the novel and film, were distributed by the library. Fifty 14x22 cards were planted with book stores and rental libraries in the city and environs, and additional bookmarks given away. Three traveling 28-sheet trucks covered the city.

At both theatres, men dressed in Rogers' Rangers uniforms distributed heralds before the opening. Radio campaign included a letter contest, a Truman Bradley interview on candid camera work via CBS, and spot announcements on eight smaller stations as well as on the major networks.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Authentic Indian Teepee Built By Penn for "Geronimo"

Well rounded campaign was arranged for "Geronimo" and "Victor Herbert" by Manager Ed Penn and his assistant Bill Sorrenson at the Fox Arlington, in Santa Barbara, which included music store tieup, plugs over Station KTMS and KDB, entire staff wearing "Geronimo" badges, and an authentic Indian teepee which was stationed in the theatre's fore-court.

Outside coverage included Scout Troop parade, stencils on main streets, window cards on municipal busses, etc.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

"Singapore" Sarong Lobby

The Michigan theatre, United Detroit's first run house, went so sarong conscious advancing "Road to Singapore," that they decorated the lobby with life size blowup figures of Crosby, Hope and Lamour all in sarongs. Incidentally the sarongs were real cloth ones and a fan and spotlight on the display gave it added attention. Even the Easter Bunny, decorative figure on the Michigan's Easter Week ad, was decked out in sarong and proved to be quite an eye catcher.

Nelson's Teaser Campaign

To start comment and draw attention to his opening of "Ninotchka" at the Harris, in Findlay, Ohio, Manager Glenn Nelson pasted "Greta Laughs" snipes on curbstones in the city and its surrounding villages four weeks ahead of opening. Special heralds in the form of censored letters were distributed week ahead, classified ad contest planted for seven consecutive days and special trailer was made up for the occasion.

Borreson's "Passage" Gag

Novel stunt which is reported to have created plenty of comment was arranged by Harold Borreson at the State, in Winona, Minn., for "Northwest Passage." Theatreman distributed small pay envelopes with copy on outside reading "Here is a free sample of maize eaten by Spencer Tracy in," etc. Hal says, for the benefit of us city-slickers, the maize contained in the envelopes was nothing but dry rainbow corn.

Exploitation Briefs Here & There

So successful has Ralph Craig's kiddie club worked out at the Adelphi, in Reynoldsville, Pa., that local devoted two columns to plug, stressing the club's activities and theatreman's effort to help keep the kids off the streets. Through tieup with publisher of local theatre guide, front page was devoted to the club, back page carrying house ad.

Opening night of "A Child Is Born" at the Playhouse, in Statesville, N. C., Manager E. L. Carter held a diaper changing contest on his stage. Group of popular high school boys competed for prizes, using flexible dolls and three-cornered diapers. Master of ceremonies directed the affair. In addition, nurses in local hospital were solicited to help sell tickets, small percentage of sales going to nurses' fund. Tieup with neighborhood merchants brought gifts for first baby born opening day.

A blind date with romantic adventure was the stunt arranged by C. Frederick, manager of the Garden Theatre, in Greenfield, Mass., for "Shop Around the Corner." Blue and rose numbered tinted cards with tiein copy were distributed to high school students carrying instructions for the boys to search for the girls (and vice versa) holding cards with numbers corresponding to those in their possession. Couples presenting duplicate cards were admitted as guests of the management.

Making a check on couples married within the past months, Jim Redmond, at the Bonham, in Fairbury, Neb., sent the brides humorous letters calling attention to his opening of "He Married His Wife." Mailed a couple of days ahead of his opening, Jim reports the stunt as creating plenty of word-of-mouth comment.

Special show of "Hunchback" was held by Leon Pickle for various English and literature teachers as an advance for that date at the Kentucky Theatre, in Henderson, Ky. Response is reported to have been gratifying, with teachers requesting and using the movie guides provided by the theatreman.

Planted on the classified ad page of local paper, George Irwin ran a chuckle ad contest week ahead of opening of "Remember the Night" at the Lyceum, in Duluth, Minn. Entrants for guest tickets were required to take a line from various ads and put them together coherently. Each ad carried a different scene still from the picture in addition to cast and playdates.

Exploitation on "Swiss Family Robinson" as arranged by R. T. Kemper at the Century, Buffalo, included special teaser trailers and newsreel shots of premiere five weeks ahead, art in roto and fashion pages two weeks ahead and displays in leading hotel lobbies. Numerous window tieups were effected, heralds distributed by Liberty magazine carriers.

Merchant Cooperation Landed By Winston for "The Women"

For date on "The Women" at the Metro Theatre, in San Juan, Porto Rico, Round Tabler Hal Winston got out a special program which was tied to theatre anniversary. Merchants' ads tied to picture title covered entire cost of printing and distribution. Three weeks ahead, the date was plugged over Station WNEL, chain of beauty salons having its beauty commentator dedicate entire program to "The Women."

Numerous merchant windows were secured in all of which title was conspicuously tied in, five full-page roto displays were landed in weekly paper and leading daily sponsored a luncheon to merchants of the city to promote Women's Week in honor of the picture. Largest beach club came through with a carnival masquerade ball at which a Norma Shearer trophy was awarded.

Students Run Theatre During "Oz" Date

High school students in East Chicago, Ind., went to town for Mel Blieden, selling his recent "Wizard of Oz" opening at the last run Forsythe Theatre by taking over operation during the two-night run, president of the class acting as doorman, vice-president as chief of service, etc. Entire school system was contacted by the students, who sold tickets in a house-to-house canvass for a small percentage of the advance ticket sale.

School was gaily decorated with posters, signs and banners advertising the benefit, school assemblies were told to attend the show, and local Lions and Kiwanis Clubs purchased tickets for every member. Journalism classes supplied papers with publicity, art classes made a project of hand painted posters and these together with window cards were spotted in strategic places.

Novelty Advance Herald Aids Shannon on "Ninotchka"

Week ahead of opening on "Ninotchka" at the Boulevard Theatre, in Pittsburgh, Manager Chuck Shannon distributed questionnaire heralds carrying two different ads for the picture. Contest angle was brought in by patrons being asked to check in box provided at bottom, which they considered the better ad. Blanks were available two weeks ahead. Through cooperation of leading bank, memo pads with appropriate tie-in copy were distributed ahead of opening, special mailing list was covered and programs were distributed house-to-house.

"LET'S HEAR FROM YOU"

Hart's "Invisible" Stunt

On "Invisible Man," Lou Hart at Schine's Hippodrome, Gloversville, N. Y., promoted window display consisting of miniature doll answering all and sundry questions put to it by folks standing in front of the window. In the deep recesses of the basement an ad lib artist listened in on conversations and made the doll answer or carry on a conversation with passersby. Promoted from local hospital were test tubes, bunsen burners, chemicals, etc., which completed the display.

On this and the following page appears an alphabetical index to the titles of all features listed in this week's Release Chart, with additional information for the exhibitor.

The number immediately following the title is the production number. Also given is information regarding the classification of the subject matter. A melodrama is denoted by the abbreviation Mel., Comedy by Com., Comedy-Melodrama by Com.-Mel., Musical by Mus., Musical Comedy by Mus.-Com., Western by West. If the production is made in color, the letter "C" appears in parenthesis after the classification. Thus: Com.-Mel. (C) denotes a Comedy-Melodrama in Color.

At the extreme right of the line containing the title of the production is the name of the distributor.

Productions are listed according to the names of distributors in order that the exhibitor may have a short-cut towards such information as he may need, as well as information on pictures that are coming. Features now in work or completed for release later than the date of this issue are listed under "Coming Attractions." Letter in parenthesis after title denotes audience classification of production: (A) Adult, (G) General. Numerals following audience classification are production numbers. Dagger (†) symbol indicates picture is of the 1939-40 season. Asterisk (*) after title of feature denotes first appearance of picture in Release Chart.

NOTE: The totals for running time are the official figures announced by the home offices of the distributing companies.

When a production is reviewed in Hollywood, the running time is as officially given by the West Coast studio of the company at the time of the review, and this fact is denoted by an asterisk (*) immediately preceding the number. As soon as the home office has established the running time for national release, any change from the studio figure is made and the asterisk is removed.

Running times are subject to change according to local conditions. State or city censorship deletions may cause variations from the announced and published figures; repairs to the film may be another reason.

"THE BISCUIT EATER"

"TO MY DOG!"

Wondrous devotion lies behind his eyes,
His love's a magic charm
That safeguards me from harm;
His courage, faith and deep abiding trust
Will last eternal until we both are dust.

Stephen Harkness

We're not poets...so we won't attempt to describe in words the power and glory of this true-to-life drama of two boys and their trouble-making dog. Instead, Mr. Exhibitor, we offer this picture, "THE BISCUIT EATER," which we believe fully captures the realness and sincerity which made this Saturday Evening Post story so different from other stories. Paramount's "THE BISCUIT EATER" is a great heart picture. And the human heart and the box office heart beat ever the same.

"...there is no romance in the world like the romance of a boy and his dog..."

THE NEW
BRENKERT SENARC
HIGH INTENSITY PROJECTION LAMP

THEATRES ranging in capacity up to 800 seats with screen sizes up to 18 feet wide can now have the highest standards of projection at lower first cost and lower operating cost than heretofore believed possible. Colored, as well as black and white, pictures can now be projected with true photographic tones – – – at no greater cost than the low intensity, yellow light projection, which heretofore has been the main light source available at low cost for these theatres.

The Brenkert Senarc is Brenkert engineered and built throughout, which means correct design, precision operation, high efficiency, excellent service.

Brenkert distributors throughout the country will gladly give further information and demonstration.

MARKET NOTES:

Projection Room Layout Booklet

THE BOOKLET of projection room layouts and equipment specifications published by the National Theatre Supply Company, is now available in a revised 1940 edition. Containing sixteen pages, the publication, entitled "Projection Room Planning," includes in its comprehensive contents, the standard construction recommendations of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers and also a practical layout of a projection room based on actual practice. Other features are data on portholes, conduit, ventilation, location of ports and controls, rectifier, motor-generator and changeover wiring, and on the installation of Simplex sound systems and other equipment. The booklet is obtainable on request.

Establishes New York Office

A NEW YORK office has been established by the Automatic Devices Company of Allentown, Pa., manufacturers of steel curtain tracks and curtain control equipment. Located at 229 West 42d Street, the office is in charge of Mr. Lee B. Spivack.

Bulletin on Theatre Lighting

A NEW BULLETIN has been issued by Kliegl Brothers of New York, on their comprehensive line of lighting equipment, including lamps and accessories for architectural, decorative and stage illumination. Equipment types are described and pictured, affording an instructive account of lighting equipment available today.

New Dealer Firm Formed

A NEW COMPANY has been organized to succeed Sheckler's of Louisville, Ky., according to Arthur Vincent Sheckler. The new firm is called Central Theatre Supply, and the address has become 318 Fifth Avenue. Prominent among the makes of equipment distributed are Motiograph projectors, Brenkert lamps, Robin-Imperial motor-generators, and DeVry sound projectors.

Establishes New Service Offices

NEW LOCAL service divisions have been established by the Altec Service Corporation in Seattle and Cincinnati. Warren Conner, former manager in Philadelphia, is in charge of the Cincinnati branch, while M. G. Thomas is supervisor for the district. The Detroit district which was divided to form the Cincinnati division, remains under the supervision of F. C. Dickely. Barclay Ardell is manager of the Seattle office.

New Latex Cushion Plan

FOAMED LATEX cushion has been made available to furniture jobbers, upholsterers and manufacturers in blocks that may be cut to required dimensions for specific pieces of furniture, under a new plan instated by the United States Rubber Company. Thus this type of cushion may be readily specified for lounge or foyer furniture, either in new purchases or in reupholstering, moulding of each cushion to size being no longer necessary.

Gets Rights to Register

EXCLUSIVE DISTRIBUTION rights have been obtained by S. O. S. Cinema Supply Corporation to the "Super-Gold-Seal" model ticket register manufactured by the General Register Corporation of New York, makers of much of the ticket issuing equipment used in theatres. It is intended, according to J. A. Tanney, president of S. O. S., to make this electrically operated, automatic register available on an extended payment plan (see advertisement in this issue).

Marketing Film Splicer

A SPLICER for 35-mm. film, designed to effect an accurate jointure with maximum speed and convenience, is being marketed by the General Machine Company, Inc., of New York. It is available through theatre supply dealers (see advertisement in this issue).

Efficiency of New Lenses Demonstrated

HOW THE COATING of projection lenses can result in greater light transmission naturally has occasioned some puzzlement; and there have been questions too regarding their maintenance. Assurances on both points have been given by Dr. W. B. Rayton, director of the Scientific Bureau of Bausch & Lomb, which company recently introduced the new lenses commercially.

Synchronous Projection Demonstration

Following a talk before the last meeting of the Atlantic Section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, held in New York, Dr. Rayton demonstrated the greater efficiency of coated lenses, using matched prints in two synchronized projectors. On one half of the screen the picture was projected through an uncoated lens, while the corresponding image appeared on the other half of the screen, projected through a coated lens, and this test was "checked" in other demonstrations. The general opinion of those present, many of them practical projectionists and supervisors of projection, was that the image projected through the coated lens was substantially brighter.

▶The idea that coating increases transmission is not, it seems, really new. In the last issue of the Bausch & Lomb Magazine appeared an historical account of its development which finds an inkling of it back in 1852. It was in 1892 that an English lens designer found that if a photographic plate was exposed through a tarnished and also an untarnished lens, more light appeared to reach the plate through the tarnished lens. People who had tarnished lenses, instead of having damaged goods, had better lenses; and instead of trying to rectify them, or advising replacement, he actually tried to tarnish new lenses by placing them in chemical solutions. Work along this line has been going on at Bausch & Lomb since before World War No. 1, and the coated lenses which have been used in the projection of "Gone With the Wind," are most immediately the result of investigations conducted under Dr. Rayton.

The ultimate optical explanation of the action gets pretty complicated. Dr. Rayton put it something like this in his talk before the SMPE Section:

Why More Light Goes Through

The coating is gauged in thickness to a specific relationship to light wave-length. The light still is reflected upon encountering the glass surface back of the coating, but it cannot again pass through the coating—is, indeed, reflected by it, hence more light gets to the screen.

▶It was in conversation with F. H. Richardson that Dr. Rayton discussed maintenance of coated lenses. The outer surfaces, he said, may be cleaned by any ordinary method without ill effect on the lens. The inner surfaces, however, need not be cleaned because the lenses are sealed against dust or oil vapor. If they were to be cleaned by any ordinary method, the coating would be damaged. Should the sealing prove faulty in any instance, it would be advisable to have the manufacturer clean the inner surfaces.

Cite Lighting Advance

That a number of important developments in mercury light sources for "black light" applications may be expected shortly, was indicated in talks and demonstrations by C. M. Cutler and H. J. Chanon of General Electric's Nela Park engineering staff, in New York recently. Messrs. Cutler and Chanon spoke at a meeting especially arranged for theatre operators and architects.

Although equipment now available is being applied with impressive effect, the growing number of actual installations, and the interest engendered by them are speeding up development work in this field so that equipment best calculated to meet the various practical needs encountered may be made generally available. A new projector type of mercury light source was shown at the New York meeting.

Among the lighting methods exhibited and discussed were those employing plastics and fabrics (which Messrs. Cutler and Chanon will be discussing in these pages shortly.)

pointed out (as does Mr. Shannon in his article in this issue) that in focusing attention on the decorative significance of the innovation, its utilitarian aspects, as a source of auditorium illumination during the performance, was being overlooked.

Making Us Safe

Certain demonstrations of new interest in motion picture theatre "hazards" on the part of government folk have been duly reported in the trade press, but the reports have "played the news straight," whereas the attentions referred to here would seem to merit some selective reporting.

One such instance is the decision of the Maryland state film censor board to have its inspectors also take possible hazard conditions in the theatre into their purview. Thus they are directed to double in morals and physical rubbish, probably on the grounds that both effect social safety. And a few of the admonitions on the instruction sheet given the film censors are noteworthy.

One asks them to check on the presence of a "No Admittance" sign at the entrance to the projection room, and whether ushers "or other unauthorized persons" frequent the "booth." All of which would seem to make Maryland projectionists pretty exclusive.

The censor-inspectors are also asked, "is the relief projectionist competent?" Who is going to answer that one, the censor-inspectors? (Boy, page Mr. Richardson!)

Then the inspectors are supposed to see if the projection room walls are free of posters, pictures, etc. We've seen some in projection rooms that were hot enough to need censoring, but not on the grounds that they constituted a fire hazard.

Two other questions supply their own gags. One: "Are shutters on peep and focus holes in good working order?" Two: "Are 'No Smoking' signs posted in the auditorium?"

The other bit of governmental notice recently given our business is a bill submitted to the New York Legislature, regulating projection room plans and construction. There are many provisions in this to suggest insufficient information about projection, but especially notable is one which would make the minimum size for a two-projector room, 72 square feet. The SMPE standards call for 192 square feet, while dimensions of only 12x8 would make 96 square feet. Perhaps the legislators won't take it seriously, either.

That Balcony Problem: An Inquiry from an Architect

[EDITOR'S NOTE: S. Charles Lee of Los Angeles—one of our very best specialists in theatre design, of course—wants to know what you theatre owners and managers think about the need for a balcony. Do your patrons like it? Is it worth the cost? What does your experience show? We'll forward your opinions gladly.]

DEAR EDITOR:

Ever since the motion picture started to become the major attraction, and the stage show the minor attraction, I have been thinking about the future of the balcony. What has been turning over in my mind is whether the balcony is like the horse that performed an essential purpose in its day, has become an evil on the highway of progress most of the time, but when needed to pull through certain difficult spots is almost indispensable.

During the time when we had stage entertainment generally, a balcony was almost indispensable. First, in order to get capacity to cover the overhead on the stage production every available seat was essential within the range of sight and hearing; and as the average balcony was built from 60 to 70 feet from the proscenium, an extra set of front row seats was created and sold to certain customers that otherwise would have been lost to the box office.

With the increasing popularity of the motion picture, some of these balcony merits became less important. The comfort of the patron is now being stressed to an ever-increasing degree, and with the gaining popularity of neighborhood theatre construction, a grave question of decision greets the theatre operator.

S. (for "Sim") CHARLES LEE

There are certain "downtown" locations bearing high rent values that require maximum capacities. There is also a condition in many cities where smoking is allowed in the balcony and not on the main floor. This creates a patronage for balcony seats where such a law exists. Where such a law does not exist the deficiencies of the balcony again appear.

It would be interesting to hear from your readers as to the relative merits and shortcomings of a balcony as noted by them in handling the public. And here is the thing that they might bear in mind—the cost of the construction of a balcony is greater per seat, generally speaking, than the first floor construction.

A few interesting observations of the theatre operator, such as the resistance of some people to walking up the stairs to a balcony—the "claustrophobia complex" of certain persons against seating beneath the balcony—how to segregate smokers without a balcony—and the relative cost of operation per seat—these angles would form a basis for an intelligent analysis of the balcony problem, which might prove helpful to theatre owners themselves.

Sincerely yours,
S. CHARLES LEE.

EDITOR'S P. S.—You'll be hearing from Mr. Lee soon again in these columns.

Building Notes

Indication of theatre building and large-scale modernization underway in the East-Central part of the country came recently in the course of gathering material on one of the theatres featured in this issue, Louis Wiethe's new Westwood in Cincinnati. This was designed and built by the F. & Y. Building Service of Columbus, which now has on its boards or in construction a 900-seat house in Cincinnati for Ackermann Enterprises, one of 500 seats at Cleves, Ohio, for Robert and Walter Harrell, a 450-seat theatre for Miles and Netha Vance in Hamilton, Ohio, one for a group including J. E. Crawford, J. R. Loofbourow and Joseph Luhn at Fort Thomas, Ky., while Max Matz is remodeling his Colonial at Bluefield, W. Va., at a cost of $20,000.

Something New—Rare Flowers

A theatre project which introduces a new wrinkle is that of S. C. Meyers in Glencoe, Chicago suburb. Mr. Meyers is the operator of Teatro del Lago which gained some fame from its location in a former "no man's land" between two suburbs which did not permit theatres. His new theatre is to have a "cry room," but that's hardly an innovation. What probably is brand new is his plan to have a conservatory of rare plants as a permanent part of the theatre layout.

An 80-Foot Screen—Wow!

These drive-in's do get into the news. For instance: E. M. Loew plans to improve his Miami enterprise, and among the "improvements" will be an 80-foot screen. That's giving the young blades some real competition! —G. S.

Painting the Theatre with "Canned Light"

• Since discussion of the innovation in Better Theatres a year ago, "black light" has arrived as a new tool of showmanship; and from its increasing application, more about its practical use has been learned. Here an engineer identified with many "black light" installations offers counsel out of his experience

By JOHN T. SHANNON

UNTIL QUITE recently the application of "black light" to the theatre has been left almost entirely to the tastes and ideas of decorators who were not familiar with either the nature or the full potentialities of the device they were using. Consequently the fluorescent materials which constitute a vital link in the "black light" system were thought of and applied exactly as if they were so much paint. Some pleasing or novel effects of decoration are often obtained in that way, but the full possibilities of "black light" are not realized, nor even approached.

Black light can, in fact, do three things for the theatre. Affording novel or different decoration is only one of these. It can also serve as a source of utility lighting of a very special and valuable kind; and it can create specific and striking atmospheric effects.

Good and Bad Effect

In its simplest decorative function, to which it has until recently been almost wholly confined, "black light" decoration consists essentially of geometric or other ornamental patterns applied to wall or ceiling surfaces in the form of luminescent materials which may or may not be visible under ordinary light. When illuminated by a source of more or less invisible near-ultra-violet light, these materials glow in various colors. Since the ultra-violet light which excites their fluorescence is not discerned, the ornamental pattern gives the illusion of being self-illuminated, or of glowing from within. Complex and interesting decorative designs have been evolved, and strictly as decoration there is no limit to the effects that may be obtained with "black light" except the skill of the artist using it.

A decorative variation recently evolved has been to coat statuary with fluorescent material and place it in dark niches where it is illuminated only by invisible light and appears to be self-glowing.

A common fault in decorative practice to date has been the excessive use of materials which glow in blue or green colors, producing a somewhat ghastly effect which is quite needless, since a wide range of colors is available and it is just as easy to use materials that show cheerful pinks and yellows.

The atmospheric effect of "black light" has been too little understood. By use of red, yellow and pink-glowing fluorescent materials a "sunrise" effect can be created on ceiling or walls, the normal painting and lighting of which represent a night scene; or by the reverse choice, a ceiling which normally presents the aspect of a daylight sky can be made to glow in a rich night-blue with gleaming moon and stars, all brought out by ultra-violet light.

"Black light" adds a third-dimensional effect to mural paintings, but also makes it possible to fade into or out of such paintings background details or additional figures. The picture can be designed to appear nearly the same under black light as under ordinary light, partly the same, or entirely different. A central theme or figure may be so painted as to appear unchanged while the background, or even the clothing of that figure, alters completely when the lighting is switched from visible to ultra-violet, or vice versa.

As Source of Illumination

Least used to date of all its possibilities is the power of "black light" to provide ordinary utility illumination. Carpets impregnated with fluorescent substances and lighted by invisible sources have very recently come into use. But walls and ceilings similarly treated and lighted may be made to provide illumination for the auditorium or for the area surrounding the screen, or both. White fluorescent illumination is obtainable in this way, since if walls are painted in two complementary colors (for instance, a pure red and pure green) the light emanating from those walls will mix a short distance from them and produce the effect of white fluorescent lighting. Other colors or tones may be obtained in the same way, and the color

Built for High-Standard Operation in a Working-Class Neighborhood

General view of the front with its architectural brick facing trimmed in terra cotta. The Wagner attraction boards include provision for 4-inch letters.

FAMILIES OF office workers, small businessmen and skilled laborers provided the bulk of the patronage of the new Westwood, young Louis Wiethe's latest theatre in Cincinnati. Mr. Wiethe began his career as exhibitor twelve years ago, at the age of 18, and has since built the Bond in Cincinnati, the Kentucky in Latonia, a suburb; and the Westwood. He also has owned and operated other houses in Latonia and Fort Thomas. His first important step toward large-scale operation was achieved by remodeling, when he converted a "lemon" of long standing, the Derby in Latonia, into an exceptionally valuable property.

The new Westwood is located in a neighborhood shopping center, drawing from a population of approximately 40,000. The seating capacity is 900. F & Y Construction Company of Columbus, Ohio, were the designers and engineers.

The basic construction is of concrete, brick and steel. Glass, brick, terra cotta, tile and stainless steel are used on the facade. Cost of the building, exclusive of equipment, was approximately $70,000, including air-conditioning and lighting, with common labor at 75c per hour, masons at $1.62½, and carpenters at $1.45. General equipment cost $20,000.

The Front

The facade above the marquee consists largely in two broad terra-cotta fields, one yellow, the other, which partially surrounds it, burnt umber striped vertically with blue terra-cotta fins. The vertical name sign has a maroon border trimmed in canary yellow. Stainless steel channel letters on each face of the sign display three lines of power neon, two lines of power green and one line of power gold, the green and gold being controlled by flashers. Passing vertically up each side of the sign and horizontally across the top are three lines of ruby red. Three stainless steel spinnings at the top of each side of the sign, each illuminated at night by two lines of ruby red neon, reproduce the effect of the stainless steel spinnings which light the entrance and the poster displays under the marquee.

The field of the marquee is painted maroon brown. Upper and lower chasers have borders of canary yellow and bottoms of white enamel. The nose of the marquee blue. The vertical tubes at either side of the nose are blue; the three horizontal tubes along the projecting ornaments at the top of the marquee are power green. Incandescent lamps in the chaser borders and along the nose are flasher-operated. The Wgner silhouette type attraction boards provide for 4-inch letters as well as larger sizes.

Approximately 200 ten-watt incandescents illuminate the soffit in a herringbone pattern, three lines of lamps radiating to each side from the central rib, which is a continuation of the line of incandescents that runs down the nose of the marquee. Additional light sources are concealed by the stainless steel spinnings. Eight dome lights illuminate the porcelain soffit over the entrance doors, and there is fluorscent neon tubing in the stainless steel display cases.

Entrance Area

The ticket booth is built of mahogany colored granite face terra-cotta, which also forms the base course of the theatre front. The ticket register equipment, incidentally, includes the new General Register automatic window price register.

The vestibule is framed almost entirely in glazed materials, with a porcelain enamel soffit overhead, the plate glass of the ticket office on one side and a cornice of Owens-Illinois glass block at the other side. The floor is terrazzo. Entrance doors are of glass, trimmed with sand-blasted horizontal lines, set in natural birch frames.

Patrons pass into an entrance lobby (see floor plan) wainscoted in wine-colored plaster, reproducing the mahogany terra-cotta base course of the facade. Mauve-colored horizontal fluted plaster ornamentation is set at the bottoms and sides of the display frames. The remainder of the wall area is done in robin's-egg blue leading to a ceiling treated in three shades of blue-green flat paint, and traversed by two concealed light troughs with bluff-colored plaster reflecting surfaces. Illumination is provided by 10-watt incandescents set on 6-inch centers in these troughs and in a central dome. Lobby frames are painted wood fitted with lumiline lamps. The doors leading to the foyer are 2¼-inch solid slab birch finished in natural color and grain.

The foyer is integral with the standee area of the auditorium at one side (see

DETAIL: AUDITORIUM
REAR WALL and CEILING

■ An interesting feature of the interior treatment of both the auditorium and the foyer is the general use of leatherette as the wall finishing material. Leatherette has previously been used for theatre interior finish, but seldom, if ever before, on this scale. The simulated leather employed is Naugalite (a U. S. Rubber Company product basically similar to this manufacturer's Naugahyde, a heavier leatherette widely used for seating upholstery). Naugalite is used to finish the interiors of buses and pleasure cars, and the side wall design of the Westwood auditorium (see photograph on opposite page) indeed suggests inspiration from the streamlined buses of the Greyhound line. On the walls of the auditorium and the foyer, ivory Naugalite (leatherette of this type is washable with soap and water) is laid in square pieces, each stretched over a wood frame, which is secured by one-quarter-inch mould driven into furring (for further details see text of descriptive article beginning on page 10). The face of the standee rail is covered with Naugahyde (see photograph on opposite page). The rear view of the auditorium, above, shows clearly the method of staggering the seating.

VIEW OF FOYER FROM STANDEE AREA (see floor plan)

TWO VIEWS OF AUDITORIUM.

SECTION OF WOMEN'S LOUNGE.

Architectural glass, strong, easily applied to new or existing structures, available in a great variety of colors and patterns, brings to theatres large and small eye-appeal with refinement. Here is an example of its application to the smaller theatre, in Mrs. P. M. Thomas's Parker theatre in Parkersburg, W. Va. Below the porcelain-enamel marquee, with its Wagner silhouette attraction panels, the front is finished in Vitrolite, the ground color being ivory, the bases black, and border banding red.

From the researches of the industrial arts, the theatre has in many instances been one of the first fields to benefit. Development of architectural glass products, improvement in the porcelain-enamelling of metals, are potent factors in the great change in front design. Always conscious of appearance, the theatre has been also quick to combine function with decoration. Here are some recent examples.

GLASS

Probably one of the most elaborate uses of the new glass blocks yet made in the theatre field is that by the Webster theatre in Hartford, Conn. Readily lending themselves to the curved design, Pittsburg-Corning glass blocks provide exterior "flash" by day and night, light for interior public areas by day. These blocks are in the Argus pattern, of pebbled effect.

Colorful, mirror-like, refined and clean-cut in pattern is the facade of the Florida theatre, Sparks circuit house in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., designed by Roy A. Benjamin. With a base course of Florida Keystone in tan, this front has a central panel of tropic-green Vitrolite applied with extrudalite aluminum mouldings, between side panels of light cream smooth-finish stucco.

Porcelain; Steel

A notable example of how porcelain enamel, a relatively economical material, lends itself today to impressive architectural effects. With the marquee also in porcelain enamel, the entire installation was made by the Artkraft Sign Company, Lima, Ohio, using for the facade, Davidson ripple-finish porcelain enamel in terra cotta and ivory, tan, brown and red. This is the Uptown, Kalamazoo, Mich.

The front treatment of this new theatre, the College in Brooklyn, N. Y., designed by John Eberson, combines stone with such modern materials as stainless steel and phenolics. The facade is cast stone, with a base course in black Albarene stone, while Kawneer stainless steel store front construction is used, and the vestibule is finished in Formica. The ticket booth base is black serpentine stone.

Light & Air

Ceiling pendent suspended from an Anemostat air diffuser in the women's lounge of the Senator theatre in Baltimore, designed by John J. Zink. This room is papered in blue and ivory, the plaster ceiling painted deep ivory. The fixture has reeded metal sides, and the metal-disc Anemostat appears as an integral part of it.

The circular cove method of combining Anemostat air-diffusers with light sources, here shown as used in the Randforce circuit's Clinton theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., designed by William I. Hohauser. Simply done, this foyer-standee area has walls of coral-tinted hard plaster, ceiling of cream acoustic plaster. The coves thus are dominant decorative devices. They have fluted rims and a central plaster baffle into which the Anemostats are set, and above which are 15-watt lamps, twelve to each cove.

STUDY, FRONT MASSING

■ The Minnesota Amusement Company's Uptown theatre in Minneapolis, located in a neighborhood shopping center, is virtually a new house, having been modernized throughout at a cost of $65,000. The broad upper area of the new front is pink and buff Kasota stone, against which ground color are placed the green, maroon and buff of the name sign. Channel letters in the name sign are painted in ivory and illuminated by incandescent lamps. The marquee, carrying Wagner silhouette attraction boards (note how they bend around the cornice), is of stainless steel and illuminated by both filament lamps and fluorescent neon (zeon). The design basis followed throughout the theatre, from front to auditorium, was one of minimizing the bluntness and angularity of a basically functional design by means of gentle, curving lines. This may be noted in the marquee, front medallion, and sign crown. The soffit carries incandescents without reflectors. Fluorescent tubing is used in the alumilite display cases. The base course is of rainbow granite in brown, red and tan, and the same material forms the base of the ticket booth, which is completed in wood and glass. Entrance doors have large glass panels sand-blasted in curved baroque designs. The remodeling was carried out at a basic cost of 85c per hour for common labor, $1.25 for carpenters, and $1.37½ for masons. (The Car-dell Company of Minneapolis were the general contractors.)

CEILING, WOMEN'S LOUNGE

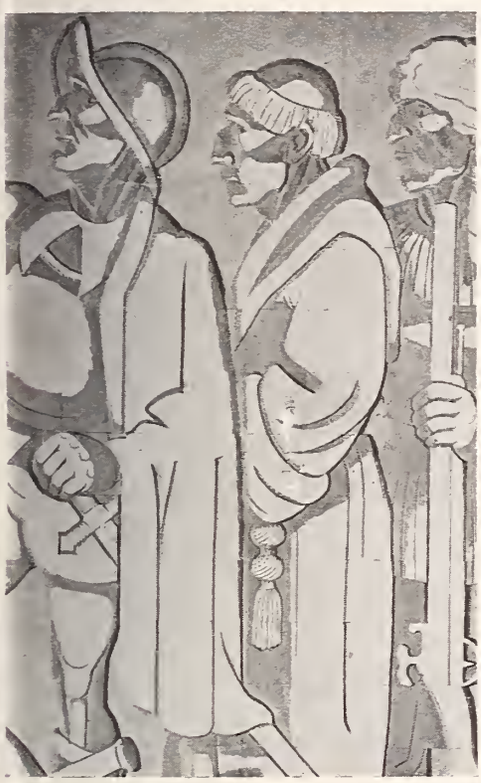
VIEW OF THE AUDITORIUM WITH ITS LUMINESCENT BAS-RELIEFS CARVED IN ACOUSTI-CELOTEX

■ Dominating the treatment of the Uptown auditorium are two large, bas-reliefs on either side wall, carved in Acousti-Celotex and painted in luminescent lacquers to form glowing murals during the performance under the ultra-violet light of mercury lamps recessed into the balcony parapet. The lamps are fitted with reflectors designed by the architects and have convex filters (these bas-reliefs are further discussd on pag 19). Acousti-Celotex is also used to finish the balcony parapet and all wall areas above plaster wainscot. The ceiling is plaster, as is also the proscenium. A total of sixteen fluorescent tubular lamps in two colors (requiring in all less than 3 kilowatts) provide general auditorium lighting as well as decoration. They are concealed in vertical troughs along the side walls, in the balcony soffit, and in circular ceiling coves from which are suspended Anemostat air diffusers. The colors are rose pink and blue. Basic color scheme of the auditorium is delft blue and bone white, with burgundy red in the stage drapes and on the back and seats of the chairs. The capacity is 1,000, with 250 chairs located in the balcony. All seating is on a three-bank plan on floors having conventional downward slope. Rows are spaced 33 inches, and chairs are from 20 to 22 inches wide, with backs upholstered in mohair, the seats in leatherette. . . . The inset at the bottom of the page shows the plaster ornamentation bordering the foyer doors leading into the auditoriums, harmonizing with the baroque ornamental plaster at either side of the proscenium opening and elsewhere.



AUDITORIUM DOORS

BAS-RELIEF THEMES: The luminescent murals (as they quite properly may be called) on either side of the auditorium between the proscenium arch and balcony, are by Gustave W. Krollman, a well known painter and an instructor in the Minneapolis School of Fine Arts. The theme of the composition shown in the above photograph is an allegorical presentation of the Catholic Fathers who explored the region in which Minneapolis lies—Fathers Hennepin, Marquette, Nicollet and LaSalle, who view a pioneer country contrasted with the modern city which stands there today. . . . On the opposite wall, the composition delineates in allegorical figures based on their historical or legendary origins, the lakes of Minneapolis, which pour their waters into the Mississippi, Father of Waters. The figures in both compositions are of heroic size, and the whole renditon, having a conventional mural effect under visible light, becomes pastel-outlined in a greenish glow under the near-ultra-violet light of the concealed mercury lamps.

Broadening the Decorative Use of Perforated Tiles

THE LUMINESCENT murals featuring the auditorium treatment of the Uptown theatre in Minneapolis (described in preceding pages), illustrate an additional method of adapting fibre boards and tiles having great acoustical correction efficiency, to decorative purposes. In the Uptown designs, Acousti-Celotex (perforated mineral tile) is the material with which the artist, Gustave W. Krollman, has worked. The compositions, one on each wall and both of allegorical character, and carved in low relief into the tiles, are attached by rawl plugs and cement to the walls, projecting 2 to 3 inches.

The design is outlined and highlighted with U. V. Liquid Stroblite 29, which has a green glow under the "black light" cast by mercury lamps concealed in the balcony parapet. The compositions thus are really bas-reliefs in colored light combining in something of a new technique, sculpture, painting and illumination.

The use of acoustical fibre materials in this way of course permits still further the acoustical treatment of walls with decorative effect. Other methods are indicated by the adaptation of Acousti-Celotex to overall tinting or design ornamentation with oil paints, casein paints, gold and silver left, etc., without impairment of the acoustical properties, in addition to pattern application effected by sawing to desired shapes and by bevelling.

ACOUSTICS in Form & Decoration

by C. C. POTWIN

FORMING "BOWLED" FLOORS

THE EXPRESSION "bowl floor" commonly used in reference to floor slope design for the motion picture theatre is often misused and misunderstood. First, the "bowl floor" is a floor shape which forms automatically when the seating is arranged in concentric arcs, in connection with a floor slope designed for the purpose of providing proper sightlines.

Because concentric arc or radial plan seating is necessary in theatres having ten or more seats in the complete inside width of the auditorium, and some degree of floor slope is needed in most all instances, the "bowl floor" shape is necessary.

Why a "Bowled" Floor?

The name "bowl floor" seems to have become popular because the resultant floor shape appears to be like that of a portion of a saucer or shallow bowl.

The bowl floor can be deliberately or unknowingly avoided even with the combined use of concentric seating and sloped floor, but only at the cost of serious disadvantages. When the bowl is thus avoided, the chairs will have one support standard lower than the other in each chair, and the floor slope at the extreme sides will be inadequate as compared to the slope in the center of the auditorium. When the bowl is avoided, the changes in floor slope occur on straight lines extending across the width of auditorium at right angles to the side walls, thereby setting a given curved row of chairs on various levels, instead of all of the chairs for that row being on a uniform level.

Construction Procedure

To construct a bowled floor properly the following procedure should be followed:

Stakes should be driven into the ground and a 7/8-inch continuous board should be nailed to these stakes with the top of the board being set true level for the entire length of the given row of seats, the row of course being shaped to a concentric arc. For each row in which a change in floor slope is indicated this form board must be erected.

The concrete should then be poured and the top cement finished in alternate rows. After the concrete is cured the form boards are pulled up and the remaining in-between rows are poured, using the previously finished rows as formwork.

Chair Back Angles And Slope of Floor

MORE consideration should be given to the problem of chair back angles in seating installations. One of the outstanding faults is that of using a similar chair back angle for all seats in a given theatre. This fault may account for extreme lack of seat-posture comfort in theatres having more than twenty rows of depth, or where the seating is on more than one level, because it is in these instances where variation in chair back angles is most desirable.

Chair back angles should be measured in relation to a vertical line of gravity, or plumb line. Each change in angle will affect the manner in which the body will be supported. However, there is range of chair back angles within which proper support is adequately provided for. The smallest chair back angle which will not throw the body too far forward is 16°, and the largest chair back angle which will not throw the head too far back is about 23°. This suits average needs.

Balcony and Main Floor Angles

For best results on upper levels of seating chair backs should have minimum angles. On the main floor level a change in angles is advisable for every four rows of seats, the smaller angles being used in the seats farthest from the screen, and the larger angles being used in the rows nearest the screen.

Chair back angles should never be changed by altering the angle originally fixed between the seat cushion and the back of the chair. All chair back angle changes must be formed by adjustment of the height and angle cuts of the seat standards and by the pitch of the floor. These specifications should be made part of the contract used in purchasing seating. Most of the reliable seating manufacturers will submit drawings showing these details of design for checking by the architect or owner of the theatre, before the seats go into production.

Seat Height Distances

Any adjustment made in the chair back or seat standard should not cause the crown of the seat cushion to be any less than 16 1/2 inches from the floor, nor more than 17 1/4 inches above the floor.

SELECTION OF MATERIALS

THE SELECTION of the proper type of sound absorbing material to be used for acoustical treatment is a problem with which almost every exhibitor and theatre architect is at some time confronted. The appearance of the material, its adaptability to a suitable decorative scheme, and its maintenance qualities are all very important considerations governing its selection and use.

Maintenance Factors

The subject of maintenance is especially important from the practical viewpoint. The operation of ventilating and air-conditioning systems during performances, as well as nightly cleaning of the theatre, results in an almost continuous circulation of dust particles.

These dust particles adhere very readily to soft and porous surfaces, and for this reason it is often necessary to select a material which can be brushed, vacuumed, or otherwise easily cleaned, particularly if the material is rather light in color. The fireproof qualities of a material, as well as its ability to withstand wear and impact on areas close to the audience, are also important considerations relative to theatre construction and operation.

If, in evaluating all of these factors, however, acoustical properties are considered of secondary importance and a material is selected mainly on the strength of its appearance and structural qualities, the primary purpose of its use may be defeated. The material may have either too much or too little sound absorption for the particular surface on which it is installed.

Acoustical Needs First

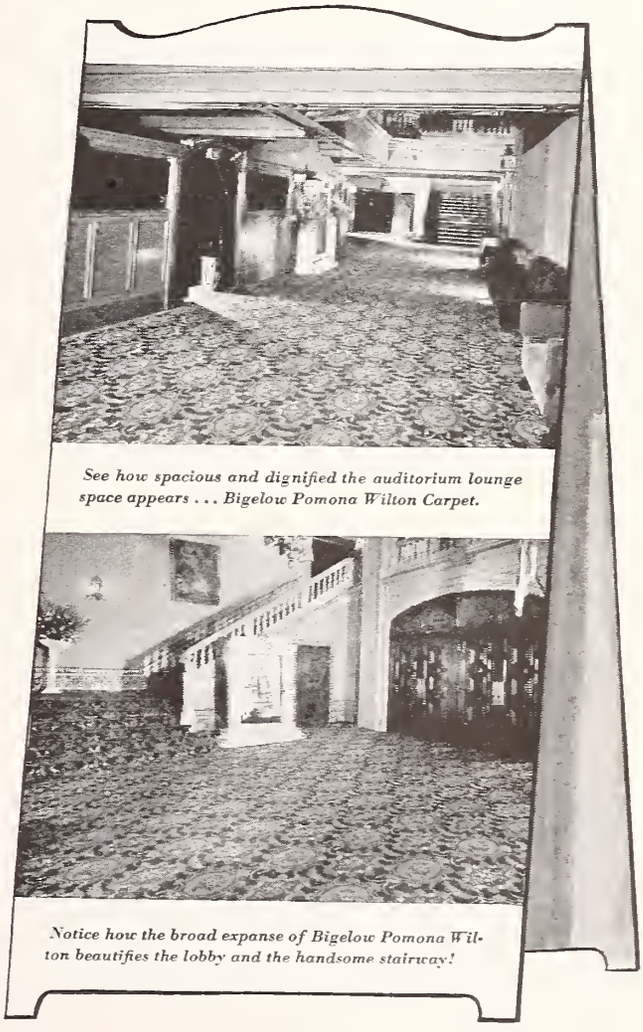
As explained previously in these columns, almost every theatre has its own individual requirements which must be met in planning acoustical treatment. Materials should be selected, first with a view to meeting these requirements — that is, having the proper type and amount of absorption for the rear wall, the side walls, or the ceiling, as the case may be, as well as correct values at different frequencies.

There is certainly enough variety in the types of materials now available to make it possible to meet the demands imposed by almost any type of theatre structure without sacrificing acoustical qualities to gain the architectural effect one wishes to achieve.

Beauty underfoot by BIGELOW—

in Loew's State Theatre, Los Angeles

It's not surprising that the theatre owners of California want their theatres to be "super" stunning!



So perhaps it was only natural that the decorators for Loew's State Theatre in Los Angeles (which is an important house in the Fox West Coast Chain) turned to Bigelow and Bigelow's Carpet Counsel! They chose Bigelow's Pomona Wilton carpet, and approximately 2200 yards add charm to the interior of Loew's State.

We can make your theatre floors beautiful, too! Carpet Counsel will help you select the right grades, the right designs and colors at the right prices. The services of Carpet Counsel include expert advice, special designs and delivery on time!

Carpeting to Get Special Design Effects

LOCAL SYMBOLIZATION

■ Expression of local background has a ready medium in carpeting, which often needs no aid from expensive architectural tricks. This has been done in the Motor City theatre in Detroit (foyer shown above), in which 1,200 yards of Alexander Smith Crestwood Velvet of special design supplies skyscraper-automobile motifs in a colorful pattern of maroon, gold, tan and orchid. . . . The Wyandotte theatre in Wyandotte, Mich. (foyer shown below) goes to the past for its theme, the local Indian background being carried out in large murals. Covered with Masland Wilton, the floors are predominantly in solid copper-color, but into it have been introduced woven medallions based on Indian decorative figures, in the greens and tans of the murals.

FLOOR-PLAN ORNAMENTATION

■ To distinguish patent-back carpeting in application as well as in physical characteristics, one may say that it is a means of achieving special woven floor covering designs mechanically. Instead of weaving or printing the pattern, with its coloration, pieces of long-wearing broadloom carpeting of desired color, are cut into desired forms and cemented to the backing. A recent installation that well illustrates the special design advantages of patent-back broadloom floor coverings is that in the Miller theatre in Augusta, Ga., pictured here. This is a Bigelow-Sanford Lokweave with the main body of the carpeting in wine-color, and ornamental inset designs and border strips in blended tones of beige, rust and blue. With walls throughout the foyer and standee area essentially plain, the carpet supplies the principal ornamentation. Moreover, the special designs and border strips are located with direct reference, both decoratively and directionally, to architectural forms and plan.

On-Floor Cleaning With New Moist Powder Shampoo

DEVELOPMENT of a new fabric cleaner in moist powder form, called Drisorbene, supplies yet another method by which it is feasible to clean theatre carpeting without removing it from the floor (the use of a special liquid cleaner called Carbona Soapless Lather, was discussed in the department, "Cleaning Aids and Methods," in the February and March issues). Drisorbene, which was developed by the technical department of the Bigelow Sanford Carpet Company of New York.

Before applying the cleaner, all loose dirt is removed with a vacuum cleaner. Any areas which are greatly matted or soiled, should be "opened up" by scrubbing with a stiff-bristled brush without cleaner. Stains are then spot-removed with Drisorbene (water will remove some stains more readily; if used, the fabric should be allowed to dry before applying cleaner). Then the Drisorbene is crumbled and spread over a portion of the carpet that can be completely cleaned in about twenty minutes, and brushed evenly into the pile. In from two to four hours the carpet will be dry. Any loose spent powder can be removed with a vacuum cleaner tufting tool, while particles adhering to baseboards may be readily wiped off.

Drisorbene is similarly applicable to all fabrics, pile type or otherwise.

redecorated and reseated a year ago, but without changing the neo-classic style of the original design, the auditorium of the Rialto theatre in Louisville has now been given a definite modern touch with the addition of Mohawk Wilton in a design that ingeniously suggests both styles. Even modernistic in figure scheme, it has an overall effect akin to that of traditional patterns. Shadings of tan effect the ground tones; the figures are in red, brown and green, harmonizing with the wall patterns, pillar brackets, seating and chrome-trimmed Chinese-red doors. The Rialto is managed by J. J. Musselman who, in supplying this information, adds, "We have spent quite a lot of money modernizing, but it's worth it."

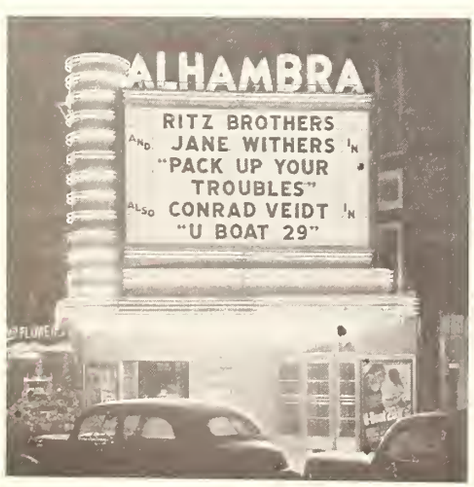
Boosting Front Display Value

THE EVOLUTION of the modern marquee began with making it architecturally integral with the entire front. In remodeling, when the facade remains unchanged, this integration may be accomplished by including a vertical or other prominent sign in the job and relating it closely to the marquee, with all of these structures adapted in weight and general "feeling" with the front design.



The rest of the development of the modern marquee consisted in making it more directly an attraction advertising medium, and more and more effective as such. The silhouette type of attractional panel was regarded, with few exceptions, as a definite step in advance, since it made the advertising more conspicuous and did so efficiently. This was followed by increasing the area of the marquee occupied by attraction panels and the development of multiple-line boards.

Although the silhouette type panel brought greater visibility at a distance, there have been attempts to increase legibility still further, through modification of the letter, the panel and the lighting. The marquee of the Cinderella theatre in Detroit shown in an accompanying photograph, represents a recent effort in this direction. This marquee, designed by Charles Burton, Paramount architect and engineer, is really a remodeled structure, Adler frame equipment of multi-decker type being erected along its sides in trapezoidal formation. Instead of white opal glass, Mr. Burton specified lemon-yellow Vitrolux for the purpose of reducing foot-candle intensity without substantially impairing contrast.

The need for increased height of attraction panels in order to make full use of the multiple-line, combination-letter equipment now available for "typographical" displays, may well result in greater adoption of arrangements like that shown in the accompanying photograph of the Alhambra theatre, also in Detroit. Here Adler frames square in shape, accommodating a variety of letter sizes, were placed over the marquee.

Varying Design In Prefabrication

DEVISED TO simplify the marquee design and erection procedure, the "prefabrication method" of manufacture has steadily increased its flexibility so that specific requirements may be more readily met. Two recent installations by the Artkraft Sign Company of Lima, Ohio, illustrate the range of design achieved.

In the Robins theatre in Warren, Ohio operated by Robins Brothers, we have a relatively elaborate structure both in structural lines and lighting, using a dozen lines of neon trim, and incandescent borders. The colors are cream, brown and orange.

The marquee of the Avalon in Jeanerette, La., operated by L. C. Lampe, is colorfully decorative, yet simple in pattern with lighting confined to neon. The color scheme here is blue, orange, red and yellow. The vertical sign was part of this Artkraft installation.

Incandescent Tube Lamp Adapted to Luminous Designs

FILAMENT TYPE tubular lamps providing physical flexibility of application (they can be bent around severe corners and to make complete circles), light output up to 200 watts per foot of tube, and continuity of light (sockets between individual lamps are eliminated) are now being made available in the United States by Filament Tubes, Inc., of Buffalo. These lamps have been in use in England and Canada for a number of years; their manufacture has been started in the United States and distribution in this country is now being organized.

Schematic drawing indicating the construction of the lamp and how units are placed immediately adjoining. The wavy line is the filament; heavy line at bottom of tube is the busbar, with filament anchor members extending up from it. Knob extending from tube is the plug, or "base." Separation here shown between tubes is closed in application to form a continuous line of light.

Available in lengths varying by multiples of 6 inches (6, 12, 18, etc.), and in three diameters (30, 40 and 50 millimeters), this type of lamp is plugged into the lighting trough or strip along its length, rather than by means of "bases" at the ends. Thus to form a long line of light, sections—each constituting a complete lamp—are arranged end to end, immediately adjoining, so that when lighted they form an essentially uninterrupted line of light.

An application of bent tube, indicating how this type of incandescent lamp may be shaped to outline architectural forms, follow decorative designs, or make their own ornamental patterns.

Stock tubes are available in a number of bent shapes adapted to average requirements of fixtures and architectural lighting, while special shapes may be arranged for. For cove and related indirect lighting, clear glass units may be obtained; for exposed application, the tubes are available in opal and the cheaper sprayed (non-glossy) types, and colored tubes are obtainable as well.

In general application, the filament tubular lamp may be regarded as a means of effecting architectural lighting without coves, troughs and other built-in devices. The latter of course have their definite place in modern illumination schemes, particularly those in which decorative or "environmental" effect, rather than light intensity is stressed. A special value of filament tubular lamps, when of opal or glazed glass, lies in the fact that they may be exposed.

A sprayed white lamp as it appears lighted, plugged in sockets along its length rather than at ends. Stock lengths are available up to 36 inches, other lengths up to 48 inches on special order. For continuous, long lines of light, lamps adjoin each other.

For color lighting, they have the same limitations that all incandescent lamps

Combination Ceiling Fixture Using Fluorescent Lamps

A NEW fluorescent mazda lamp ceiling fixture having the combined characteristics of a decorative luminaire, a source of diffused direct light, and a lighting trough, has been marketed by R. & W. Wiley, Inc., of Buffalo. Each luminaire is 48 inches long and 16 inches wide, and has 5-inch sides (see accompanying photograph), with construction so that units may be yoked together to form a trough of a length to meet room requirements. Each unit may accommodate from four to six 40-watt fluorescent lamps (48 inches long and 1½ inches in diameter).

The side panels are of white moulded plastic, providing a light diffusing surface. The bottom of the luminaire consists in plastic louvers to diffuse the light downward; the top, of course, is open for the reflection of all available light from the ceiling.

Lamp auxiliaries ("Tulamp" type) are mounted in the center channel of the fixture; the starter switches (F. S.-4) are mounted at the side of the channel. The center panel also acts as a downward reflector. Total wattage, including the auxiliaries, is 200 for the four-lamp luminaire, and 300 for the six-lamp fixture. Lamps are inserted from the open top.

Externally, this luminaire is finished in semi-gloss cream-colored enamel, though other finishes may be obtained on special order.

The units may be supplied unwired, or completely wired for installation, with General Electric auxiliaries, sockets, starter switches and hangers.

Painting Theatres With 'Canned Light'

schemes of large mural paintings or of fluorescent geometrical ornamentation, may be taken into account in planning general illumination.

Fully effective application of "black light," utilizing all the possibilities of which it is capable to the best advantage, depends to a considerable extent on a fuller technical understanding of it than appears as yet to have become widespread.

Paints Available Today

The fluorescent substances, or paints—"canned light," for that is what it is—can be obtained in a great variety of colors, duplicating almost all the normally visible colors, and these in turn can be made to produce blended illumination effects by applying two or more of them near each other on the same surface, as above noted. Disregarding the color with which they glow under ultra-violet excitation, these substances or paints are of two general types, opaque and transparent. The transparent kind, painted over natural colors, is invisible when viewed by natural light, but when the same surface is illuminated only

Planning Service

¶ Better Theatres is glad to answer the questions of exhibitors concerning theatre planning. Better Theatres' Service Department annually deals with hundreds of inquiries regarding planning problems, equipment, furnishings, etc. This is strictly a service to readers for which there is no charge.

¶ In order that questions may be dealt with effectively, they should be specific, and all conditions bearing upon them should be clearly given. Often a rough sketch is helpful. It is of course understood that this service is in no way intended to supplant that of a theatre architect. Better Theatres cannot supply working plans, design sketches, etc., which must be procured from a licensed architect.

¶ Although Better Theatres' Service Department has leading specialists regularly available for consultation when and as an inquiry may advise this, all inquiries are answered by this department and should be addressed to it, as follows:

by "black light," the underlying natural color is lost and only the fluorescence of the transparent layer can be seen—the color of that fluorescence having no necessary relation to the color of the underlying surface. Thus, by using a transparent fluorescent lacquer, and substituting ultra-violet for natural lighting, and vice versa, the appearance of the surface is changed at will. Using both forms of light simultaneously gives a three-dimensional illusion. Opaque fluorescent lacquer enamels, eliminating the need for an underpainting of ordinary materials, are also available.

Sources of ultra-violet and near-ultra-violet illumination are made in wide variety. In addition to 100-watt and 250-watt illuminating units, there are efficient projector lamps, similar in design to incandescent projectors, utilizing reflectors and throwing concentrated beams of light, but containing, instead of ordinary incandescents, high-intensity mercury lamps in hard glass or quartz envelopes which do not cut off the ultra-violet emission. Some of these lamps, however, need filters which stop most of the visible light, allowing only the ultra-violet or near-ultra-violet to get through. These filters must be heat-resisting. They are of two general types, red-purple and theatre blue. The former passes almost no visible light; the latter passes some and is used where the utmost brilliance and efficiency is desired. Where these lamps must be placed in view of the audience the light source can be observed, and while the light is in no way harmful, this is often thought objectionable, especially when the blue filter source is visible. In such cases spill rings or circular louvers are placed over the units, so the light cannot be seen.

Light Source Application

Light sources should be pointed, whenever possible, directly at the surface to be covered. Projector flood lamps will cause fluorescence at substantial distances; and at a distance of 40 feet or more, such a lamp will give an even spread over a 30-foot area. Where wider areas are to be covered, two or more lamps are located on 12 to 15-foot centers. Their beams are widened where necessary (as at the bottom surface of a wall) by use of special aluminum deflector plates. Other accessories—roundels and roundel filters, for example—are extensively available.

In general, it may safely be said that the use of "black light" will greatly increase as we come to think of it more and more in terms of illumination and atmosphere.

[The author is manager of the Keese Engineering Company, Hollywood, which has been a pioneer in the application of near-ultra-violet light to interior decoration, with designs and lighting installations including those of the Academy and Hawaii theatres in Los Angeles, the Tower in Fresno, and a number of restaurants. Mr. Shannon is the inventor of several special types of lamps for the use of mercury light sources in "black light" decorative treatments.]

ON FLUORESCENT AND OTHER G-E MAZDA LAMPS OF IMPORTANCE TO THEATRES

G-E MAZDA Fluorescent lamps are recommended for use only with equipment providing good power factor. The lamp to the left in the above photo is the T-8 size which is 1" in diameter . . . the other is a T-12 size which is 1½" in diameter.

G-E MAZDA Projector lamps (left) combine reflector, lens and 150 watt filament in one sealed-in unit. G-E MAZDA Reflector lamps (right) are for indoor use. Both lamps come in Spot and Flood types.

EFFECTIVE March 1, 1940, General Electric announces new low prices on G-E MAZDA F (fluorescent) lamps. Greater demand for these lamps has brought increased production. The resulting manufacturing economies are passed on to customers in the form of new low prices. Now it will be possible for theatres to obtain higher intensities of fluorescent lighting at lower cost than ever before.

AROUND THE WORLD IN 6½ DAYS

EVERY 6½ DAYS National representatives calling on the theatres of America travel the equivalent of a journey around the world. Last year they traveled 1,400,000 miles . . . enough mileage to circle old Mother Earth 56 times.

So what?, you say. What if they did?

But look at it this way. National men travel in their own cars. They purchase their cars from their local dealers. They buy their gasoline, too, in their own communities—100,000 gallons of it. And they buy oil and tires and repairs, besides, and all of this locally.

When they need new suits or hats or shoes, they go across the street or around the corner or down town in their own locality. Likely enough, you see these National men and their families next to you in church on Sunday. Their homes are furnished by their neighboring furniture store, their local milkman brings their milk and Max, the barber down the street, trims their hair.

Good neighbors, good citizens, the men who serve you at National Theatre Supply Company make their homes, raise their families, pay their taxes and spend their pay checks right in their local communities . . . their home place.

Every day of the year these National representatives contribute to the progress and the well-being of the communities in which they live.

SEATING the auditorium

". . . no theatre can be better than its seating."

Modern Type Chairs Help Solve Those Old Seating Problems

THEATRE SEATING is just as old as the theatre business, and older than motion pictures. Being so old in experience, theatre seating has become pretty much of an exact business, and there are few problems to which one has to search for an answer.

At one period in motion picture theatre development, I personally felt that theatre chair engineers were definitely behind the parade; however, if one has seen and experienced the sitting comfort of the new designs of the major chair companies, one must now admit that the chair engineers have regained their proper place in the parade of theatre comfort.

Seating problems are to be divided into three divisions:

A. New installations.
B. Reseating jobs.
C. Chair maintenance.

New installations involve fewer serious problems than either of the other two classifications. This is because the owner and the architect have designed the theatre to conform definitely to the specifications of good seating practice. There is little reason to spend much time on this subject other than to review what good seating practice really is.

Row Spacing

Back-to-back spacing of rows: I think 36 inches the most desirable; however, few operators feel that they can give up this amount of space. A good compromise is satisfactory. Assume a main floor of 30 rows of seats. Install the first eight rows at 32-inch back-to-back. (this is not bad because youngsters occupy the front rows mostly). Install the next twelve rows at 36 inches back to back (this takes in the choice section of the house and is the group of seats most used), and the remaining 10 rows at 34 inches back-to-back (this includes the group of seats that are second choice with the patrons).

Let's see now what floor space is used for seating. If all the seats were 36 inches back-to-back, 90 feet; whereas, with the above arrangement the same number of seats would go into 85 feet, 8 inches. With such an arrangement, one more row seats of the 36-inch group could be got comfortably into the 90-foot space. Such an arrangement, I am sure, would not bring forth any adverse comment from the patrons.

In the balcony the treads for seats should be 36 inches, and in this I do not recommend any compromise.

Staggered seating in the center (if there is one) section on the main floor is, I think, to be urgently recommended.

Reseating Considerations

Reseating jobs are usually difficult. The great percentage of reseating jobs call for a resizing and respacing of chairs so that the newly installed chairs will conform to the specifications of good seating. This sometimes involves the loss of quite a few seats; yet, it is surprising how few seats really have to be lost if sufficient study is given the plan.

The next problem that confronts one is that many of the holes for fastening the new seats come so close to those that had held the old seats that the actual fastening of the seats to the floor becomes difficult and unsatisfactory. In some instances this situation has been so bad that an air or electric drill has had to be used to cut the old holes larger and in the process undercut them so that a rich mixture of keen cement will take hold and bond into the holes. All this must be done before the new seats are installed.

Chair Maintenance

Chair maintenance is an everlasting job, and to be satisfactorily done, it must be a continuous, scheduled matter. An electric screw driver that can also be adapted for a socket wrench is certainly worth its cost in a large theatre in order to keep seats properly fastened to the floor (Black & Decker manufacture a grand screw driver that has proved very satisfactory for such work). With this tool a man can do more work in a given length of time, which means seats can be gone over more often.

Holding the seats securely to the floor is the number one maintenance problem, because when seats become loose from the floor, the stress and strain on the chair from persons sitting in it quickly loosen up the whole structure of the chair. When a chair becomes thoroughly loosened in all of its joints it is a long job to tighten it up again, and it just is not done properly. With a seat tight to the floor the remaining mechanical maintenance is held to an absolute minimum.

Permanent Anchoring

In fastening seats to a concrete floor, a bolt made by the Chicago Expansion Bolt Company has proved far superior to any other type of bolt that I know of. The size which I have most used is the ¼ x ¾ size. This type of bolt, if by any chance it comes loose in the hole, can be reset with a tool which is provided for this purpose. However, one of these bolts properly installed in the first place seldom loosens up. These bolts are not cheap, they may cost you as much as five cents apiece in small quantities: but they are worth it.

Informed Selection

Jumping back to new chairs: New types of springs, new paddings, including foamed latex ("rubber"), and new material for upholstering are all available in the new models of the leading manufacturers. All of these innovations have proved their merit in test installations.

This is certainly a comfort to the chair buyer. The theatre chair is a specialized piece of equipment for a special purpose, even though some may think a chair is a chair and that there can be no mystery about it, with any furniture company able to manufacture such equipment. Just try using some of the chairs made by manufacturers without experience. If you do, I hope that your experience will be less disastrous than mine was.

Leatherette with Tiny Apertures for Cushion Ventilation

A NOTABLE instance of how developments in products are influenced by the needs of a number of radically different fields, is the improvement during the past year or two in simulated leather, or leatherette. No so long ago, such material had definite limitations as fabric for even household furniture. It peeled too readily, crazed with almost any amount of flexing, was highly susceptible to injury in maintenance, and was available in only a restricted choice of finishes and fast colors. Today leatherette is available in qualities adapted not only to theatre seating, but the material actually employed for theatre seating, when the better grades are used, is equally capable of withstanding the hard usage encountered in bus travel. At the same time, leatherette is now available in fast colors almost without limit, and in a wide variety of beautiful antique finishes as well.

No Chance of This Upholstery Sticking to Her Dress—

PATRONS of your theatre won't complain about "sticking" to your seats because of tackiness of the upholstery material . . . not if you make sure they're upholstered in CAVALON! CAVALON is free from exudation of oils or softeners, and will not become tacky or sticky when subjected to elevated temperatures.

And there are some other mighty good reasons for specifying CAVALON when buying new equipment or reupholstering old seats! CAVALON resists general abrasive wear, edge wear, cracking and peeling—stands up under the severest treatment and assures you of long years of economical service! CAVALON is the result of years of Du Pont research, and is made by a special "case-hardening" process. The surface coating of CAVALON is processed with a patented chemical treatment that makes it outstandingly durable without affecting its pliability or texture! That's why BIG companies like American Seating use CAVALON on American Bodiform Chairs!

Buses and auditorium seating probably operated equally to bring about the development of the ventilated type of leatherette recently brought out by the U. S. Rubber Company. The material itself is identical with this manufacturer's Naugahyde, which has certain distinctions of fabrication, but belongs to the general class of leatherette characterized by the use of rubber and genuine leather in combination. In the manufacture of Naugahyde, ground leather is mixed with rubber to form a compound, with which the backing ultimately becomes an integral part, while tempering of the compound itself, rather than glazing, provides the surface finish.

In the ventilated type—which is available in all of the colors and "grains" of regular Naugahyde—the material is given tiny apertures, not by piercing, but by a patented process of parting the threads. There are approximately thirteen such apertures to the square inch, each about the size of a pin hole. The resilient character of the material, of course, results in practical invisibility of the apertures when the material is installed on a cushion, except in the case of extremely light colors. These pores are seared for the purpose of rendering them permanent (so that they will not close or enlarge).

The reason for introducing the apertures into the fabric is to provide means for the air within the cushion to escape when a person sits or leans upon it. This has several aspects. One effect considered is that with such outlet for air upon compression of the cushion, there would be no tendency of seams or attached edges to break. It has also been pointed out that the apertures effect self-ventilation of the cushion, reducing the accumulation of heat within the cushion itself. In this connection is cited tests which show ventilated Naugahyde to have about eight times the porosity for "air permeability" of unperforated fabrics.

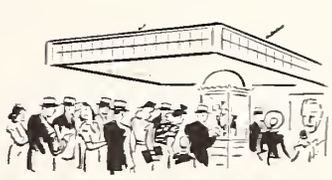
Designed by John Eberson, the Westfield is of Colonial architecture throughout and seats 550 on two floors. The seating, by Heywood-Wakefield, has special standards designed by the architect, with a pattern of Colonial theme executed in rust on a taupe ground. Both backs and seats are upholstered in corduroy, the backs in orange, the seats in rust. The back panel forms a rounded edge over the fabric. Chairs on the main floor have spring backs and extra-deep spring-edge seats; those in the loge section (mezzanine) have full-floating Marshall type spring backs and seats with special double-decker coil cushions. Box offices wake up with good air conditioning

TO STEP UP YOUR PROFITS

...TURN TO

Keep patrons coming back . . . by making them comfortable all year 'round!



Perhaps you've noticed it. Sometimes patrons come out of grand five-star shows yawning and slightly wilted. They seem annoyed—and they are. Is the entertainment always at fault? Of course not!

If patrons begin drooping out of your theatre, and your box-office sags in summer, what you need is a really good air conditioning system. Your theatre should be properly de-humidified—the air should be circulated without drafts—there should be no hot or cold spots.

There is a size and type of General Electric Air Conditioning equipment to meet your needs—to give your patrons the comfort they demand—whether your theatre's seating capacity is small, medium or large.

Install G-E Air Conditioning and watch how patrons relax and enjoy your shows—how they come back more often—bring friends with them.

Send for your copy of "Air Conditioning for Business." It answers many theatre air conditioning problems. Then talk with your local contractor or consulting engineer about a G-E installation.

Getting the Most Out of Your Air-Conditioning Plant

• Be sure the system design and the equipment are right; but to get what you pay for you must demand informed, conscientious supervision of operation

By J. T. KNIGHT, JR.

WITH YOUR consideration of the possible purchase of air-conditioning for one or more of your theatres, it is in my opinion important that some existing conditions be brought to your attention. For several years I have tried in every conceivable way to impress upon theatre owners, executives, managers, the seriousness of air-conditioning in theatres, with the object of having them more fully appreciate the investment.

It is true that you circuit operators did not employ your managers because of their ability as engineers, and it is equally true that you have no desire to convert them into engineers; but, I am sure, you do expect them to have an appreciation of the responsibilities that go with the custodianship of your property.

A Fair Example

For instance, let's assume that in one of your theatres you have an air-conditioning system consisting of compressors, evaporative condensers, cooling coils, blower, filters, dampers and automatic controls. Let's further assume a day in early spring or summer, or even early fall, where the temperature and humidity outside are quite comfortable, yet the conditions inside the theatre demand some cooling: Now if one has not yet filled the water tank of his evaporative condenser, then one electrically disconnects the evaporative condenser water pump by pulling the disconnect switch or the fuses, and operates the plant with the condensers operating as air-cooled condensers. This is just as bad as draining all the water out of one's car and then starting out for a four- or five-hour drive. No manager would think of doing such a thing.

Whether or not such operation results from an overemphasis on economy, in any case it is wrong and damaging to your equipment, and I assure you that the saving representing by not operating a 1½ or 3-horsepower pump will not be discernable in the electric power bill. Most frequently such things happens as the result of careless or thoughtless negligence. And they happen frequently.

The manager who does them is the one who will operate his plant with his filters removed because he does not want to spend the money for clean filters. By this practice he will collect dirt on his coils, which will gradually reduce the efficiency of the entire system, and if this occurs for prolonged periods, it is likely (depending upon the type of coils) to result in a situation that will be a real expense to correct.

As the efficiency of the plant declines, the manager may tamper with the controls so that he can throw all the compressors on the line to meet a certain condition, whereas with a well maintained plant, perhaps one compressor could do the job. Then what has happened to the "penny wise and pound foolish" idea of savings?

But worse than failure to effect savings is that such tampering with controls indicates a very definite lack of appreciation of control equipment. Because of this lack of appreciation of the delicacy of control equipment and its normal functions, the manager may leave the covers off the controls because, of course, he intends to come back and reset them (if he can) to their normal position. Other matters demand his attention, however, when the particular situation is past, and the controls remain open and collect dirt and dust, and finally, they demand the services of a control engineer because they have become inoperative altogether. Yes, I have even found wads of paper stuck into controls to keep them from performing their normal functions in the prescribed way.

Just one more instance: There are certain kinds of safety controls which operate by pressure generated in a gas filled bulb. This bulb is connected to the actual control element by a copper tube of, say, ⅛-inch diameter. As the bulb heats up the gas, it exerts a pressure through this small capillary tube to a pressure bellows, which makes or breaks an electrical contact which puts that particular control into operation. That little tube is always exposed, and any person knowing that it once was connected, should realize that if it is broken, something is out of order. Yet, there are those who, to save a couple of dollars repair charge, are operating their systems without any high pressure cut-outs, in which case, I really do not need to tell you, the chances are excellent for something to happen which would cause not only major repair expenses, but perhaps precipitate a serious situation with the local or state authorities.

What Causes Trouble

I could continue at great length to relate to you the conditions that are found in some theatres, but I only want to impress upon you that in the buying of air-conditioning you have not finally, nor fully, solved your problem, and that you have the right as owner to expect intelligent supervision of the valuable and fine equipment which you have installed.

Return for a moment to air-conditioning troubles. Plant troubles can be confined to two classifications:

1. Apparent troubles
2. Emergencies

Under the first heading the usual complaints are: (a) house conditions not comfortable; (b) compressors not operating; (c) compressors operating but not handling the load.

Under the second heading the major emergencies are: (a) leaks in refrigerant lines, coils or valves; (b) burned out electrical apparatus; (c) broken or worn out mechanical parts.

Emergencies should only be corrected by an experienced service man.

Apparent troubles are of a comparatively simple nature as a general rule and can be corrected quickly by the layman. A summary of the usual apparent troubles is given below.

When House Conditions Are Uncomfortable

Symptoms	Possible cause	Remedy
Therhumiter reading high.	System shut down.	Check and start system.
Air movement sluggish.	Dirty filters.	Replace with new ones or remove, clean and replace until new ones arrive.
Unpleasant odor.	Fresh air damper closed.	Check fresh air damper and if disconnected from motor reset in ¾ open position and report to service man.
Temperature inside rising.	Compressors running.	Note suction and discharge gauge pressures and temperatures and call service man.

Starting and Stopping

The method of starting and stopping the plant operation, during the summer cooling season, has been simplified to the process of pushing one button to start the conditioning unit fan. On combination cooling and heating installations the seasonal switch must be set to the proper position—namely, summer—during the months requiring cooling; and winter during the months requiring heating.

After the conditioning unit fan is started, the attendant should remain in the engine room until the compressors start operating, and he should make certain that the condensers start first, and after the compressors are operating for ten or fifteen minutes the pressure gauges should register within the marked range of normal operation. The equipment is electrically interlocked, as previously explained, so the conditioner fan must start first, the condenser fan and pump next, and the compressors last, and at no time should a compressor be allowed to operate unless the corresponding condenser is running.

During the winter time heating period, do not start the conditioner fan until the boiler has operated long enough to generate the proper steam pressure. This precaution will prevent loading up the house with cold outside air and also will prevent the freezing of water in the steam coils during freezing weather.

During the summer time cooling season,

The New Wall Type Anemostat Diffuser

SOME YEARS ago a type of diffusing ceiling air outlet was introduced into this country. The particular principles involved had been developed in Europe, and practical usage over there had ironed out all the kinks until, when we saw it over here, it was a thoroughly practical and efficient outlet. At that time it was "intriguing" in appearance even if to some it might have appeared clumsy. Since then, however, the Anemostat has been refined to such an extent that no one can think of it in any other terms than those of efficiency and beauty.

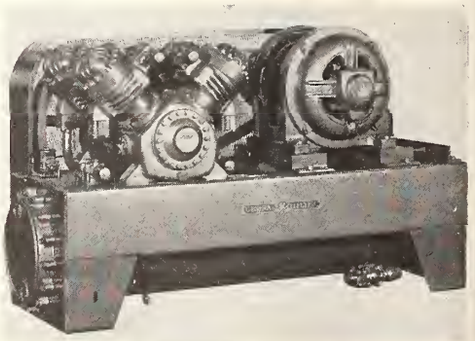
Most everyone has become familiar with the ceiling Anemostat in the smartest cocktail lounges, the best hotels and the most-up-to-date theatres. Engineers have specified it because of its efficiency; architects have used it because of its decorative beauty.

Now the Anemostat Corporation of America has announced a wall type Anemostat. The development of this wall type, which is designed along the same lines as the ceiling type, has really resulted from popular demand. There is no reason whatever to question the manufacturers' claims for the new Type "W" Anemostat because of the well known performance of the ceiling type, and also the performance of the wall type where it has been used.

Flexibility in Setup Of Cooling Plant

IN EVALUATING load and operating conditions when laying out a theatre air-conditioning system and deciding on the equipment best fitted to meet both known and possible requirements, it is curious how different engineers will approach the problem in different ways. Many good application engineers, for example, will connect up compressors of different capacity, while I don't like that at all. I have done it only twice.

I don't like more than three compressors on a job because more than that complicates the piping to some extent, and with every pipe connection there is a chance of leak. But even so, if I were to specifiy for a 150-ton job, instead of one 100-ton and one 50-ton compressor, I would select three 50-ton units. Following are my reasons:



1. My chances are about three-to-two that in case of a shutdown, I can hold conditions in the house with 100 horsepower on the line.

2. Parts for three compressors of the same size are interchangeable.

3. With a step-controller, I can rotate the order in which my machines come on the line so that in a season of 300 operating hours, each of my 50's will have operated approximately 200 hours.

4. The lifetime wear on my compressors is more uniform, therefore their efficiency more nearly matches.

5. My piping and valving is simpler, especially my partial unloading by-pass valve, because with three 50's, each having a 50%, or two-step by-pass, I can balance my load to within one-sixth of my total capacity.

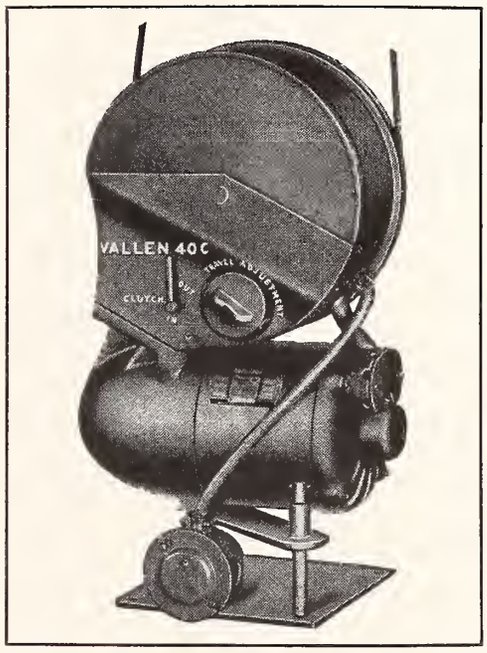
In the March issue the self-contained unit and central-plant refrigeration equipment manufactured by General Electric were discussed. The refrigeration machine shown above is basically representative of the line, which includes 15 basic types. All refrigeration machines employ Freon condenser units and are available in capacities up to 50 tons. Shown above is a 50-ton machine.

Be Sure of Smooth Curtain Action Always

• Embarrassing moments when the screen traveller jerks and stops. A shabby performance when it creaks, when cues are slow. You don't have to put up with it, no matter what size your theatre

By J. J. SEFING

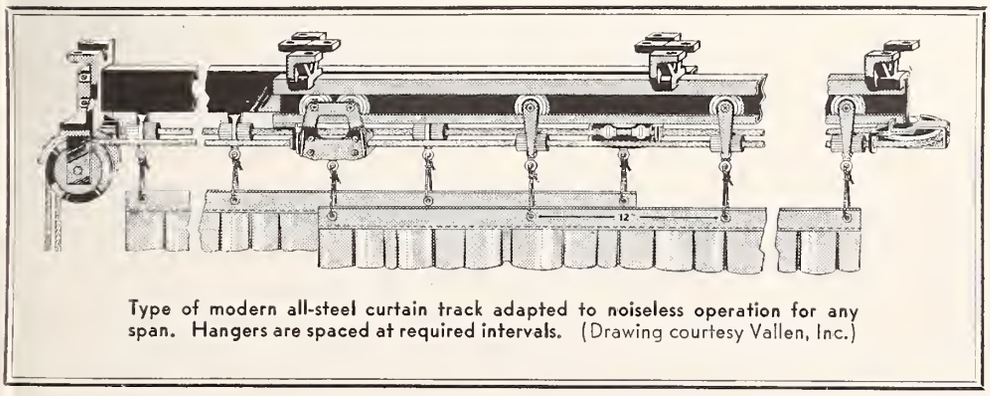
NOTHING GIVES a theatre a shabby character, or makes a performance appear amateurishly presented, more than noisy, jerky curtain action on the stage. The theatregoing public no longer fails to note the noises, general creakiness, and the occasional mishaps that occur with poor stage equipment. On the other hand, patrons expect prompt smooth curtain action in motion picture theatres that are not mere "shooting galleries." A curtain that provides swift and silent movement improves any show.



Some theatres have the most up-to-date projection equipment, chairs, carpets and decorations, yet have an obsolete wooden track, or the wrong type of track. How many times on "opening night" does the stage curtain start to open in an uneven, halting manner, then stop entirely, halfway opened. When this happens the audience begins to whisper, and the roguish-minded even openly enjoy the embarrassment of the frantic theatre owner.

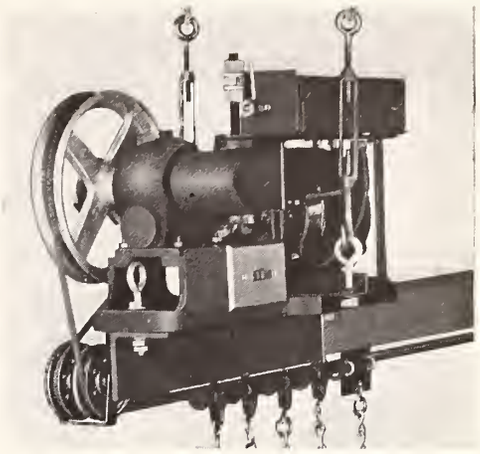
Track Requirements

To make every picture program a show of velvet smoothness, careful consideration should be given even such items as curtain track and control. The problem is to select the equipment to fit the work it is to do.



For average curtains up to about 40 feet wide, a light all-steel curtain track should be used. This track sells at such a low price that there is no need of using an obsolete wooden track that is noisy, that warps and gives constant trouble. The track is constructed of rugged cold-drawn steel channels with carriers of roller-bearing single-wheel type having rubber composition for elimination of noise. The supporting hangers of malleable iron have holes drilled for anchorage to wall or for suspension from ceiling. These hangers are of the sliding type and are adjustable. It has oil-less operating sheaves and carriers. The carriers "swivel" to allow the curtain to fold freely and without twisting.

A quick and easy installation can be effected with this track which will give indefinite trouble-free operation; however, strong and rigid fasteners should be provided at the ceiling to prevent swaying.



Modern type control for automatic operation.

Ample space should be allowed for the curtain to bunch properly at the end of the travel. When ordering the track, at least 18 inches should be allowed for over-lap at the center of the stage of the curtain, and at least 24 inches beyond the proscenium arch at each side.

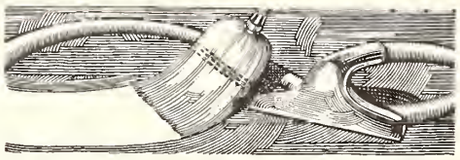
Automatic electric control of curtain operation is of course advisable today. The old hand-operated curtain makes for crudity and uncertainty. Smooth, swift action is practically impossible, and cues are not sharply responded to. The controls on the market today operate at speeds 90, 115, 125 and 225 feet per minute. For curtains up to 40 feet in width, any one of these control speeds can be used up to 125 feet per minute. A speed of 115 feet per minute is the average for the average curtain operation; one of 225 feet per minute is used exclusively for the larger stages, where heavy-duty high-speed, quick action electric braking are required.

Control Equipment

The 115-feet-per-minute control has a ¼- or ⅓-horsepower specially designed motor directly connected to the control mechanism. All moving parts are enclosed in oil-tight cast iron housing. The single drive sheave has a V-type friction groove, and in some cases is equipped with automatic safety disc clutch.



Two idler sheaves with separate tension springs are mounted on top of the control housing. Some motors on these controls have magnetically operated and mechanical limit switches inside of the control mechanism. The device that limits curtain travel is part of the gear unit. This control is operated by one push station for start, stop or reverse of curtain, and of course the control station can be in the projection room or on the stage, or both, as well as any other location not accessible to the public.

To install the control, a suitable location should be chosen and the common cart cast-iron bed plate be securely lagged to the floor or wall. To "cable up" the control to the track, have curtains entirely open or fully closed. Place cable around the single drive sheave and then through the two idler sheaves on top of the control; pull cable taut and fasten the ends securely with a cable clamp about 5 inches above the

Maintaining Retiring Rooms So as to Maintain Good Will

• Beginning a discussion of lounge and toilet areas—the fourth of a series of articles on theatre care for cleanliness and economy

By S. BRAVERMAN

"EVEN YOUR best friend won't tell you," say the advertisements of halitosis. Similarly, all too often the theatre owner and manager are not personally close enough to the public to know what is said "behind their backs."

When one goes into the retiring rooms of a theatre, especially the toilet, and finds everything spic and span, with supplies neatly available, strong odors absent, one immediately has an impression to the effect that here is theatre management that knows its business, is on its toes, has pride in itself and appreciation of the patronage of its community. Of all the public parts of a theatre, the retiring rooms are of course the "headache" of maintenance; but of all the public parts of a theatre, this is the very one which, if not constantly and effectively looked after, can cancel out much of the appeal of splendid architecture and handsome interior treatment.

Directional Signs

To consider this retiring-room area in order, we should begin at the foyer or standee space from which it is entered. Directional signs should be immediately visible without being hunted for; they should be clean and fresh-looking—if they have begun to look shabby, they should be renovated or replaced so that they always suggest refinement and neatness.

It may be well to point out here that in recent years theatre has been some tendency to make such directional signs "subtle"—a feminine silhouette. or a figure of a man smoking. When such figures are left to tell the whole story, their use is questionable, for directional signs should guide the patron accurately at a glance. Devices of this kind should be use ornamentally, not as a substitute for words. And the word for the men's room emphatically is not "Gents." It is "Men" or, preferably, "Gentlemen," just as it is "Ladies" for the women's lounge.

Particularly when the lounge-toilet areas are off a foyer that is more or less standee space as well, and therefore approached in dim light, the doors leading into them are often shabby. People are inclined to ignore push plates, and the doors become finger-marked; also, decorative elements wear off.

Care of the Floors

In some of the older theatres, especially the small houses, linoleum is used in the lounges or anterooms leading into the toilet rooms. This is of course to be mopped.

Similarly, carpeting is vacuumed daily. But carpeting in lounges needs more special attention than elsewhere (except possibly right at the foyer entrance doors), since in lounges it is subjected to cigarette burns and even stains from falling flakes of lipstick. Stains can often be removed with a suitable fabric cleaner, such as Carbona (some stains are soluble in water). Noticeable burns are to be "spotted" with dye—but except when the theatre has a porter or manager or maintenance engineer who is familiar with such matters, this should be done by a competent carpet dealer or carpet cleaning firm.

The best way to keep cigarette and match burns at a minimum is to provide plenty of sand urns and ash trays at the entrances to the lounges, and in them. Which reminds me that I have noticed cuspidors—yes, the good old-fashioned spittoon—in men's retiring rooms. Unless placed there as ballyhoo for the current attraction like "Virginia City," they just don't belong in a theatre today.

Furniture Care and Blocking

The care of furniture of the kinds used in lounges, was dealt with in connection with foyer cleaning in the February issue. It should be inspected daily for tears and bad scratches, severe soil and stain, and for gum and candy, which should be rectified with mending, polishing, cleansing with fabric cleaner, gum remover, etc., as necessary. Soft fabrics should of course be vacuumed daily, and leatherette wiped off.

As previously pointed out, soft fabrics can be substantially restored to original beauty (except when badly worn or faded) by complete shampooing with a suitable dry type cleaner, such as Carbona Soapless Lather (see February issue).

Another point concerning lounge furniture is that it is a good plan to contrive some means of blocking it so that it cannot be pushed against the wall. One way of preventing wall scars from this source is to attach a narrow block of wood (a piece of furring strip will do) to the legs of the chairs and settees that stand along the walls. If the furniture is metal, the wood block can be attached with a wire or screw clamp (a tin band will also serve). With wood furniture, still another method is to screw in rubber-tipped door guards (the slender metal ones are preferable from an appearance point of view).

A toilet room in the new Westwood theatre in Cincinnati (which is pictured and described elsewhere in this issue).

Wall and Fixture Cleaning

Care of the walls depends upon the finish. Painted (but not calcimined) walls can be washed down with a weak solution of neutral soap and water. If the walls are papered, they can be washed with clear water if the paper ls the washable kind; otherwise it should be cleaned, as necessary, with gum-eraser type wall paper cleaner (which makes a messy job) or with soapless lather. For spot cleaning of wall paper (to remove small patches of soil or stain), carbon tetrachloride may be used; it should be dobbed on gently, allowed to soak in, then blotted and finally rubbed lightly with a clean soft cloth.

As to lighting fixtures, they are of course to be dusted and wiped out daily, and washed as necessary to keep them immaculate. They were dealt with in the February issue, but it may be well to point out here that lighting fixtures in lounges are usually at a far smaller distance from patrons than those in foyers and auditoriums, therefore fly specks, particles in bowls, etc., are more readily visible.

So much for the lounges themselves. From here we enter the toilet room, discussion of which will be begun in the May issue.

THE QUESTION OF "HOW TO HAVE HIGH INTENSITY PROJECTION AT LOW COST" HAS NOW BEEN ANSWERED BY

Simplex HIGH

PROJECTION ARC LAMP AND ASSOCIATED RECTIFIER EQUIPMENT

A low cost, high intensity, direct current projection arc of intermediate capacity designed especially for theatres of up to 800 seats and using screens as large as 18 feet in width, heretofore restricted to the use of low intensity lamps, with their dim yellow light, because the operating, if not the original cost of the earlier high intensities has been prohibitive.

Although the Simplex High projects twice as much light as the low intensity the over-all operating costs are only slightly higher, because this new arc operates at only 27 volts as compared to 55 volts in the low intensity, and each 14-inch 7 m.m. suprex positive carbon burns for at least two hours.

This Simplex High projects the snow white light characteristic of the high intensity arc which is so necessary to the projection of colored pictures.

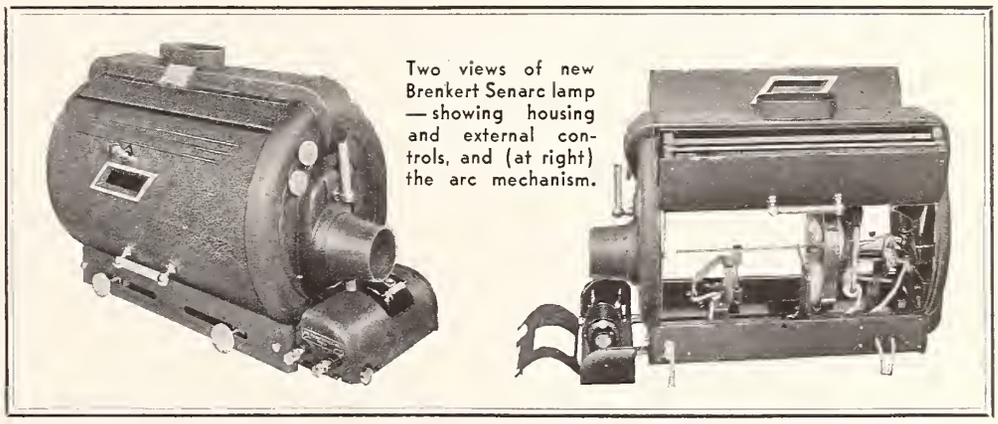
PROJECTION SOUND REPRODUCTION THE SCREEN

EMERGENCY CUE MARKS—SAFELY

IT would be easier to maintain the position that the marking of changeover cues on prints is never to be resorted to by the projectionist if all prints had standard cues that were plainly visible on the screen from the projection room. Unfortunately, however, the film distributors are occasionally remiss in this respect. It must be admitted, too, that in the older prints, which have been spliced many a time, footage containing the standard cues is wont to be eliminated.

Recognizing that practical projection requires some compromise between what-should-be and what-is, one sees that there are occasions when the projectionist is warranted in affixing to the film his own cue marks. The rule in such "emergencies" should be: Make your cue mark, since you must, but do not mutilate the print. Such marks also should be of a kind not readily discernible to the audience as cues, yet easily visible to the projectionist who is watching for them.

A method apparently adapted to such situations is offered by Paul Beck, Effingham, Ill., who, noting in F. H. Richardson's columns that the Academy's Research Council is seeking suggestions for preview cue-markings, writes:



"May I suggest a very simple method which does not one particle of damage to the film, will not rub off, can be located where it will be visible, and can be removed—or its location changed—with almost no trouble at all."

Mr. Beck's method consists in making a round mark on the frame or frames to be cued, with opaque paint used by artists (Chinese white), obtainable at drug or artist supply stores. By adjusting the amount of water used, it can be worked into a thick paint, which dries quickly. Application is by means of a small water color brush, and on the celluloid, not the emulsion, side. On the screen this mark appears only as a dark dot. To remove, one merely moistens the substance and wipes it off.

Such a scheme may not be what the Research Council is after, but it is one which can safely supply cue marks when they are missing, and for cueing short subjects as well. Its very lack of permanence is its recommendation: it does not mutilate the film. And film mutilation must stop.

New Intermediate Type D.C. Lamp with Dual Arc Control

A NEW LAMP representing further development in the field of low-power, direct-current light sources for the small theatre and employing the new so-called "1-kilowatt" negative carbon, has been brought out by the Brenkert Light Projection Company of Detroit. Featuring a choice of carbon trims, and with a rated operating cost, for current and carbons combined, of from 11 to 16 cents per hour (depending upon local conditions, it is pointed out) the new lamp, called the Brenkert Senarc, is intended to produce the white light of high-intensity arcs at a screen intensity of approximately 10 foot-candles.

Two views of new Brenkert Senarc lamp — showing housing and external controls, and (at right) the arc mechanism.

The necessity for light of a whiteness not obtainable from the older type low-intensity lamps, has of course been increased both by the growth of colored pictures and by the newer artistry employed in black-and-white productions.

"The new Brenkert lamp," stated Karl Brenkert, head of the company in announcing the new lamp, "is designed to enable the smallest theatre to project colored prints with true and natural tones of color not obtainable with the yellower light of ordinary low-intensity sources and to bring out faithfully the careful shadings which are essential to the new beauty of modern black-and-white."

The "smaller theatre" for which the new lamp was specifically designed, is one of 800 seats or less, with screen widths up to 18 feet, and projection distances up to 100 feet from lens to screen. In such theatres, according to the manufacturer, the lamp will deliver 10 foot-candles with shutter running; this rating refers to the less efficient single-shutter type of projector mechanism, and an arc current of 40 amperes, representing an arc consumption of 1,150 watts.

Where seating capacities, screen sizes and projection distances are less than the maximum cited above, a new type of arc control permits operation with a smaller carbon trim, for the purpose of providing 10 foot-candles to a 14-foot screen, with an arc current of 30 amperes, equivalent to an arc power of 750 watts.

Carbon trims used, according to the adjustment of the arc control, are 6-mm. positive by 5-mm. negative, operating at 30 to 35 amperes; and 7-mm. positive by 6-mm. negative, operating at 40 amperes.

For maximum efficiency in current consumption, new power sources have been developed for use with the Senarc lamp. These are of two types—rectifier and motor-generator. The rectifier units utilize Tungar tubes. The motor-generators are of two kinds—the constant-voltage type requiring operation through a ballast resistor, and the double generator series type with which no ballast resistor is needed. These new power sources are rated, as to efficiency, at from 60% to 70%. For arc operation at 30 amperes, they draw very approximately 1,300 watts from the power line; arc operation at 40 watts, with the new power sources, involves a line drain of 1,960 watts.

Where the more efficient double-shutter type of projector is in use, the resulting saving of light will permit reduction of power line drain below the figures cited without sacrifice of the desired 10-foot candle illumination.

Cost of operation for current and carbons varies, of course, not only with the actual amount of current consumed to maintain the necessary screen brightness, but also naturally with the local power rate per kilowatt-hour. The makers draw the comparison with modern 45-65-ampere high-intensity light sources in terms of lumens of light, as against cost of operation, rating the new Senarc lamp at 3,300 lumens with 30-ampere illumination, and 4,300 lumens with 40-ampere illumination and an operating cost of 11-16c per hour; and the high intensity lamp at 5,000 to 6,200 lumens, with an operating cost of 22-32c per hour. In both cases the screen illumination is assumed to be 10 foot-candles (since the larger lamp must spread its light over a greater screen area), and in both cases the light is said to be of the same degree of whiteness.

Portable Flutter Indicator for Use in Theatres

MOST EXHIBITORS and projectionists remember the wavering quality of singers' voices and the harsh, raspy dialogue reproduced from the early sound equipment. Such unpleasant effects were usually caused by non-uniform motion of the film and were generally referred to as "wows" and "flutter." Variations in film speed as small as a few tenths of 1% were sufficient to product noticeable distortion.

While the problem of constant film speed, to a large extent, has been solved by research and improved design, it is still necessary of course to be on guard against maladjustments in modern equipment. Lack of attention to the delicate film scanning mechanisms may result in sound as unnatural as that produced by antiquated apparatus.

It is easy to detect flutter by ear, but it is difficult to detect slight changes in flutter content, or to reduce such effects, except by instrument. Flutter measuring devices are standard equipment in recording studios, but these instruments are designed for the laboratory and are not adaptable for use in theatres. A portable instrument has now been developed by the RCA Photophone service division, a compact self-contained unit requiring no external power supply.

Figure 1 shows the simplicity of the operating controls. The accuracy of this instrument is said to compare favorably with that of the more elaborate laboratory equipment. Since flutter is the result of variations in film speed, it appears as a frequency change. For example, if a film with a constant 3,000-cycle recording is run through a soundhead which produces flutter, the reproduced frequency will vary continuously between two limits, say, 2,970 cycles and 3,030 cycles. In the case of low-frequency flutter, or "wow," the variations from one limit to the other will occur at the rate of a few times a second. The instrument measures the magnitude of the frequency variations which occur when a constant frequency note is reproduced.

This is accomplished by a simple "Wheatstone Bridge" network with a sharply tuned circuit in one leg, as shown in Figure 2. Reactor L-3 and capacitors C-8, C-9, and C-10 are tuned to resonance at 3,000 cycles. When a note of exactly 3,000 cycles is fed to this network, the bridge circuit will be balanced, hence the meter (M-1) connected across the bridge will read zero; however, if the frequency of the note varies above or below 3,000 cycles, the bridge will become unbalanced and the meter will show a deflection. The greater the deviation in frequency, the more the bridge circuit will be unbalanced, hence the greater will be the meter reading.

In using the flutter indicator, the instrument is connected directly to the output of the system amplifier, and a specially recorded 3,000-cycle test film is run through the soundhead under test. If the soundhead contains flutter, the frequency variations which occur will register on the meter, which is calibrated to read directly in per cent flutter.

An input transformer with several taps is provided so the instrument can properly terminate the system amplifier used for the tests without the use of additional loading resistors. The input control, R-1, is used to control the amount of signal that is fed into the measuring circuits. The signal then goes through a 3,000-cycle band-pass filter (capacitors C-1, C-2, C-3, C-4, C-5, C-6, and C-7, and Reactors L-1 and L-2) before being applied to the bridge network. This filter removes any hum or harmonics which may have originated in the amplifier system. If these unwanted signals were not eliminated they would register falsely.

An attenuator pad (Resistors R-2, R-3 and R-4) may be cut in or out of the signal path by means of the "Range-Selector" switch. In this way, two ranges of sensitivity are provided, either 0-0.5% or 0-2.0%. The double-pole, double-throw "Read-Calibrate" switch connects the meter either to the input of the bridge or across the bridge so the same meter may be used for calibration and for flutter readings.

The variable capacitor, C-10, is provided in the tuned leg of the bridge circuit to shift slightly the frequency at which balance occurs to allow for small variations in the speed of different soundheads.

The chief advantage of the flutter indicator lies in the fact that it can be used as a guide in making adjustments while the soundhead is in motion. One can see at a glance whether or not adjustments are in the right direction.

Real Economy in Adopting Projection Carbon Combinations

& Other Articles . . . by F. H. RICHARDSON

FRANK MYERS of the purchasing department of Wometco Theatres, important Florida circuit operating about twenty theatres, writes, "We have followed your articles in BETTER THEATRES with much interest. We wish to express our appreciation for the fine service you are rendering theatre projectionists in their problems.

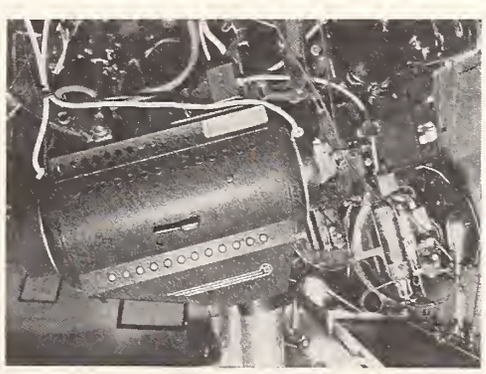
"At present six of our theatres are using low-intensity projector light sources, some taking current from rectifiers, others from generators. All use 10-mm. and 8-mm cored positive carbons, and 7-mm. and 8-mm. solid negatives. We have been advised by some of our projectionists and others to use 12-mm. cored positives, and 8-mm. cored negatives.

"As you know, the cost of these diameters would be higher than that of those we are using, and we ask your advice as to which would be the most economical for our service. The small difference in light is not of very great importance to us. We are advised that our power units have sufficient capacity to take care of these larger diameter carbons."

First, the correct carbon diameter is purely a matter of the number of amperes used. Now the National Carbon Company makes and sells carbons and naturally it has keen interest in having its carbons deliver the best results possible. Accordingly, it has a large staff of capable engineers constantly making experiments to determine what improvements can be made in carbon manufacture, carbon combinations, etc. For the d.c. reflector type, horizontal trim lamp, it has determined that a positive cored carbon should be used for all amperages, but that up to 20 amperes a solid negative is best; above that amperage the cored is deemed preferable. Their recommendation of combinations for such lamps is as follows:

Ten to 15 amperes, 9-mm. positive cored, 6.4-mm. negative solid; 16 to 20 amperes, 10-mm. positive cored, 7-mm. negative solid; 21 to 25 amperes, 12-mm. positive cored, 8-mm. negative, solid or cored; 26 to 30 amperes, 13-mm. cored, 9-mm. negative cored; 31 to 35 amperes, 14-mm. positive cored, 10-mm. negative cored.

While I appreciate the very proper desire of purchasing agents to secure maximum economy, here is a matter in which apparent economy may easily represent actual loss. It is well to remember that carbon represents the basis of projection light and that the light it serves to produce not only forms, but actually is, in its delicate shadings, the screen image theatre audiences pay their money to look at. The better the light, the more beautiful the screen image (the picture) will appear, and the more beautiful the picture appears on the screen, the more effective the entertainment, and that's what develops and maintains the motion picture public.



Is it wise to attempt to save a relatively small sum on carbons by departing from what would be most effective? I think not, hence must advise in any situation of this kind that regardless of differences in cost, the recommendations given above should be followed.

In the Bluebook of Projection carbon combinations are given for all light sources used in projection. The National Carbon Company also has published a booklet which supplies these combinations and much helpful information concerning projection carbons.

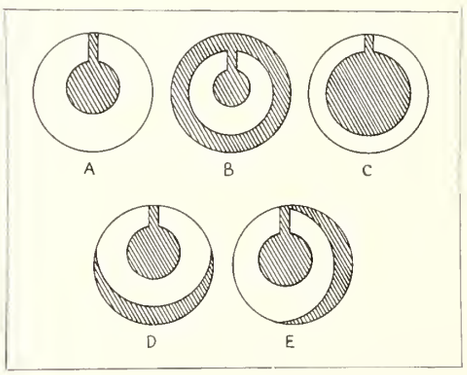
rotated by a wholly enclosed mechanism which, together with its housing, may be removed intact merely by loosening three screws.

The positive electric contact consists of two composition rollers 2 inches long by 1½ inches in diameter, the surfaces of which are machined into six alternate contact surfaces and grooves of equal width. This enables the air stream, described further along, to circulate through the contact to aid in keeping it cool. Contact pressure is supplied by a spring-controlled lever located immediately near the carbon, its handle far enough back to escape most of the arc heat. All pressure may be removed from the contact, and the whole assembly lifted out, merely by depressing this lever.

The condenser assembly is located wholly within the lamphouse, about 3 inches in back of its front wall. Both the lamp and condenser are adjustably mounted on the same supporting rods.



I noted also that an inch above and near the rear end of the lamphouse floor, a metallic chute extends up and forward, its upper end located immediately beneath the positive carbon contact. The lower end of this chute is bell-shaped, having an inlet area of 16 square inches. Its upper end is much smaller, and is curved so that it is level with, and close to, the contact. The result is that a stream of cool air flows over the positive contact constantly and, because of the grooves before mentioned, actually through it, which most certainly will aid largely in lowering operating temperature.

I believe this covers the important features of this new lamp, except to say the lamphouse is large, has a door upon each side, and that all things the projectionist must have ready access to, are conveniently located.

Exact Adjustment of Lamp Mirrors

I BELIEVE it may be fairly said that a goodly number of projectionists using reflector-type light sources fail to grasp the importance of exactly correct adjustment of the reflector with relation to the light source. Recently Heyer-Shultz, Inc., forwarded to me copies of a 31-page, paper covered booklet they have issued containing an illustrated description of a pinhole method they have devised by means of which the reflector may easily be exactly adjusted. It is entitled: "Getting the Most out of Your Precision Metallic Reflectors." Metallic mirrors are what this firm manufactures for use with projection light sources. The method set forth in the booklet is, however, applicable to both metallic and glass reflectors.

I immediately forwarded copies of the booklet to John Griffith, Ansonia, Conn., projectionist, to J. R. Prater, of Palouse, Wash., and to Richard Keuster, New York City, projectionist. Mr. Griffith, who has made a hobby of optics, replied that the method was practical and fundamentally sound. Friend Keuster answered that he would make the test just as quickly as he could get access to a few reflector type lamps. Mr. Prater made some tests to show the practical effect of mirror misplacement, which he demonstrates in the accompanying drawings. He writes, "The method for adjusting and aligning mirrors set forth in the booklet is really splendid. Unfortunately, I do not at the moment have access to light sources using the suprex trim. Just as soon as I can pay a visit to Spokane I will try it out with a suprex arc. I have tried it with low-intensity and enclose drawings showing results brought about by various slight maladjustments. I have also tried it in a theatre using Peerless low-intensity reflector lamps and an 8-inch diameter condensing lens.

"The results were much the same as the drawings show, though there was somewhat greater latitude in misplacement before shadows appeared for the reason that SRA trim was being used at 30 amperes, which overloaded the optical system to considerable extent. The drawings show results obtained by test on Strong low-intensity lamps, employing an 8-inch diameter reflector located at 23 inches working distance, carbon trim 8-mm. negative, 12-mm. positive, at 24 amperes.

"There is no visible change in color in the mirror image when the adjustments are changed, but there was a very definite alteration in the distribution of light, as the drawings show.

"Figure A shows normal image when mirror adjustments are exactly correct; B shows what happens when the mirror adjustment is ⅛-inch too close to the light source; C, when it is ⅛-inch too far away; D shows what happens when the reflector is in correct focus with the light source, but out of line vertically; E illustrates the effect when the mirror is in focus with the light source, but out of line horizontally." two idler sheaves. Disengage clutch by turning clutch release knob or control; then operate control electrically until the cable clamp moves in a direction away from the idler sheaves. Finally, engage the clutch by turning clutch release knob counter-clockwise—curtains are then ready to be operated by the push station.

To adjust the control for proper curtain travel, move the two stopping fingers on the control clockwise for increase, and counter-clockwise for decrease. The curtain travel should be set a little less than the track travel required to prevent master trip from hitting at center or curtain carriers from jamming at the end. However, never adjust the clutch tension on the control; it is properly set at the factory for the control motor's capacity.

A very important item that is often overlooked is the operating cable for the curtain track and control. Each type of control must have its special cable for efficient operation. Cables should have high tensile strength, flexibility, small factor of expansion and contraction, and tight braiding.

For trouble-free operation, only steel or steel-centered cables should be used with electric automatic motor curtain controls. A handline used with a motor control will expand and contract with weather changes and under load; one day it will be too tight, on another day too loose on the sheaves. Installing an adjustable turnbuckle in the hand line will not entirely solve this trouble. However, the Vallen line includes a curtain control unit that is self-adjusting. This unit rests on the cable that operates the curtain and its weight maintains a constant tension that is able to "take-up" as much as 12 inches of cable slack.

[The author has made specifications for, and supervised the installation of, curtain tracks and control equipment in many theatres, as a staff engineer with both equipment dealers and architects. Mr. Sefing is a member of the Projection Practice Committee and also the Theatre Design Committee of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers.]

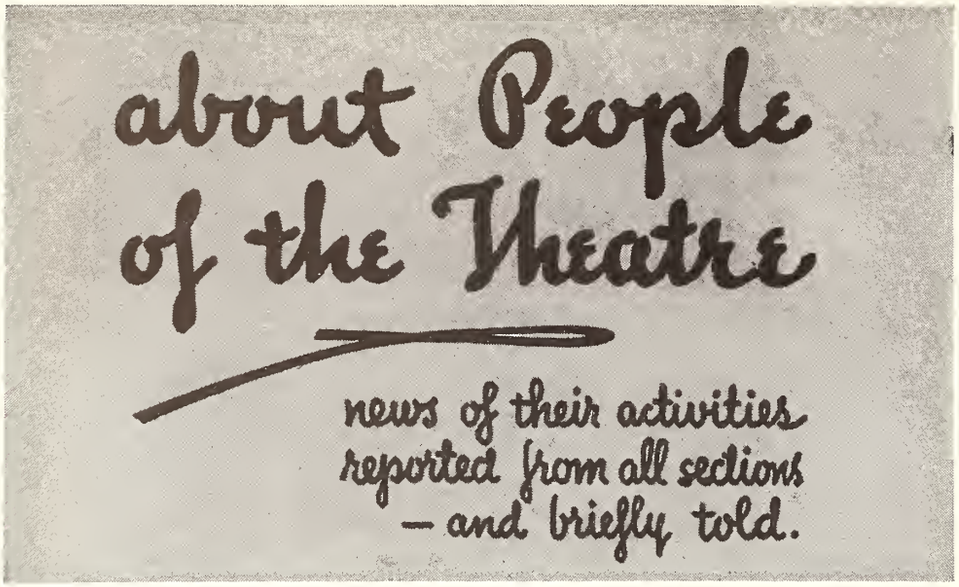
. . . . with the new Strong Utility High Intensity Arc Lamps. They give twice the light I had with my old low intensities at an increased combined current and carbon cost of less than 2¢ an hour."



"The densest black and white films fairly sparkle and I realize now that it's impossible to show colored films properly without the snow-white light of the high intensity."

The new Strong Utility High Intensity Arc Lamp was designed especially for moderate sized theatres, with screens up to 18 feet in width; where the vivid brilliancy of high intensity projection has been heretofore denied by prohibitive operating cost. Write today for descriptive folder.

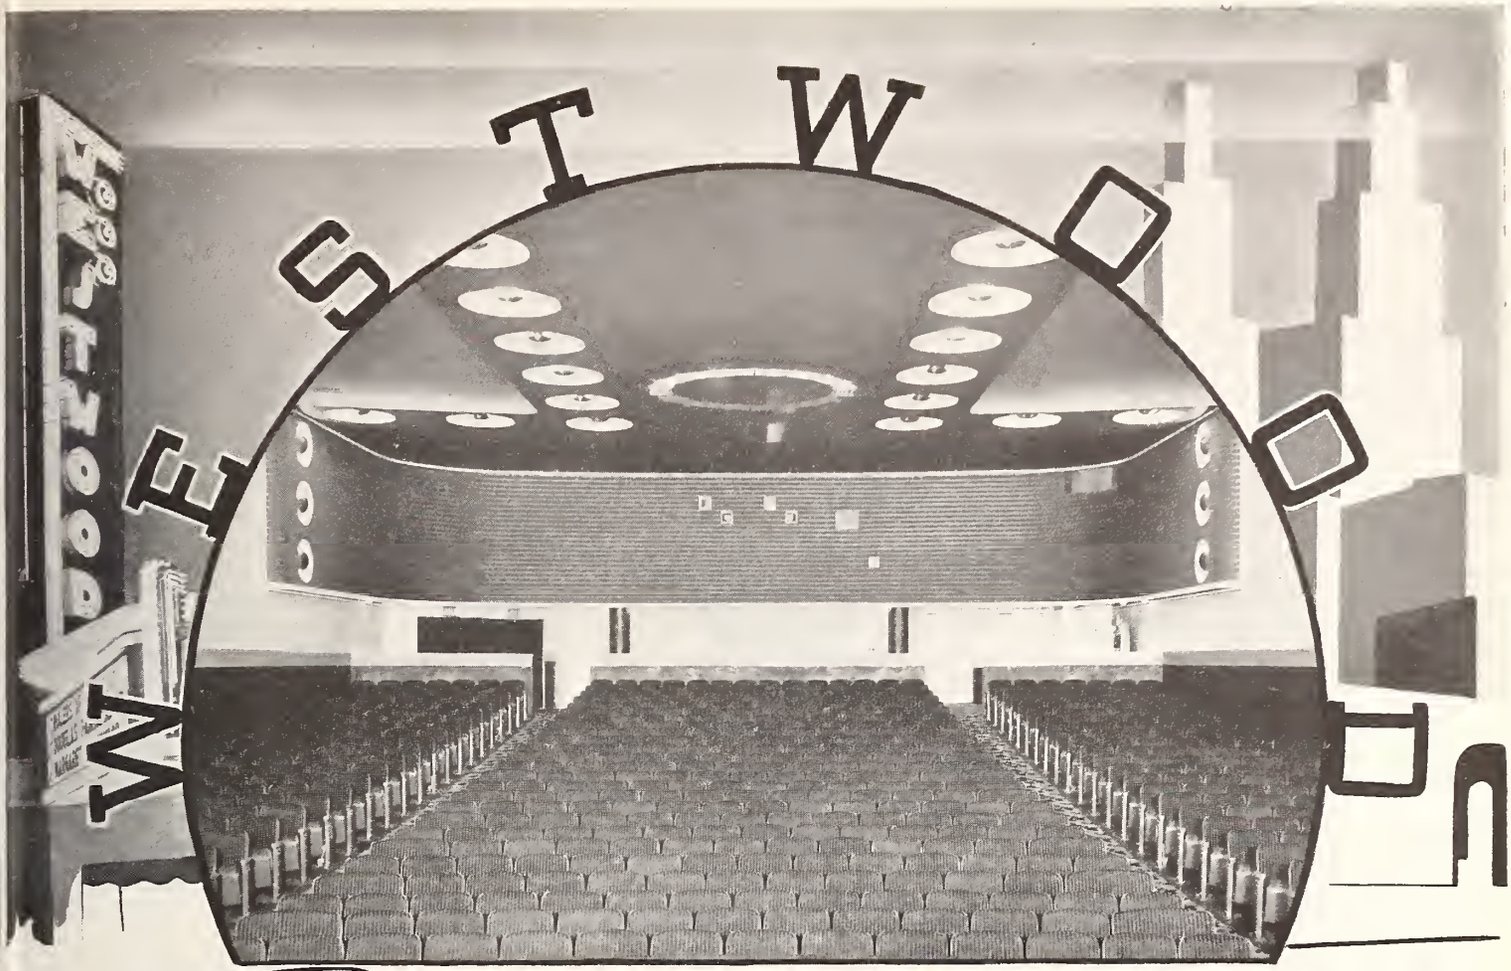
floor plan), with toilet rooms off one side. The floor is carpeted in blue with a cream and gold pattern, which is the carpet design used throughout the theatre. The wainscot is maroon plaster. Above this the walls are panelled in Naugalite, a simulated leather that is texturally identical with the Naugahyde used for theatre seating, but is of lighter weight. The color is off-white, with yellow veining. This treatment has been carried into the auditorium, where the Naugalite broadens into "streamlined" panels on the side walls.

In application, this leatherette has been "stretched" firmly over square wood frames, which have in turn been attached to furring by ¼-inch mouldings. Each square (except at the large auditorium panels) is decorated by a painted wood appliqué in a four-pointed star pattern.

The foyer ceiling is fitted with 15 flame-color bulls-eye ceiling lights, and its rearward extension, just inside the lobby doors, is further illuminated by two transverse lighting troughs.

Foyer furniture is of white maple, with upholstery in mohair in light moss green. Velour in Indian red drapes the entrance to the women's lounge.

Lounges



This lounge is carpeted with an extension of the auditorium carpet. Walls and ceiling are plaster. The ceiling and one wall are painted turquoise blue. Another wall is painted three shades of green in horizontal bands, fading from dark green at the bottom to pastel at the top. The remainder of the wall surface is done in deep apricot. Cosmetic tables are black glass and chromium. Chair and settee fabrics are mauve and green mohair on wheat-finished birch.

Distinction is further achieved in the women's toilet by painting the walls tan in one portion and deep burgandy in another, with tan ceiling above the burgandy walls and slate blue ceiling above the tan walls. Under this plaster scheme is a blue tile wainscot with peach-colored feature lines, a terrazzo floor in three colors, and marble stall partitions.

The men's lounge has a floor of patterned terrazzo, wainscot of wine-colored tile with yellow feature cap, canary yellow walls and a two-tone ceiling of canary yellow and brown. Furniture in the men's lounge is chrome and leather.

The Auditorium

With light leatherette wall panels as previously indicated, and blue, striped damask and red velour elsewhere, the auditorium is given a striking pattern by thirty indirect lighting fixtures set into a dark

■ Complete knowledge of theatre problem—Ability to create box office appeal—Use of only nationally advertised products and tested methods insures first-class lifetime buildings.

¶ Less than three years ago, the F & Y Building Service established its THEATRE DIVISION, in response to numerous demands for a complete theatre building service for motion picture exhibitors. ¶ The exhibitors wanted a service that gave guaranteed results, guaranteed prices, proper sight lines, acoustical treatment, glamour, and showmanship at prices they could afford to pay. ¶ Backed by almost a quarter of a century of knowledge and experience in designing and building glamorous buildings of substantial character, F & Y offered its "UNDIVIDED RESPSONSIBILITY, CENTRALIZED AUTHORITY" plan. ¶ The success of this plan is apparent to those affiliated with the film industry. ¶ "Friends tell friends." F & Y grows and grows. ¶ F & Y has performed and has under construction over 30 theatre jobs since the spring of 1937. ¶ No concern is any better than the satisfaction it provides each client. For almost a quarter of a century, F & Y has received tributes verbally and by repeat business from satisfied clients. They know what we mean when we say The Buildings we Build—Build our Business.

ceiling, by sweeping horizontal lines curving toward the proscenium, and a "cyclorama effect" sweeping across the upper portion of the rear walls. The walls emanating from the proscenium arch are covered in Indian red velour, trimmed with painted wood mouldings on 10-inch centers, as far as the Naugalite panels. The carved wood star-shaped appliqués have been omitted from the panels of the forward portion of this area, but on either side of the auditorium is a metal star of the same shape, measuring 9 feet tip-to-tip, lighted from behind. The rear wall above the Naugalite panels is covered with delft blue damask with woven brown and Indian red horizontal satin lines.

The ceiling has a central field of delft blue, while recessed side panels are bright, deep orange. Flush in the central panel are 12-foot circular air outlets incorporating light sources. These consist in plaques rimmed by grilles, with the plaques acting as baffles for neon lighting. Bordering the central panel are circular light wells 4 feet in diameter, each containing a 16-inch, three-tier brushed aluminum fixtures with six 7½-watt and one frosted 75-watt incandescent lamps, wired to give both bright and dim sets in three different color effects. These light wells are carried down each side wall toward the rear, tying walls and ceiling together in a unified pattern. Illumination in the standee area is by ceiling fixtures and by a trough concealed by the crown of the standee rail.

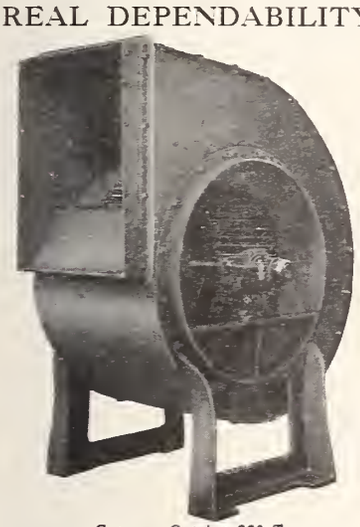
Masonry forms the basis of the standee partition, which at either side is finished in plaster and topped by a four-tier wood moulding, but has a center section heavily tufted in flesh-colored Naugahyde, under an upholstered bull-nosed top, which conceals the lighting trough. Neon tubing along this trough throw a rich illumination over the Naugahyde and the carpeted floor.

The proscenium is constructed as a series of lighting troughs, one of which illuminates the curved velour wall area to either side; another projects two lines of blue light on the orange field of the ceiling, while still another lights the screen curtain.

This curtain is of deep flame plush, angularly graded in color from the center bottom to the top outsides. It is hand painted in a design of bars, ellipses and "bubbles" in brilliant colors, with yellow and royal blue predominating; it was designed and made by the designers of the theatre.

Seating Plan



Seating is arranged in three banks, with two aisles, and with the floor slope employing the "reversed incline" principle (see longitudinal section). Further, seating in the middle bank is staggered, with the stagger effected by making the end chairs of alternate rows of extra width (see photograph of auditorium on page 12). Normal rows of the middle bank contain fourteen seats, alternate rows thirteen; the side banks have seven seats to the row. Normal chairs are 20 inches wide, while rows are spaced from 34 to 36 inches back-to-back. Backs are upholstered in blue mohair, seats in black simulated leather.

Projection; Air Supply

The projection room, located above the foyer area, measures 21 feet wide, 10 feet deep, 8½ feet high. It has a linoleum floor, olive green walls, and buff acoustic plaster ceiling. Lighting is by drop lamps.

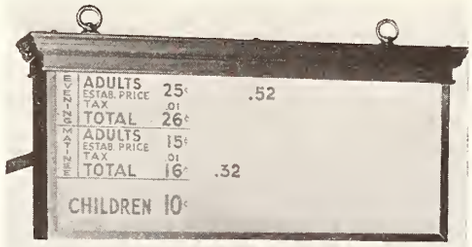
McQUAY COILS



TO use their own words, F & Y Building Service have been "faithful users and pluggers for McQuay Coils" and again have installed them in the Westwood Theatre. . . . It is easy to understand why. McQuay heating and cooling coils have long been accepted as standard in the theatre industry. The exclusive McQuay process of expanding tubes to form a permanent bond with the fins not only gives greater durability, but increases efficiency as well. Yet with all their advantages, McQuay Coils cost no more than ordinary products. McQuay engineers stand ready to work with your engineers or contractors on any heating or cooling problem. simultaneously with the walls, and fireproof slabs poured at several levels with sufficient strength and area to support blower fans, coils, refrigeration machinery, condensers and even the boiler. Distribution of air takes place through the steel bowstring trusses that support the roof, at the rate of 18,000 cubic feet per minute.

The system takes 10,000 cubic feet of air per minute from the outside, and 8,000 from high level auditorium exhaust. The system has an automatic control panel built by the Monitor Controller Company and equipped with Tork Telechron time clock, Ranco high-pressure cut-in and synchronizing controls, and Ranco thermostatic air switches. Transfer equipment consists in McQuay steam heating and four-circuit down blast dry expansion cooling coils. Other equipment includes a 16-section Hook automatic gas boiler; four 15-ton General Refrigeration Lipman compressors; a 60-ton moist-air remote condensing unit with a four-circuit, six-row counter flow McQuay condenser coil; three 21-inch Bishop & Babcock fans, and Garden City non-overloading fan. All machinery is mounted on Firestone vibration dampers.

The air conditioning installation was made by the Jacobs Company of Cincinnati, from designs elaborated by DeWitt H. Wyatt, consulting engineer, in collaboration with the F & Y Building Service.

THE BUYERS' INDEX

A CATALOG OF THEATRE EQUIPMENT, FURNISHINGS, OPERATING SUPPLIES AND ARCHITECTURAL MATERIALS, ALPHABETICALLY LISTING DEALERS BY STATES, AND MANUFACTURERS ACCORDING TO CLASSES OF PRODUCT

Territorial Dealers in Equipment and Furnishings

The Buyers' Index is divided into two sections, one listing territorial dealers of the United States by States and of Canada by Provinces, the other section listing manufacturers alphabetically by classes of product.

Territorial dealers which are commonly the immediate source of supply, are designated as dealers either in general theatre equipment and furnishings or in some specific kind of theatre supplies. Manufacturers listed are those catering to, and active in servicing, the theatre.

In referring to the various classes of product for the purpose of ascertaining names of manufacturers, it should be noted that a manufacturer listed in bold-face type has an advertisement in this issue which may give information desired concerning the classes of product being referred to. The page on which the advertisement appears is indicated in the listing. For the further convenience of readers referring to The Buyers' Index, a cross-reference index of advertisers appears on page 86.

ACCOUNTING SYSTEMS

TO MEET business record and accounting needs of the individual theatre, special systems have been developed, procurable for periods of one or two years.

In general, these systems provide for daily receipts and expense records, tax calculation, film service accounts, and insurance data. One system, covering a year, makes special provisions for all classes of taxes now affecting theatre operation, and emphasizes simplicity of form.

Some circuits have found it of bookkeeping convenience to maintain at the home office an account book of this kind for each individual theatre.

ACOUSTICAL PRODUCTS AND ENGINEERING

THE MANY considerations of function, appearance, site and cost entering into the designing of motion picture theatre auditoriums, normally rule out provision of good acoustical conditions through reliance exclusively on form; the use of materials somewhere (notably the rear wall) is practically always necessary. Such materials may be divided into two general groups: Those that are concealed, and those which have decorative qualities of their own. Acoustic treatment properly takes note of the entire range of available sound frequencies, hence the use of more than one type of material is sometimes advisable, since some are more efficient as absorbents of low frequencies than of the high frequencies, while others have contrary characteristics.

These materials are available in various forms and substances. Those most frequently used in motion picture theatre auditoriums are vegetable fiber and mineral tiles, rock wool and felt blanket, pressed wood veneers, and acoustic plaster (which latter may be tinted in mixing so as to eliminate painting). Ornamental fabrics are commonly applied over those materials which (like rock wool) are not decorative, but perforated tiles may also be used. Before painting any materials, the manufacturer, or competent acoustics engineers, should be consulted so as to make certain that the absorption efficiency be not too much reduced.

The decorative acoustic materials are also well adapted to the finishing of foyer and lounge areas that are immediately off the auditorium, where noise reduction may be importantly indicated.

AIR-CONDITIONING AND VENTILATING EQUIPMENT

THE EXTENSION of air-treatment facilities generally referred to as air-conditioning, to stores, restaurants, hotels and other classes of enclosures, has vastly increased public expectation of such facilities, particularly summer cooling, in most motion picture theatres. At the same time, this growth has resulted in technological and industrial developments making equipment for such purposes accessible in cost to theatres that formerly could not afford comparable apparatus. Additionally, such equipment today offers a variety of methods to choose from accordingly as specific financial, structural and climatic requirements dictate.

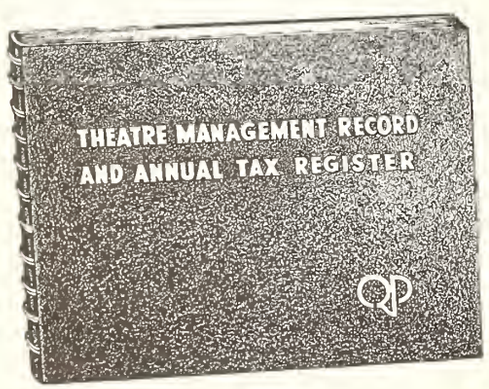
Properly, air-conditioning facilities must consist in means of controlling automatically the temperature and relative humidity of the air, and of distributing the air so that it reaches all breathing zones at a temperature, percentage of relative humidity, and rate of motion representing comfortable and healthful atmospheric conditions for normal people. Dust, pollen and other particles suspended in the fresh air should also be filtered out before it is introduced into the distribution system.

For summer air-conditioning, such facilities may be confined to the adjustment of temperature and relative humidity to meet comfort requirements during periods of warm weather, and may not necessarily include a heating plant and humidification provisions as integral parts of the air-conditioning system. All-year air-conditioning of course signifies equipment providing mechanical control of temperature and relative humidity of the distributed air no matter what the condition of the air may be outdoors.

For summer air-conditioning, some measure of mechanical refrigeration is usually indicated; however, in areas of low relative humidity, a cooling-tower evaporative system may be employed, while well water (rarely water from city mains) may be used as the cooling agent for coils over which the air is passed, if a sufficient quantity of water at a low enough temperature (maximum 55°) is available.

A method designed to reduce the mechanical refrigeration capacity that would otherwise be necessary, is that of storage refrigeration, by which a relatively small compressor is operated a large part of the day to "build up" the air-cooling agent to a quantity sufficient for the load during performance hours.

The self-contained units of the general type used in stores and similar spaces (filters, mechanical refrigeration plant and fan equipment housed in a cabinet) are adapted to the summer air-conditioning of small auditoriums and several units of suitable capacity can be combined to serve medium-sized auditoriums, though it is commonly found that the distribution requirements of the latter advise other methods.



Distribution systems for the air-conditioning of theatres practically always consist in ducts with fans of proper capacity, and outlets, or grilles, providing control of air motion. It is of the utmost importance for the efficient air-conditioning of a theatre that the distribution system be designed by engineers of superlative skill and conscientiousness, and preferably by engineers who have had experience with enclosures presenting structural and operating conditions similar to those of the motion picture theatre. Fans—those of the multi-blade ("squirrel-cage") type are regarded by engineers as usually preferable—must be of a capacity and design to move the required amount of air against the resistance of the duct system, with the least expenditure of electric current, and without transmission of noise to the auditorium and other rooms. Air outlets should be of a design to assure thorough mixing of cooled air with room air before it is allowed to descend to the breathing zone.

Filtering equipment, which is installed as part of an air-conditioning system but which usually needs to be replaced from time to time, is of various types. Some filters use spun-glass fibers, some steel wool, others paper, hogs' hair, wood shavings, etc. The filtering material is held in a frame which is inserted into the duct or intake. Filters of this type are thrown away and replaced with a new one as the accumulation of dirt requires. Also available, however, is a self-cleaning type of air-filtering device, but it is seldom adapted in price to theatre installation.

Efficient operation of an air-conditioning plant requires dependable automatic control specifically adapted to the operating characterists of the plant. Control equipment available ranges from a simple cut-in for a single compressor to a motor-operated monitoring cabinet inter-relating all operating elements of the system, including the heating plant.

Two accessory instruments of value in theatre operation should be cited here. One is the recording thermometer, which provides continuous temperature readings automatically transcribed on paper, thus permitting the development of a "log" for guidance in determining load requirements and other operating factors.

The other is an "Effective Temperature" thermometer (marketed under the trade name of "Therhumiter"), which ingeniously combines response to the temperature of the air, moisture in the air, and the motion of the air so as to give a direct reading of their relative and aggregate effect upon the comfort conditions of the air, which reading is that of "Effective Temperature"—that is, the true temperature from the point of view of comfort. It thus eliminates

AIR PURIFICATION: OZONE

OZONE is a specific, unstable form of oxygen which rapidly breaks down into the ordinary form, but in so doing produces oxidation (cold burning) of impurities in the air, especially those which are characterized by unpleasant odors, which for the most part are readily dispelled with oxidation. Ozone is also deadly to many forms of microbe life.

Ozone generators for theatres, which are of electrical discharge type, are available in various sizes, suited to lounges, toilet rooms or an entire theatre. Small units are inexpensive. Larger and more costly ones have blower and filter apparatus, while still others are designed for use in connection with ventilation systems.

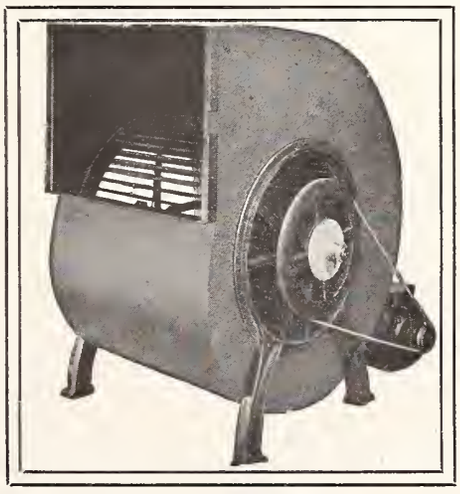
AMPLIFYING TUBES



THESE ARE electronic relays in the amplifier of a sound reproducing system by means of which the weak electric currents created by a photocell, phonopickup or microphone, operate to control a stronger current, moulding it to an exact, but more powerful duplicate of the original. This process is continued through a train of tubes until a duplicate of the original sound current is obtained, which is strong enough to operate the loudspeakers. (See Amplifiers.)

net) of electronic relays (see Amplifying Tubes) with suitable controls.

Amplifiers today contain their own power supplies, needing only connection with an a.c. or d.c. power line, and dispensing with all auxiliary batteries, generators or rectifiers; and in addition commonly supply polarizing voltage to photocells, and sometimes current to exciter lamps and loudspeaker fields. Modern pre-amplifiers and monitor amplifiers commonly draw this operating power from some other amplifying unit of the sound system.

Very small, low-power amplifiers may be mounted on the projector or on the wall of the projection room, deriving their operating power from the main amplifier. They provide preliminary amplification of the weak photocell current before it reaches the main amplifier.

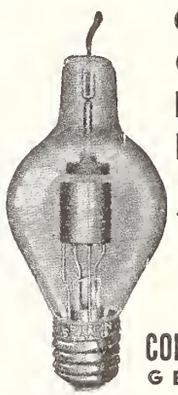
ARCHITECTURAL MATERIALS AND DESIGN SERVICE

PROGRESS in chemistry and in manufacturing technique have made available a wide variety of decorative materials to supplement or supplant the familiar marble, stone, brick, ceramic tiles, etc., to which facade architecture was formerly largely restricted. Glass and the plastics known as phenolics are now obtainable in a great variety of colors, and also in patterns. Even marble is available in thin translucent slabs, the grain and coloration of which may be enlivened by illumination from the rear.



Porcelain-enameled metal is now well adapted to the creation of colorful fronts; it may be obtained in plates for facing, or attached to concrete masonry blocks. Concrete blocks are also available with facing of architectural glass.

Architectural glass can be had in both facing tiles and structural blocks. The tiles offer a complete selection of colors and a number of patterns (some of them simulating marble). Glass blocks are also available in colors and patterns; they are not only adapted to the construction of architectural features like towers and window effects (admitting light, but assuring privacy), but also to interior partitions. Translucent, glass blocks lend themselves to interesting luminous treatments.

Pressed wood veneers are another contribution of modern industrial methods and are eminently adapted to theatre interiors. (See Acoustical Products and Engineering.)

Also available for friezes, medallions, etc., are plastic figures and bas-reliefs reproduced from authentic works of art.

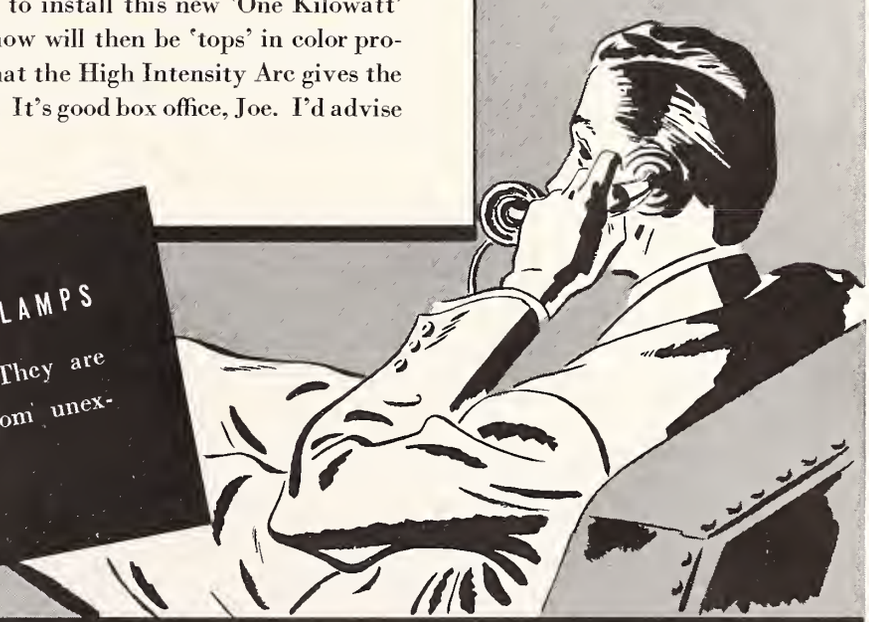
Listen In On This Conversation

"Listen, Joe, have you heard about those new 'One Kilowatt' High Intensity Arcs?

They are made to order for the small theatre—just what we have needed for a long time!

Now we can have the same high quality, snow-white screen illumination that the big fellows have at a price we can afford to pay.



Just think of it, Joe, only 'One Kilowatt' at the arc and High Intensity light to boot. That's real economy and something to shout about.

You can get them in both alternating and direct current types and they're really modern and up-to-date.

I am going to be one of the first to install this new 'One Kilowatt' High Intensity Arc because my show will then be 'tops' in color projection. Of course we both know that the High Intensity Arc gives the best projection of black and white. It's good box office, Joe. I'd advise you to do the same."

the lacquer-enamel will cover about 600 square feet.

The radiant energy required for "black light" effects is not the true ultraviolet used, for example, in the tubular fluorescent lamps developed for illumination purposes, but is near the visible blue portion of the spectrum.

Filament lamps give off some ultraviolet energy, but only sources of the higher wattages are really practicable, and their heat is such that their use should be limited to temporary application in which economy is a major consideration.

Mercury dicharge lamps are best for "black light" effects. The type of lamp most proper depends upon the nature of the application.

Ultraviolet sources usually give off some visible light also; the visible light should be screened out with plates, sleeves or roundels of some filtering glass such as nickel-cobalt.

Special types of lamp equipment for the application of "black light" sources are available in designs adapted to ceiling and wall decoration, and to fluorescent carpeting (see Carpeting).

BOX OFFICES

ISLAND BOX offices, as well as those built into one side of the vestibule or lobby, are commonly built "on the job" from specifications of the architect or other designer of the front and entrance area; however, box offices may be obtained ready for erection, in styles, colors and materials to harmonize with the vestibule or lobby treatment. Architectural glass, glass structural blocks (which may be interestingly illuminated from behind), porcelain-enamelled metal, and some of the phenolics (synthetic materials), are prominent among the materials used today, often with chromium or stainless steel mouldings, and these materials are procurable cut to specifications.

CARBONS, PROJECTION

MOTION PICTURE projection carbons are required for projection in most motion picture theatres (all except those using incandescent projection lamps). The type and size of carbons required depends upon the type of arc, and in this connection the reader is referred to the several articles in The Buyers' Index on projection lamps.

Providing flash and generous advertising space for a small town theatre. This is the new front treatment of the Rivoli theatre in Cedarsburg, Wis., owned and operated by Mark Morgan of Eskin Theatres, Inc., whose headquarters are in Milwaukee. The installation, by Ben B. Poblocki & Sons of Milwaukee, includes porcelain enamel finish throughout the entrance area, marquee and signs. The marquee consists in supporting structure and Adler silhouette type attraction boards accommodating 8-, 10- and 12-inch letters in three lines, or two lines of 16-inch letters. Name signs are 24-inch porcelain enameled flat letters with a double stroke of fluorescent green neon. The marquee soffit is stretched-leveled galvanealed sheet metal, painted, from which are suspended three strips of incandescent lamps. The letter panel spanning the entrance is used principally for coming attractions.

CARPETING

BEING THE most conspicuous single item in the furnishings of a theatre, carpeting contributes mightily to the success of the efforts made to create an environment suited to the function of the theatre, and its selection should be approached in accordance with that importance. Durability is of course a major consideration, but of comparable significance is its design. Dominant colors should have a direct relation to the influential tones of the general color scheme, possibly repeating some colors in the same or in stronger or paler shades, complementing others (secondary interior elements may well take their color cue from the carpeting). As important as the harmony of coloration with the whole interior treatment, is that of the pattern; in general, this should tend to be curvilinear or straight, complex or simple, "quiet" or "bold," frankly modernistic or conservatively modern (to cite a few possibilities) as the architectural style of the interior tends toward one or the other.

Other basic considerations in carpet selection are: (1) scale—size of figures and number of "repeats" should be neither too large nor too small for the area to be carpeted; (2) tone and intensity of the lighting; and (3) directionalism—adaptability of the pattern to lines of traffic (this is often of little or no importance, but in other instances a high degree of directionalism is advisable).

Theatres are frequently carpeted in a single pattern, but consideration should be given to the advisability of using another design, or a plain Broadloom, or the same design in a smaller scale, for areas like lounges, which differ greatly in size and function from foyers and standee areas.

Carpets considered suited to theatres are (to name them alphabetically) Axminste. Broadloom, Chenille (an expensive weave feasible only in rare instances in which a superior carpet of special shape is required), Patent-Back (a special type consisting in Broadloom sections cut in desired shapes and attached to a backing), Velvet and Wilton. The last two named are the weaves most widely used in theatres.

Carpeting which goes considerably beyond the usual function of carpeting is that in which are used dyes having a high degree of luminescence under near-ultraviolet light (see Black Light Materials and Lighting Equipment). All or part of the pattern may be so woven with luminescent yarns so as to glow, when properly lighted with invisible "black light." In aisles, fluorescent carpeting, as it is called, not only contributes to the visible decorative scheme during the performance, but provide an illuminated aisle without the use of aisle lights in chair standards. Additionally, fluorescent carpeting is well adapted to standee areas, and here the pattern may be given a directional effect, guiding traffic to the aisle heads, and also to lounges if the latter are immediately off this area. In weave and in maintenance, fluorescent carpeting does not differ from non-fluorescent carpeting adapted to theatres (see Black Light Materials and Lighting equipment).

CARPET LINING

THEATRE CARPETING should always be laid over pads made for the purpose. Such lining does not merely add to the resilience, therefore the feeling of luxury, of the carpeting; it definitely reduces the wear of the carpet, thus representing a substantial saving in carpeting costs.

There are three general types of carpeting lining: (1) All-jute, or vegetable fibre; (2) hair and jute combined; and (3) All-hair. The latter is made of animal hair, which will not burn (it will singe only), is very durable (a well made all-hair lining will usually outwear the carpeting itself), and does not deteriorate from the effect of moisture. The hair-and-jute type is serviceable according to the amount of hair in it, while the all-jute type is the least desirable in the theatre.

Also available is rubber composition carpet lining, and it has had some application in theatres.

CHAIR CUSHIONS OF FOAMED LATEX

CUSHIONS FOR auditorium chair seats and backs (or other chairs, settees, etc.) are obtainable in a porous material made from the milk of the rubber tree and referred to as foamed latex. Such cushions take the place of padding and springs, the fabric being fitted directly over them.

This material may be moulded to fit any chair dimensions or design formation. Except for hollow cores, the cushion appears solid, but actually has access to air throughout its structure (there are over a quarter of a million interconnecting air pores to the cubic inch), thus the cushion is completely self-ventilating. Foamed latex cushions are vermin-repellent.

For foyer and lounge furniture, foamed latex cushions are available in standard sizes calculated to fit nearly all chairs, settees, etc. They may be obtained through upholsterers or from jobbers.

CHAIRS, AUDITORIUM

THE MODERN auditorium chair, representing evolutionary processes extending over many years, guided by considerable research in posture and materials, is designed to provide maximum comfort, safety of person and clothing, and facility of passage between rows, with minimum maintenance cost. Additionally, standards and backs have been reshaped to emphasize the unity of each bank of chairs, so that the seating, as a whole, may noticeably contribute a flow of line and color to the general auditorium pattern. And all of these advantages have essentially been made available within an extremely broad price range.

Chairs may be obtained with seat cushions of box-spring or spring-edge type; or with no-sag springs, alone or in combination with coil springs (the no-sag springs absorbing the shock of initial tension imparted to the coils). The backs may of course be either of spring or padded type, and here it should be noted that the choice affects the row spacing, spring back cushions being substantially thicker than padded backs. Also available is a type of chair having a retracting, or push-back, seat, designed to facilitate passage between rows. While end standards may be obtained in special designs, regular models offer a wide choice of patterns, which may be readily executed in colors suggested by the color scheme of the auditorium.

Acoustic considerations (each chair should represent approximately the sound-absorbing qualities of clothing, so that the capacity factor affecting volume is fairly constant) demand a fully upholstered chair. The more recent trend has been toward the use of soft fabrics (mohair, velour, corduroy), which is often confined to the backs, leatherette being employed for the seats (except possibly the sides of the seat cushions).

To meet the higher standards of comfort applied today, 20 inches may be generally regarded as minimum for chair width. While widths of 24 inches have been used on occasion, it is probably true that widths of 21 or 22 inches provide better support for the average person and therefore are actually more comfortable for most people. CHANGE MAKERS

OCCUPYING little space in the box office, modern change making machines prevent annoying errors in offering change to a patron and loss to the theatre through mistakes. The correct change is automatically determined upon manipulation of the proper keys, and is delivered into a metal cup, from which it is easily scooped. Not only greater accuracy, but greater speed in handling a line of patrons make change-makers a box office requisite.

CHANGEOVERS

THESE electro-mechanical devices for switching in one projector, and its corresponding sound mechanism, while switching out the other, are obtainable in a number of models, including one with shutter type cut-off in front of the lens, as well as a dowser. All perform their synchronized operation at the touch of a button.

A changeover time indicator is available to supply a warning (bell) at any desirable time prior to changeover, without any connection with film or equipment, the device being essentially a clock with dial provisions for presetting the alarm according to cue.

CLEANING MATERIALS AND IMPLEMENTS

CLEANLINESS throughout the public areas of the theatre, and at the front exterior as well, is of course imperative at all times, and to reduce the time and labor cost of maintenance are many cleaning and sanitation aids (see also Cleaning Mechanisms, and Deodorants and Perfumes).

The list of such products is a long one; to be regarded as more or less essential for the convenient and effective maintenance of the theatre are a variety of brushes, including those adapted to the cleaning of corners, behind projecting structural elements, etc.; corn brooms, mops and mop pails with dryers (a rubber mop is also available with a squeezing device incorporated in the design); soft dusting and polishing rags, deck brushes for washing rubber mats, terrazzo, etc.; neutral soap and detergents, sweeping compound for floors beneath seating, wood and metal polish, carbon tetrachloride, and gum remover. So that patrons themselves may help to keep the theatre clean, sand urns for cigarette butts, gum wrappers, etc., should be judiciously distributed throughout the lobby, foyer, lounges and standee area.

In connection with cleaning compounds, care should be used to assure use of a compound which requires the least amount of time and will not injure the surface.

For the partial or complete cleaning of carpeting and other fabrics from time to time (that is, dry shampooing, as distinguished from daily vacuum cleaning), a soapless lather is available, which may easily be applied with a rubber mop or similar implement; drying requires but an hour or two. A powder is also obtainable for carpet and fabric cleaning; this is sprinkled on small areas at a time and brushed in, then after a few hours, when the fabric is entirely dry, the residue can be removed with a brush-type vacuum attachment.

For keeping sidewalks free of snow without manual removal, calcium chloride may be sprinkled over the sidewalk when the snow begins to fall. This is available under various trade names.

Safety ladders are also to be considered among cleaning as well as equipment servicing accessories (see Ladders, Safety).

CLEANING MECHANISMS

ECONOMICAL AND safe cleaning of theatre carpeting, drapes, seating fabrics, etc., require regular and frequent application of vacuum cleaning equipment. Carpeting, for example, should be vacuum-cleaned daily. Vacuum cleaners may be used for other cleaning jobs around the theatre, such as blowing dust from out-of-the-way places, drying wet floors and carpeting, and so on.

Theatres really require heavy-duty vacuum cleaning equipment. Ordinary domestic type cleaners are useful as auxiliary equipment, particularly in theatres not having a central system piped to all areas, but they have neither the endurance nor the suction demanded by theatre cleaning.

Of the heavy-duty equipment, two types may be regarded as specifically adapted to theatre work. One is the central system, with pipes leading to outlets so placed as to provide access at least to all public areas of the theatre. The other is a portable type, with power plant, suction mechanism and dirt disposal equipment on rollers, to which equipment the hose is attached. Portable models are available with motor and suction devices detachable, to be used as a hand unit. Theatres require a hose length on portable models of not less than 20 feet, and this may be provided in two sections, if desired, 10-foot lengths being connected by a brass coupling. Nozzles and brush attachments are available with both central and portable types for every kind of dry pick-up, and also for wet pick-up.

CONDENSERS (LENSES)

THE PROJECTION condenser is located between the lamp house and the projector, and serves to focus the light on the aperture. It serves a similar purpose in spotlight projection. The condenser is a single glass lens, unmounted, made in various shapes—moon shape, plano-convex, bi-convex and meniscus. The diameters of projection condensers range from 2¼ to 7¼ inches; of spotlight condensers, from 5 to 8 inches. Focal lengths for theatre work runs from 6½ to 9½ inches.

(These lenses should not be confused with electrical condensers, which are used in amplifiers and other portions of the sound equipment, and are not lenses, but pairs of conductors spaced by insulation and mounted in a suitable case.)

CUPS, SANITARY FOR DRINKING

INDIVIDUAL PAPER cups should be provided for patrons even though a bubbler fountain is installed. Some patrons much prefer cups for hygienic reasons. Mothers particularly often instruct their children to avoid bubblers (few people are acquainted with the existence of bubbler guards). Cup dispensers therefore should be located within reach of young children, and the cups should be of a shape (flat-bottomed as opposed to cone shape) easily held in small hands.

In many locations, penny dispensers of drinking cups will not be resented by patrons, and in such cases paper cups are a source of some small additional revenue.

CURTAIN CONTROL MACHINES

SMOOTH AND silent opening and closing of curtains are effected, either from backstage or from the projection room, by automatic machines that operate at the touch of a button. The curtain may be stopped at any point along the stage, or its motion reversed as desired.

The equipment consists of a motor, a track and a cable, as well as snaps to which the curtain is fastened. The motor may be placed in the grids, which makes it possible to fly the entire mechanism, curtain and all. Special models for small theatres are available at relatively low cost.

Also obtainable is a slack-rope takeup device designed to eliminate slackness of curtain ropes and cables, with attendant whipping and starting jerk.

CURTAINS AND STAGE DRAPES

CURTAINS USUALLY required for motion picture theatres in which stage performances are not regularly presented, are of the traveller type made up in such fabrics as velour. Asbestos fireproof proscenium-opening curtains are required in some States and all the larger cities in theatres having full stage facilities.

Drapes are commonly indicated for the sides, and across the top of the proscenium opening; the extent to which they are needed is of course dependent upon the design of the proscenium area. Velours are indicated for such drapes also, but rayon-cotton mixtures and similar fabrics are also suitable.

Companies capable of supplying these materials are also excellent sources of drapes for other parts of the theatre.

CUTOUT MACHINES

EXPLOITATION cutouts for lobby and marquee displays are easily made by tracing the desired pattern on wall board and then guiding a cutout machine along the pattern. A small electric motor driven by power from a lamp socket does the work, and by substitution of cutting edges the machine may be used as an ordinary saw to build the frame and supports for cutouts or any other display.

DEODORANTS AND PERFUMES

IN THEATRES not having facilities for contending with sources of disagreeable odors that cannot readily be eradicated, the use of perfumes especially prepared for such conditions is often indicated. Among products of this type available are liquid perfumes to be sprayed before and between performances; powders that may be placed in ornamental wall holders made of porous material; and also highly aromatic pellets, which are placed in a small receptacle that clasps on an incandescent lamp, the heat from the lamp evaporating the perfume oil in the pellet. All of these perfumes are obtainable in a wide variety of odors.

DIMMERS

THESE electro-mechanical devices for controlling stage and auditorium illumination permit fading out of any desired set of lights and fading in of others. They are necessary to the gradual changing of color tones in auditorium lighting, and to the production of stage lighting effects commonly desired; in addition, they are highly desirable for raising or lowering house lighting before and after performances.

Dimmers are available in a wide range of capacities and types, from small portable spotlight dimmers to multiple banks controlling a large number of circuits, interlocking and fitted with master controls.

DISPENSING EQUIPMENT FOR CONFECTIONERY

MANY THEATRES have found the sale of pop corn, candy and gum a worthwhile source of extra revenue, and as a result suitable equipment, as well as confectionery distribution organizations, have been developed with theatre requirements prominently in mind. Although the corn popping equipment adapted to theatres reduces odor to a minimum, it is nevertheless advisable to provide partially enclosed space off the vestibule, or outer lobby, for pop corn dispensing. Candy counters may be placed in a foyer if this division of the theatre is completely separated from the auditorium so that seated patrons will not be disturbed.

Models of pop corn equipment are available mounted on wheels, with storage as well as popping provisions, and attractive finish in chromium-plated metal and white porcelain metal.

Candy counters and cases are available in many styles and sizes—for dispensing from the rear or the front, complete showcases and cabinet-finish shelves, in relatively narrow vertical models and horizontal ones, to fit into almost any space that may be conveniently available.

EFFECT MACHINES

PATTERNS AND scenic effects with or without animation (such as moving clouds, flames, etc.) are ingeniously obtainable with these special light projection machines, essentially stereopticons, employing various types of effect slides and gelatines.

Backgrounds for stage shows, in color, can be projected and changed at pleasure, or the opening of a feature picture be framed in color or given a superimposed, changing pattern.

Simple and relatively inexpensive spotlights, with color wheel attachment, are also available in models for both short and long throws.

EXPLOITATION MECHANISMS

VARIOUS DEVICES are available for the presentation of scenes from a current attraction or special advertising stills or motion pictures in the vestibule or lobby of the theatre, or in stores and other locations for which suitable arrangements can be made. The simplest type provides for the automatic display of a series of stills or advertising cards.

More impressive is the showing of motion pictures by means of an automatic projector mounted for the rear projection of advance trailers or other advertising films on a small screen. Such equipment may be obtained either with or without sound reproduction facilities.

Posters can be quickly and conveniently made, often by persons of little or no training in poster art, with the aid of a poster projector, which enlarges exploitation material, such as that in press books and other accessories, on the poster sheet, in the original colors, and the image may be readily sketched or painted in.

FILM CABINETS

METAL FILM storage equipment is available in models ranging from cabinets on pedestals with fusible-link sprinkler protection and vent pipes, to single-reel holders which may be attached to each other as new holders are added, forming a unit. Available types also include cases of holders, making up units of from five to twelve single-reel compartments, each with its own door and variously designed to give convenient access to the reel wanted, and a high degree of protection from fire and heat.

Separate stands are obtainable for film storage cabinets, designed to hold from one to several cabinets.

FIRE EXTINGUISHERS

THERE ARE several types of fire extinguishers suitable to theatres—the carbon tetrachloride extinguisher, the soda-and-acid mechanism, the foam type and the portable carbon dioxide hand type. They should be distributed throughout the theatre in accordance with the directions of fire department officials, care being taken that any extinguisher likely to be used in the presence of electrical apparatus is safe for that purpose, and not capable of electrocuting the man who uses it.

FIRE PREVENTION DEVICES, PROJECTOR

THESE ARE automatic dowsers and film-cutters that cut off projection light from the film and also sever the film when any of several controls installed on the projector sets the device into operation. The actuating elements is usually a fusible link, which melts upon ignition of the film.

FIRE SHUTTERS, PROJECTION ROOM

FIREPROOF shutters for projection room ports isolate the projection room in an emergency (by melting of fusible links in case of fire), operating either automatically or manually. They minimize the chance of panic and lower insurance rates, and are practically always required in theatres by fire regulations.

A special switch is available for tripping the port shutters by electro-mechanical action, instead of by means of fusible links, and at the same time actuating an exhaust fan to draw the fumes into the projection room ventilation duct.

FLASHERS

THESE AUTOMATIC "switch" devices for interrupting intermittently the flow of current to light sources, supply attention-arresting animation to electrical displays that is commonly desirable for marquee decorative schemes and exterior signs, and especially so when the theatre front has to compete with electrical displays immediately surrounding it.

There are three principal types of flashers: drum type (which has been generally superseded by the following later types), mercury contact type (which was found to be especially effective for marquee and sign travelling borders), and the induction disc type, which is regarded as readily adaptable to any type of display.

FLOOR SURFACING MATERIALS, COMPOSITION

FLOOR SURFACING materials suited to lobbies, certain foyer areas (sometimes in conjunction with woven floor coverings), men's lounges (on occasion, also for borders in women's lounges, laid flush with a centrally placed rug) toilet rooms where terrazzo would be too expensive and similar parts of the theatre, are available in several composition substances and forms. The base of the composition may be cork (linoleum) or rubber or asphalt.

Such materials are obtainable in a variety of patterns or in solid-color tiles to be laid in patterns, unless it is preferred to have the flooring in one color.

Composition flooring, preferably in a battleship grey without design, is usually recommended for projection rooms, being less tiring for the projectionists than a painted concrete floor.

FOUNTAINS

MODERN PRACTICE with respect to both design and operating costs give no place in the theatre, ordinarily, to the purely decorative fountain (which once was a part of statuary displays, effecting "garden pools," etc.). Theatre fountains today are essentially drinking fountains, though they may be and commonly are decorative enough. The simplest types are white or tinted porcelain-finished pedestals or wall bowls. The wall types may of course be incorporated into a built-in decorative feature of tiles, or architectural glass, or a mirror; indeed, such ornamental fountain schemes are available in stock designs, complete with decorative lighting provisions, and they are procurable as well complete with bubbler or faucet, and even with so-called "magic-eye" mechanism (See Photoelectric Cell Mechanisms for Doors and Fountains).

It should be noted that old-style bubblers, without a guard preventing the lips from touching the bubbler itself, is not compatible with the sanitation expected in the theatre; in fact, it is good practice to have, perhaps in addition to a protected bubbler, a faucet or spout, with individual paper cups in an ornamental holder, since some patrons (particularly women with small children) fear contamination from any kind of bubbler.

FURNITURE FOR FOYERS AND LOUNGES

FURNITURE durable enough to be practicable for theatre foyer and lounge areas is obtainable today in a variety of styles, in both metal and wood.

Metal furniture, which is markedly durable, is available in chromium, stainless steel and aluminum, with dull or glossy finish. Chairs and settees may be of very simple design, and accordingly very in expensive; or they may be of the fully upholstered type, with coil-spring cushions (feather or down cushions are not indicated for theatres because they do not return to shape). Metal tables, having burn-resistant composition tops (or tops of glass or some phenolic like Formica) are particularly indicated for cosmetic rooms, along with small chairs to match. Neither these, nor metal occasional and end tables are necessarily out of place in a room otherwise having non-metallic furniture, especially when the wood furniture is of definitely modern design (like so-called "Swedish modern").

Wood furniture may of course be selected from the better-built pieces adapted to home living rooms, but to be really practicable these should be merely of wood construction, with the frame fully covered in durable fabric (eliminating armrests, feet, etc., in woods like walnut or mahogany). Moderately priced wood furniture of sturdy construction which is suited to theatres quite as well as to homes is that of birch and maple, which may be obtained in novel "modern" designs, and also in rustic or Early American styles, with "wheat" (pale yellow) or the darker maple finish.

HEARING AIDS

THESE RECEIVING instruments (phones) either of air conduction or bone conduction type, to assist patrons whose hearing is impaired, may be regarded as standard equipment for motion picture theatres today, with from five to ten outlets (two seats served by one outlet) usually considered sufficient. The receivers are plugged into suitable outlet boxes permanently mounted and wired in selected seating locations. Individual volume controls which the patrons can adjust at will, may be provided either on the outlet boxes or on the cord leading to the receiver.

Sound may be taken from the main theatre system, either directly or through an auxiliary amplifier, or may be picked up via microphone from the screen speakers and passed through a low-power amplifier that is part of the hearing aid system. Because of the relatively large number of people who do not hear well, and their varied influence on theatre attendance, group hearing aids are to be regarded as regular equipment for the motion picture theatre.

HEATING SYSTEMS AND ACCESSORIES

HEATING SYSTEMS used in the theatre present different requirements from those of other public buildings because of the concentration of occupants in the auditorium, and the wide variation in the number that may be present at any given time.

Heat distributing systems are of two general kinds, those using standard steam radiators or convection type units, and those circulating masses of warmed air through a ventilating system. The latter may of course be part of a complete air conditioning system (see Air-Conditioning and Ventilating Equipment).

Oil and gas are preferable as the fuel where automatic control is provided in the system and when their cost is comparable to that of coal. With coal, automatic stokers reduce labor and insure efficient use of fuel. It is a measure of economy in some theatres having air-conditioning for the auditorium, possibly also for the foyer, or a ventilation system for the auditorium, to use unit heaters for other divisions, such as lounges and toilet rooms, lobby, manager's office, etc.

INTERCOMMUNICATING HOUSE PHONES

TO INSURE the manager's control over every department of theatre operation, and efficient co-ordination of the activities of different departments, suitable methods of signal or communication are indispensable. The simplest are mere buzzer systems, as sometimes used, for example, to advise the projection staff that a change in sound volume is necessary, but the limitations of the buzzer do not allow different departments to report to the management or permit communicaiton of any but the simplest instructions.

House phones for more effective interdepartment contact are used by most theatres. They range in design from simple, two-station communicating lines to elaborate dial systems by which any station can make contact with any other.

Loud-talking systems, consisting essentially in distant-pickup with any other. Microphones and miniature speakers are also adapted to theatre intercommunication.

INTERIOR DECORATION SERVICE AND MATERIALS

MODERN STYLES of interior treatment have eliminated much of the ornamentation formerly characteristic of theatres (most of it expensive), but they have advanced their own devices, such as geometric and abstract patterns in paint, sometimes in metal. Fabric (usually cotton-rayon damask) is frequently used to conceal sound-absorbing blanket. Wall paper of the more durable types (such as Tekko and Salubra) merits consideration for limited areas, as do leatherette and linoleum. Then there are the tiles, wood veneers, and so on, many of them to be considered for their acoustic values as well as decorative qualities (see Acoustical Products and Engineering; also refer to Curtains and Drapes).

Lighting today is a principal source of decorative effect, by means of either built-in sources (coves, troughs, etc.) or fixtures, possibly employing several colors (commonly amber, blue, red or green, in addition to white) with circuits controlled to permit gradual mixing (see Dimmers). So-called "black light" also permits interesting decorative effects, such as glowing figures in darkened niches, or ornamental patterns picked out in fluorescent paint (see "Black Light" Materials and Lighting Equipment; also see Lamps, Incandescent for Theatre Lighting, and Lighting, Architectural and for Public Areas).

Statues and bas-reliefs based on classic, patriotic and other themes, are available in stock reproductions, many of them relatively inexpensive and well adapted to theatres of modern as well as traditional style.

LAMPS, AC ARC

PROJECTION ARC lamps of the reflector type are available for the use of alternating current with the copper-coated rare-earth-core carbons employed in producing the low-voltage high-intensity arc (see Lamps, High-Intensity). While alternating current has been used since the early days of the arc source for motion picture projection, direct current almost completely superseded it (at least in the United States), and lamp equipment adapted to it accordingly disappeared from the market. The a. c. arc equipment here referred to is a special type fundamentally distinguished by a means of stepping up 60-cycle current to 96 cycles to adjust both positive and negative alternations to the cycle (frequency of opening and closing) of the projector shutter, the purpose being to establish a constant alternation factor calculated to make current pulsation unnoticed as "flicker."

This equipment normally consists in two-lamp mechanism, suitably housed with attendant controls, supplied from a special transformer. Providing a white light (in contradistinction to the yellowish light of the low-intensity direct current arc), this type of arc has an operating cost rating relatively low. Screen illumination levels obtainable are such that the equipment is marketed as a projection light source adapted to the smaller theatre.

"Universal Trim", the Forest revolutionary achievement that makes Suprex-Simplified High Intensity, Intermediate High Intensity (1 kilowatt) operation, or any other carbon trim requirement, possible with ONE Forest Lamp.

This lamp, as designed and engineered by Forest, corrects the technical faults evident in present lamps—thus the best lamp of today. And, as developed by Forest, will scientifically accommodate anticipated arc-light progression . . . thus the best lamp of tomorrow.

One of the Outstanding New Developments Is the Forest "UT" Lamp

The completely new PATENTED arc feed . . . positive and negative feed mechanisms completely separate. This feature completely overcomes feed troubles. The feeding speed of any type positive carbon can be adjusted accurately without in any way affecting the speeding feed of any type negative carbon, allowing independent accurate adjustment of each. This keeps the arc in exact focus with the optical system at all times.

Manual feed handles do not turn as the carbons are being automatically fed by motor. The automatic and manual feeds both operate without counter pressure, friction devices, clutches, springs or chains. When striking the arc, either negative or positive carbon can be operated manually without interfering with electrical controls.

classes—condenser and reflector types. The high-intensity reflector types in turn are divided into two classes—the type generally known as Hi-lo, and the so-called low-voltage high-intensity arc. The Hi-lo type may be regarded technologically today as having been superseded (except for existing installations) by the low-voltage high-intensity arc, which employs a relatively new type of copper-coated carbon of small diameter and with a core of rare-earth elements, and is further distinguished by the horizontal position of both carbons and non-rotation of the positive.

Further development in carbon manufacture and lamp mechanisms has resulted in a d.c. lamp designed to supersede also the low-intensity arcs used in the smaller theatres, so that all theatres today can have the advantage of white projection light, equal in quality to the light of the larger theatre which uses condenser type high-intensity equipment operated at 120-130 amperes and 65-70 volts. (See also Lamps, A.C. Arc).

Low voltage high-intensity arcs adapted to medium-size houses are operated at currents ranging from 35 to 65 amperes, and 31 to 40 volts at the arc. Carbon combinations are 6 mm. positive, 5 mm. negative for from 35 to 40 amperes; 7 mm. positive, 6 mm. negative for from 42 to 50 amperes; and 8 mm. positive, 6.5 or 7 mm. negative for from 56 to 65 amperes.

Designed to replace the low-intensity arcs formerly manufactured for the medium to small-size theatre are the new intermediate capacity high-intensity D.C. lamps, utilizing a cored negative carbon specifically made to give smooth operation at very low current densities, and operating at 40 amperes, 27-27½ volts, or about one kilowatt at the arc.

LAMPS, INCANDESCENT FOR PROJECTION

INCANDESCENT lamps for theatre motion picture projection are characterized by a high degree of source concentration and relatively high wattage. The most effective lamp for this purpose—namely, the 2,100-watt, 60-volt T-24 bulb lamp—is designed for lower voltage to secure additional source concentration. Hence a transformer with voltage-regulating characteristics is required. This lamp provides relatively acceptable illumination on screens up to 16 feet wide and throws not to exceed 100 feet.

There are also available 1,000-watt prefocus base, and 1,500-watt bipost base, 100-120 volt, T-20 bulb lamps employing the biplane filament construction. This construction makes possible relatively high source concentration for lamps operating at ordinary circuit voltages and thus saves the cost of auxiliary apparatus.

The 1,000- and 1,500-watt lamps are frequently employed in projectors of the semi-portable type.

For portable 35-mm. motion picture projectors there are the 500-watt monoplane-filament, and the 750-watt and 1,000-watt biplane filament lamps in T-20 bulbs with medium-prefocus bases. The 750-watt and 1,000-watt require forced ventilation.

A newer type of 1,000-watt projection lamp is designed to burn base down and as a result of a new method of internal construction and of burning the filaments at higher temperature the lamp increases by 50% the light available from incandescent sources of this wattage. Because it maintains screen illumination at so high a percentage of the original intensity, this lamp does not require the inclusion of anti-blackening electric grids internally.

For stereopticon projectors there are the 500-watt short T-20, medium-prefocus base projection lamp, and the 1,000-watt long T-20 bulb, mogul-prefocus base lamp. Both are of the 100-120-volt type and employ monoplane filaments.

LAMPS, INCANDESCENT FOR THEATRE LIGHTING

GENERAL SERVICE lamps—available in sizes from 15 to 1,500 watts—serve the majority of lighting applications in and around theatres. Except for the tubular bulb bipost lamps, all are designed for burning in any position; all are available with inside-frosted finish to diffuse the light, to eliminate filament striations, and to produce a smoother lighting effect. The frosting absorbs little light—in fact, inside-frosted and clear lamps (clear lamps are regularly available in sizes above 100 watts) have the same rating in light output.

Inside-colored lamps for sign and decorative service: The general service lamps mentioned above are suitable for enclosed lamp signs and luminous displays where protected from rain and snow. For outdoor exposed applications, a line of vacuum lamps from 6 to 50 watts is available in frosted and inside-colored types.

Outside-colored lamps: Several sizes of outside-colored lamps are also listed in round and flame-shaped bulbs.

Lumiline lamps: Available in colors and in 30 and 60 watts (length 17¾ inches) and 40 watts (length 11¾ inches), these tubular lamps have, by their physical shape, introduced new concepts of decorative lighting design. They may be used exposed or in narrow reflecting and shielding equipment. The standard colors are white, straw, orange, moonlight blue, emerald and surprise pink.

Also on the market is a filament tubular lamp which differs from the "lumiline" in that it plugs in along its length instead of at the ends, thus permitting an interrupted line of light. These lamps are also available in higher wattages—up to 200 watts. Lengths of units are 6, 12, 18 inches, etc., up to 36, and there are three diameters. They may be obtained in sprayed colors, sprayed white and opal glass. A feature of this filament lamp is that it may be bent to most any desired shape for architectural and fixture effects.

Fluorescent lumiline lamps: These are much more efficient than the filament-type lumiline lamps, and are particularly recommended for color lighting, since the color is not created by the glass of the bulb, but in the light itself. The lamp is of the electric discharge type, using mercury vapor as the medium for sustaining the arc. Ultra-violet radiation is produced in the tube, which acts upon certain chemicals (the nature of which varies according to the color or tone of white light desired) with which the interior of the bulb has been treated. The reaction of the chemical to the electronic bombardment produces visible light. These lamps are available in three lengths—18, 24 and 36 inches, and in two diameters. Being arc lamps, they require a special control unit. Nominal wattages are 15, 20, and 30.

Reflector incandescent lamps: These are of a special type adapted to display lighting, having a pressed glass reflector and light-redirecting cover lens as part of a funnel-shaped bulb. It is available with two types of cover lenses, one for wide beam, other for narrow. It fits the regular sockets.

LAMPS, LOW-INTENSITY DC ARC

LOW-INTENSITY projection lamps are reflector type projection light sources operated at from 15 to 42 amperes, direct current. This arc is relatively inexpensive in both carbon and operating cost and produces illumination which has been regarded as sufficient in intensity for small theatres, but crater burning characteristics are such that the light has a yellow tint, instead of being the snow-white light produced by high-intensity type arcs. In fact, a high-intensity arc may be regarded as necessary to the satisfactory projection of color films in theatres.

LENSES, PROJECTION

THERE ARE two general classes—the condenser lens, which focuses the projection light on the aperture (See Condensers); and the objectives. The latter are commonly referred to as the projection lenses; they focus the light upon the screen. They are made in four standard diameters, with focal length as determined by the size of the screen image desired, and its distance from the projector.

Knowing these factors, the supply dealer or the lens manufacturer readily determines the focal length required. In ordering projection lenses, one should also name the type of light source, projection angle and the make and model of the projector.

Stock focal lengths are usually in quarter sizes from 3 to 7 inches, 7½ and 8 inches.

LETTERS, ATTRACTION BOARD

CHANGEABLE sign letters permit rapid change of marquee advertising. Such letters have been made of various metals and compositions as well as glass. Usually, however, they are either of cast metal or glass. Glass letters are commonly in panel form, with the letter translucent (opal glass) and the surrounding panel area opaque.

has generally supplanted other types in attraction boards. It reverses the visual character of the glass translucent letter, being itself opaque, while the surrounding area is illuminated. The silhouette letter is of cast metal and is attached readily to rods or wires in front of translucent glass panels, which latter cover a metal lamp box. The lamp box fits into the structure of the marquee so as to be integral with it.

Attraction board equipment adapted to the combination of silhouette letters of various sizes permit a "typographical" treatment of the announcement, which gives it freshness and advertising values not obtainable with unvarying lines of letters physically identical for every program. Letter heights available are 4, 8, 10, 12, 16 and 24 inches, and all sizes can be combined in the multiple-line type of panel frame. For convenience in laying out the letters in a "typographical" display, rubber stamps in scale for each size, and paper ruled to conform in scale to the actual attraction board lines, are available at a nominal charge.

It should be noted that such attraction boards are not only essential parts of the modern marquee (except possibly for theatres in extremely small towns, with little or no competition); they are to be considered also for one or two lines of copy across the entrance and similar locations. Attraction boards, more or less square, accommodating five or more lines of type (therefore well adapted to "typographical" arrangement of copy), are also effectively used above the marquee, possibly placed just beneath a vertical sign and facing up and down the street.

An inexpensive means of making up additional attraction signs (instead of painting them on board or fabric) is provided by changeable letters of pressed and lacquered paper which fit into slots in stainless steel strips of any desired length, against a painted background.

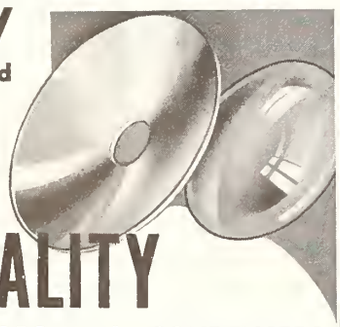
LIGHTING, ARCHITECTURAL AND FOR PUBLIC AREAS

IN ADDITION to the part that sign and marquee play on the architectural effect of the theatre facade, light may effectively contribute to the front design, maintaining its daytime values after dark, or even adding to them, by flooding the entire upper front, or parts of it, by means of reflector sources on the roof of the marquee; by outlining architectural features with neon or lumiline lamps; by creating panels or stripings of light by means of neon or lumiline or regular lamp sources concealed behind architectural structures, and so on to the limit of the ingenuity of the designer.

For the public areas of the interior, lighting facilities are to be divided into two general classifications—(1) built-in sources, and (2) fixtures.

Built-in sources include coves and troughs, recessed light boxes (usually having a diffusing device, like concentric louver-rings, or covered with flush-set panels of translucent glass, with or without diffusing ribs), and so-called downlights, consisting in ceiling reflectors or projectors behind tiny apertures in the ceiling, with the light beam directed to cover precisely a prescribed area.

Both classes of light sources are suited to modern interior treatments; indeed, even though built-in sources be used in the auditorium, or perhaps the foyer as well, fixtures may serve the needs of the lobby, or the lounge, more economically. Either method, of course, may well be used throughout the interior, for each embraces a vast array of practicable devices for efficient illumination and effective decoration.



Modern fixtures are available in stock designs of great variety—bracket or pylon luminaires, flush-type ceiling drums and boxes, suspended troughs, ceiling bowls, wall urns, etc., constructed of metal or glass or both, variously ornamented in the same materials, in direct, indirect and direct-indirect types, or with light emission through decorative louvers, in sizes to suit every location, and at prices to make modern luminaires accessible to theatres of the most modest budgets. Specially designed luminaires are obtainable at relatively moderate cost.

While incandescent lamps (as distinguished from the gas tube sources generally referred to as neon) are more flexibly adapted to theatre interior illumination, and also have maintenance advantages, neon has its interior applications, confined largely to cove and trough lighting.

MARQUEES

A MARQUEE is to be regarded as essential to the motion picture theatre. There are exceptions, due to location and form of building, but not many. Its function as a means of protection for patrons from rain and snow has become of less importance than its function as an advertising medium. It advertises the theatre and the program, by distinguishing the building from other commercial establishments on the street, by the theatricalism of its lighting, by announcing the features of the performance.

Marquees today have become more closely associated with the general architectural form of the theatre front than they originally were. They are frequently constructed according to specifications supplied by the architect, who has designed the marque itself, along with other display and sign elements of the front, as a part of the facade.

Another later development is unit construction of marquees, providing prefabricated marquees to fit most any theatre entrance, complete with all attraction board equipment, and also with theatre name sign (vertical or otherwise), if desired.

Most marquees have been rectangular in shape, but because the greatest amount of announcement space on such marquees cannot be read up and down the street, particularly on the side on which the theatre is located, other shapes have come into vogue, notably one combining rectangular with triangular forms.

Marquees are generally of sheet metal construction, painted, or with porcelain enamel finish in desired colors, with soffits of metal or glass illuminated by incandescent lamps or lighting troughs. There are, of course, many variations in pattern and illumination; however, the design should provide for attraction advertising panels with changeable letters (see Letters, Attraction Board) as integral parts of the structure.

MATS, RUBBER FOR ENTRANCE AREAS

HEAVY-DUTY metal link rubber mats are to be regarded as standard equipment for the average theatre, if not all theatres, since they are the principal means of reducing to a minimum the amount of dirt carried into the theatre on the shoes of patrons. These mats give needed service in dry as well as wet weather. Mud may be especially noticeable and therefore detrimental to appearance, but the dry dirt, much of it consisting in sharp, hard particles, is what cuts the carpeting.

Lobby mats, as they are generally called, should cover all of the floor of the immediate entrance area (as far as the point where carpeting begins, unless there is an especially long inner lobby) that constitutes traffic lanes. In entrance area of moderate width or less, the traffic lanes will extend within a foot or so of the side walls. The rubber mat may be laid on top of a floor of terrazzo or tile, but preferably it should lay in recess, flush with a border of terrazzo or ceramic, stone or asphalt tile.

It is also desirable to place lighter rubber mats (not necessarily of the link type, but preferably so) just inside the entrance to the carpeted area, laying it flush with the pile of the carpet.

Lobby mats are obtainable in a variety of standard colors, but special mats may be made up in colors as desired and also in interesting patterns, which may be given directional lines guiding traffic (of particular value when an inner lobby or foyer is at right angles to the sidewalk), and also be designed to incorporate an emblem symbolizing the name of the theatre.

MICROPHONES

THE THEATRE has many uses for microphones, from ballyhoo work on a sound truck, or in connection with the front display, to reinforcement of stage performances, announcements of election returns and sporting events, or emergency talks to pacify an audience in time of trouble. Microphones can be used with separate amplifying and loudspeaker equipment, or can in most cases be operated through the existing picture sound installation.

The early type of carbon granule microphone has been almost completely replaced by later and superior instruments, the crystal magnetic and velocity microphones. The condenser microphone used in early sound recording is also obsolete. The crystal microphone, and the various types of magnetic microphone (including a combination instrument utilizing both magnetic and velocity principles) have come into general application to theatre uses.

PHOTOELECTRIC CELLS

ALTHOUGH IT has a number of applications in many fields, in the theatre the photoelectric cell functions principally as a vital "organ" of the sound reproduction system, transforming the light of the exciter lamp, after it has passed through the sound track of the film, into the electrical energy which, amplified, actuates the loudspeakers.

PROJECTOR PARTS

THE WEAR to which projectors are subjected requires close observation of all parts and prompt replacement or repair before any that have become defective injure others that must work with them. It is also to be borne in mind that mechanical faults in the projector are usually "picked up" by the sound system.

...Here's how!

Remove your small, inefficient reflectors. Install Kni-Tron 10¼" reflectors in your low intensity lamps. Watch how the increased reflector area produces from 50 to 70% more light on your screen.

Inexpensive — Easy to Install

Costs very little—these Kni-Tron 10¼" Reflector Sets slip into your old lamps easily and quickly. Thousands in use everywhere, including major circuits.

Supplied for PEERLESS, STRONG, PREDDEY, MOTIOGRAPH, BRENKERT SUNBEAM & POWERLITE

PROJECTORS, STANDARD THEATRE

PROJECTORS HERE referred to are the standard non-portable 35-millimeter projectors designed for permanent installation in theatres. In addition to the regular large types, smaller, more compact and somewhat simplified projectors adapted to permanent installation in some classes of small theatres not requiring heavy-duty service, are also available.

Pedestals, which are sold separately from the projector mechanism, are adapted to installation of any standard type of lamphouse.

PUBLIC ADDRESS SYSTEMS

PUBLIC ADDRESS and sound-re-enforcement systems may provide any one or all of various services. They can be designed for amplifying stage sound, for managers' announcements, for ballyhoo.

In the theatre the public address system may consist of microphones suitably connected to the standard sound installation, or an entirely separate system, with its own amplification, wiring and also speakers, may be employed. Hearing aids may be used in association with any type of theatre public address reproduction.

Separate record-playing devices for reproduction of standard phonograph discs, through the sound or public address system, are available for exit music, pre-show or lobby entertainment, or attraction music outside the box office.

RECTIFIER TUBES

VACUUM AND gas-filled tubes used to convert alternating current to direct current are made in many ratings. The smaller sizes are commonly thought of as being in the category of radio or amplifier tubes. But while there is no distinction in principle of operation, the larger sizes, having current capacities of from 2½ to 30 amperes, are by custom classified separately.

These are often described by their best-known trade name as "Tungar" tubes. In the theatre such tubes are used to provide rectified direct current to arc lamps and to sound exciter lamps.

RECTIFIERS AND POWER UNITS

RECTIFIERS are devices that employ rectifying tubes or copper compound rectifying assemblies (dry type) for the purpose of converting alternating current to direct current. The larger sizes are fan-cooled, and supply direct current to the projection arc.

The smaller sizes are of somewhat different design electrically, incorporating electrical filters to insure smooth d.c. output, and to supply power to exciter lamps, speaker fields, tube filaments and other parts of the sound system.

REELS

REELS NECESSARY for takeup magazines of projectors and also otherwise constantly utilized in the projection room, are available in a number of sizes and types of construction. The standard reel in the United States (since September 1, 1936) has a diameter of 14½ inches, and a 4½-inch hub for the accommodation of the film lengths up to 2,000 feet. Reels are also available in the former American standard size (diameter 10 inches, hub 2 inches) while another available size adapted to the standard American film length of 2,000 feet has a diameter of 15 inches. REFLECTORS FOR INCANDESCENT LAMPS

METAL RECEPTACLES for incandescent lamps, having a reflecting inside finish and with a curvature calculated to make most efficient use of available light, are obtainable in several types adapted particularly to marquee trim and soffit lighting, to sign letter lamping, sign borders, display lighting, and similar uses.

There are several types and sizes of reflectors designed for low-wattage lamps, equipped with a glass roundel, or cover, which not only protects the lamp and reflector, but provides color if desired without use of colored lamps.

Other types of reflectors have swivel mounting, readily permitting reflection of the light in any direction.

REWINDERS, FILM

FILM REWINDERS are available in two general types, open and fireproof enclosed. The open type is offered in a number of different models, either as a single-unit or as two separate units that are clamped to the work bench, or bolted in place. The enclosed type is a single unit.

Both open and enclosed types may be hand-driven or motor-driven, may have sleeve bearings or ball bearings, may accommodate either 1,000- or 2,000-foot reels, or both, and may have either one or several driving speeds.

Some of the motor-driven types incorporate accessories by means of which the same motor can be used for general machine work, such as grinding and polishing.

RHEOSTATS

THESE ARE devices that introduce an electrical resistance into any circuit, the value of the resistance being variable at will. There are several methods of varying resistance, one being to move a contact lever over a series of switch points, one being to move a slider over the coil of the resistance wire itself, and one being to compress carbon or graphite discs or powder.

SCREENS

THEATRE SCREENS of the types generally regarded as suitable for theatres are classified according to construction, surface and reflective characteristics. Four general types are available—solid, porous, perforated (consistently perforated to all edges), variably perforated (perforated only at speaker area), and translucent (the latter for rear projection).

Surfaces (except for the translucent screen) may be diffusive or specular. The latter is specified for narrow, relatively deep auditoriums since the light is concentrated upon seats directly in front of the screen. Wider theatres must use a semi-diffusive or highly diffusive type. In surface treatment screens are white, silver ("metallic") or beaded (glass). Specular screens have either of the latter two types of surface.

SIGNS (ELECTRIC) FOR THEATRE NAME

ELECTRIC SIGNS (metal framework with illumination provisions) are available in a wide variety of designs more or less closely associated with the architecture of the theatre front. While they are commonly especially designed by the architect or sign construction company, there are also stock designs adaptable to the theatre front. Gas tube (neon) and incandescent lamp illumination has been found effective for these signs in combination as well as alone, and either type of lighting can be flashed.

Horizontal name signs have normally been more closely associated with the marquee than the vertical sign has, but often the vertical sign can be effectively related to the marquee and entrance by continuing the sign illumination scheme down to the marquee and even across its soffit. It is to be noted that a prefabricated type of marquee is available complete with theatre name signs either vertical or horizontal and all electrical facilities.

DIRECTIONAL SIGNS, including exit signs, those designating men's and women's rooms, lounges, balcony stairs, etc., are now available in a wide range of stock designs, while they may be made up in special designs at relatively low cost. Instead of being more or less confined to plain metal lamp boxes, such as were particularly employed at one time for exit signs, stock types now are obtainable with decorative shapes, fluted chromium finish, etched glass, etc., in colors and also with appropriate figures.

SLIDES, PROJECTION

SLIDES FOR the projection of song lyrics, advertising and effects are made either of glass or other material suitably transparent. The more elaborate slides, carrying pictorial matter or designs, are usually of glass, while a flexible transparent material permits the ready preparation of an announcement slide on a typewriter, the blank material being kept on hand and, when written upon, inserted into a frame.

SOUND SYSTEMS COMPLETE

SOUND SYSTEMS have followed a steady evolution toward simplicity and compactness since their introduction. Only the larger theatres now use sound power supplies dissociated from the sound amplifier; in smaller equipment the two commonly constitute a single unit, or at most two units in a single compact cabinet. The majority of modern systems consist of a single amplifier-power supply unit, two soundheads, and a speaker-horn assembly (the so-called "two-way" horn system), consisting in units for high-frequency reproduction with cellular directional horn, and for low-frequency reproduction with suitable baffle and horn.

More elaborate apparatus may include an amplifier rack mounting decibel meter and other accessories, and an emergency amplifier.

SPEAKERS AND HORNS

TO CONVERT the electrical product of amplification into audible sound, speaker "units" are available in considerable variety. The practice now is to use two types of speakers to reproduce different bands of sound frequencies.

Speakers are available in a.c. types, in a great variety of d.c. types, and in the new permanent magnet types that need no field excitation.

Baffles are required with every speaker. The simplest is flat board, behind which the speaker is mounted, large enough to provide baffling for the lowest frequency to be reproduced. In many auditoriums, however, the "folded" baffle provides a longer sound path, and therefore better "loading," for the low-frequency speakers. Directional trumpets or baffles are used for high-frequency speakers or tweeters, consisting of clusters of small trumpets operated by a single tweeter being favored. These arrangements secure better distribution of the high frequencies, which have a normal tendency to travel in straight lines, over-supplying some seats and missing many others entirely. Clusters of directional baffles applied to the tweeters correct this tendency.

STAIR NOSINGS

NOSINGS FOR stairs are available in both metal and rubber. Rubber nosings can be obtained in various colors as well as white, and in addition to reducing liability to slip, light shades outline the treads, thus further reducing hazard. For visibility in darkened areas, such as balconies, yellow rather than white is recommended.

TICKET REGISTERS

AUTOMATICALLY registering ticket dispensers facilitate the handling of box office peaks, and impart the impression of efficiency, cleanliness and business-like methods; they eliminate all excuses for errors on the part of the cashier (some type of dispensers make the usual errors impossible); and they may be regarded as necessary to any real assurance that box office losses are not occurring through cashier-doorman collusion. They are obtainable in motor-driven and manually operated types.

Also available is a device for attachment to the ticket register which, by electrical connection to the mechanism for releasing tickets, automatically flashes on an indicator board suspended in the box office window, the total price that the patron is to pay for the tickets.

TOILET ACCESSORIES

THE PROVISION of soap paper towels, etc., for the use of the public, is not to be regarded as merely a service to patrons; such provision, maintained constantly, contributes to the cleanliness of the toilet rooms, thus reducing maintenance work of the theatre staff. These supplies do represent a service, of course, the absence of which can create considerable ill will toward the theatre.

The soap should be preferably of liquid-type, available from a handy dispenser. Built-in dispensers with only the spout visible above each lavatory, are preferable to the glass bowl type in that they are neater and are theft-proof. Paper towel dispensers should be as accessible, supplied with towels of at least 32-pound stock.

Toilet paper should be of at least 10-pound stock and dispensed by holders using either flat folded sheets, or issuing two sheets at a time. These may be obtained in chrome-plated metal or in synthetic materials to match the color of the compartment.

For greatest cleanliness and acceptance by patrons, water closet seats should be of the incomplete rim, rather than the full-rimmed, type. Rubber composition seats obtainable in this shape are particularly durable. Also available is a chrome-metal seat with only supporting blocks of wood at the sides.

For the patron to place over the seat, disposable tissue covers are available, and can be issued by a coin dispenser.

A handy device adapted to women's toilets is a shelf for purse or other personal belongings, such as gloves. The shelf is placed on the compartment door, and is so designed that the door cannot be opened until the articles are removed from the shelf; thus personal articles are not left in the theatre to cause later annoyance to the management.

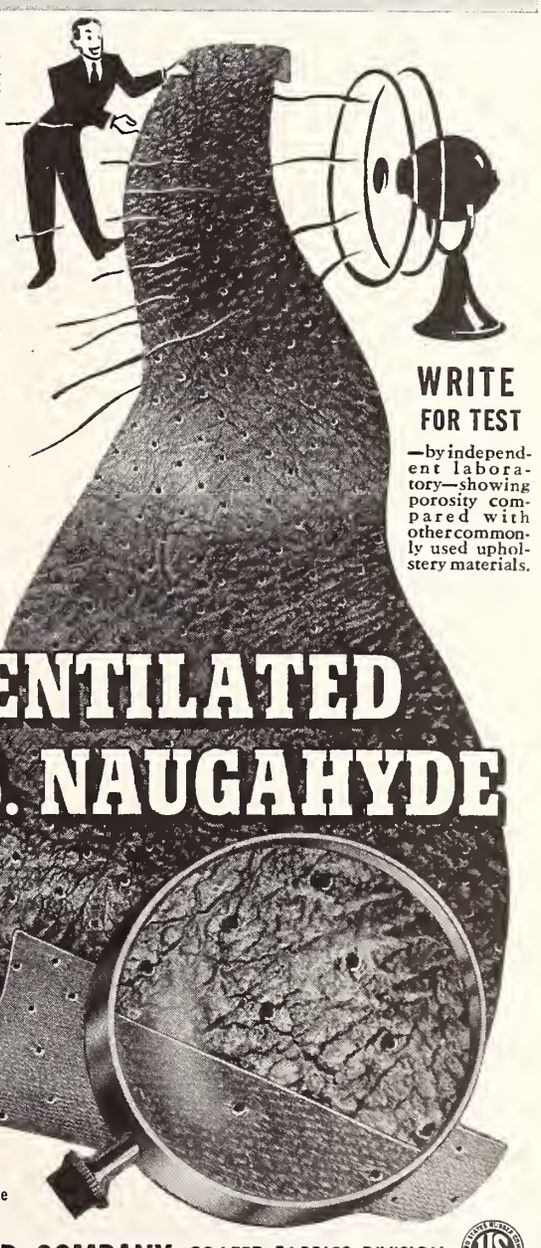
UPHOLSTERING MATERIALS

UPHOLSTERING materials are of importance in theatre operation, first in relation to auditorium seating, second as coverings for foyer and lounge furniture. They may be divided into two general kinds—(1) soft fabrics, and (2) leatherettes.

The soft fabrics regarded as suited to motion picture theatre auditorium chairs are mohair, velour and corduroy, and these are of course available in various grades. Because of the hard usage to which theatre auditorium seating is subjected, and the liability of the theatre management for discoloration of clothes due to unstable dye, the cheaper grades should never be used.



Leatherettes have been improved to such an extent that they veritably are leather in appearance, and they are to be preferred for theatre seating and furniture because even in the cheaper grades, they crack, or "craze," less readily. There are two general classes of leatherettes, those having a coating of rubber-base type, and those with paroxylin-base coating. Each is available in different grades, according to weight or thickness. The rubber-base type is the more expensive, but it is also regarded more durable under stress of flexing. Leatherettes are obtainable in a large variety of standard colors and off-shades, and also in "antique" finishes having a worked leather pattern effect.

One of the principal makes of leatherette of auditorium seating quality is also available in a so-called "ventilated" type. It derives this classification from the presence of tiny apertures, approximately the size of pin-holes, which are effected, not by piercing of the fabric, but by separation of the threads in manufacture, and the aperture edges are seared, making them permanent. In all but the extremely light colors these holes are normally unseen when the fabric is applied to a cushion. The purpose of the apertures is to provide outlet for air upon compression of the cushion. (See also Chairs, Auditorium.)

Leatherette is also highly suited to foyer and lounge furniture. Here, however, and particularly in women's lounges, soft fabrics are often preferred for their suggestion of luxurious comfort, and also for the colorful patterns available. Of the soft fabrics, those most often used for lounge and foyer furniture are the cottons and wools, or cotton-rayon mixtures, having a firm texture and smooth finish (minimum of nap. FEVER

THE motion picture is running a fever—the "hit" fever. If one were to accept what seems to be the composite mind and opinion of the current system ruling the industry, it would have to be believed that there are only two orders of production, smash hits and utterly negligible pictures, useful only to keep the theatres open between hits.

Unless the consuming public becomes so inflamed with interest that it threatens to tear the lobby down to get in, the picture of today is not commonly considered worth mentioning.

That inevitably tends to make of the theatre merely a place where, now and then, something happens, like the old town "opera house". The policy and practice removes the theatre quite from its onetime position as a community institution.

It also tends to make the theatre, in the interims, a sort of mill-end, or fire sale, emporium where triple bills and kindred devices dump the less-than-terrific pictures.

This theatre practice is, obviously enough, the end of the line which starts in Hollywood with that state of mind which deems that it is not decent to budget a picture for less than a million, and that it is a disrespect for the product to ask less than a major bite out of the box office.

It is inescapable that if the theatre is solely dependent for its living on the occasional hit picture—and hits still have some of the quality of chance about them—the hits are going to come higher, as so obviously they do now—higher to the exhibitor as well as to the public.

That process will apparently continue—the way most picture fevers run—until something breaks, and that will not be the public.

The destiny of the motion picture as popular entertainment is decidedly at stake.

If the design is to make the attendance at motion pictures an expensive and just occasional amusement indulgence, the current program of the prevalent system is well under way.

THE indifference of the system and its masters to anything less than a cosmic hit is readily communicated to the consumers. It was from the studios that every box-office patron in the land learned, at large cost to everyone, about "A" and "B" pictures, and it's from the interior attitudes and policies of this goldfish-bowl business that the public learns most of what works for the impairment of the standing of the art. Clearly enough, the dumping process of picture merchandising is understood by the customers, who are rarely more inclined to think better of the product than its merchandising indicates.

There is no value in any motion picture except in the state of mind that is held about it. What the customer thinks is what he buys.

In a remote field, but also one dominated solely by the customers' state of mind, it is interesting to read the campaign for preciousness which is being conducted by the DeBeers diamond interests. They could make diamonds cheap, but they will not.

Up in the very Yankee village of Ridgefield in Connecticut, the other night, at the opening of the new Playhouse theatre, an audience cheered at the announcement of Irwin Wheeler that the policy would be to play the best available pictures, selectively booked, whether "A" or "B", and that they would be presented on single bills, with newsreels and other short product. It is a community which thinks well of the screen.

ONE of the invasive influences long has been the ambition for the bigger and bigger, obviously in the envy of the cinemasters affected for other arts, for the glamours of stage and glories of opera, unaware entirely of the fading of those laurels. Quite a while back we suggested an "Oscar" for the producer, director or other creative worker responsible for the picture of the year which did the best job of entertainment per dollar expended. The difficulty with that notion is that no one, by the present system, will ever know who he was or what the picture was. Attention is for effulgency rather than efficiency.

If the motion picture is to continue as anything resembling the institution it has been, it will be on the support of a flow of product, not floods and spurts and long dry spells.

That a picture can be made and sold for a one or two dollar top admission price does not at all indicate that the industry can be conducted on any such standards. With slightly more than eighty per cent of the families of America drawing incomes of less than forty dollars a week, limits for the price of popular entertainment require no argument. Also it may be observed that present trends in the politico-economic pattern are invasive of the higher and medium brackets of buying power. Further, among all of the industrial products that serve the multitudes, the motion picture is the only one steadily to seek increase in its unit price. Skill and advance of technology have been making everything else better and less expensive, while the pictures cost more and more—in the mad fever of the hit chase.

EDISON'S MISTAKE

IN the mind of the late Mr. Thomas A. Edison his labours on the invention of the motion picture ranked high in importance. In fact, it was one of his last endeavours, only a few years before his demise, to have certain aspects of the record of a certain unworthy claimant to picture priorities again exposed and officially stamped as spurious, employing in that cause the patent expert, Mr. Frank N. Dyer, who had once been Mr. Edison's personal counsel.

Now comes M-G-M with Mr. Edison's life in two feature pictures, saying of the second: "Three of these inventions (Edison's) form the very backbone of the gigantic motion-picture industry—the electric light, the phonographic principle of voice recording and the motion-picture camera. Only the first two inventions are covered in detail in the picture, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer having to eliminate the invention of motion pictures to maintain dramatic cohesion."

Edison never bothered about cohesion. Meanwhile, his picture war, "Edison vs. The Infringers," would make a lively third production.

This Week in the News

Sound Revolution

AFTER A DECADE without fundamental changes in sound for motion pictures, the industry is confronted with revolutionary sound devices perfected by the Bell Telephone Laboratories and the Radio Corporation of America. The new Bell sound equipment was demonstrated this week in New York's Carnegie Hall to leading Hollywood sound directors and several thousand others interested in the new reproducing methods. It is now to be marketed by ERPI. The first public show of the RCA sound will be in the fall when Disney's next feature, "Fantasia," opens.

The Bell sound, which uses three sound tracks and a control track, is called "stereophonic" and has "three dimensional" qualities, in addition to a volume range and other characteristics hitherto unattained. Details of the RCA system, which is said to be similar, are a carefully guarded secret and will not be announced until the Disney film opens. But both sound systems would require new equipment in the studios and complete new reproducing systems in theatres. Total bill for the new sound, if adopted by the industry, would run into the millions.

The story on sound is on page 12.

Neely Strikes Again

COMPLETE divorcement of exhibition from production and distribution is demanded by law in a measure introduced in Congress Tuesday by Senator Matthew M. Neely. The bill is so sweeping in its provisions that it would outlaw the ownership of a single share of theatre stock by anyone or any company in production or distribution.

Almost at the same time Tuesday afternoon when Senator Neely was turning over his new divorcement bill to the clerk in the Senate, certain executives of the organized industry closely associated with its defense against Neely's present pending anti-block booking bill were figuring that there could be no action this session on this proposal. They conclude that, giving effect to present legislative discussions on other measures in the House Interstate Commerce Committee, where the Neely bill reposes, and to a two weeks notice before a hearing on block booking, a hearing on the new measure probably would not be held until well after mid-May, which would appear to be too late for House action. They do expect that a brief hearing will be held, but that no report on it will come from the Committee.

The divorcement bill also is expected to have its ramifications in the New York "key" anti-trust suit. Industry opinion was divided on the question whether the proposed divorcement legislation would hasten an agreement on the "consent decree" or make an out-of-court settlement impractical. See story on page 14.

Pennsylvania members of the Federation of Women's Clubs decided that the Neely block-booking measure was a question that should not be a Women's Club issue. Sidney E. Samuelson, speaking for Allied States Association, defended the bill. The negative was upheld by Harry Goldberg, director of advertising and publicity for Warner theatres. Details on page 16.

Breen on the Air

FOLLOWING his initial appearance last week as interrogator on "Ask the Stars," a half hour radio program broadcast by Warner Brothers' Station KFWB, Hollywood, Joseph I. Breen, Production Code Administrator, on Monday night fired some "Information Please" type questions at Warner stars Ronald Reagan and Jane Wyman, Warner writers Julius and Philip Epstein, freelance film reviewer Jack Grant, and actor Jack Mulhall. Described in advertisements carried in Monday editions of Hollywood daily trade publications as "the radio show that is a positive box office stimulus," "Ask the Stars" is in its fifth week as a sustaining program, copyrighted several months ago by radio producer Russell Hughes.

Director Fred Niblo and actor Reginald Denny were the interrogators prior to Mr. Breen's acceptance of the post last week. Recordings of the first Breen broadcast distributed in the East reportedly have elicited widely favorable comment. Station KFWB is offering the show for commercial sponsorship on the basis that Mr. Breen will continue to be the interrogator.

Similar in format to the "Information Please" program sponsored by Canada Dry Ginger Ale, "Ask the Stars" is performed without rehearsal, guests being asked questions pertaining, however, to motion pictures and picture matters instead of the unlimited range of topics covered by the Clifton Fadiman "Information" program.

No remuneration is received by participants during the program's performance as a sustaining feature, according to those taking part in Monday night's broadcast and a spokesman for Station KFWB, who also said that an ultimate objective is to develop the program in such a manner as to make of it a constructive force in behalf of the motion picture industry calculated to counteract destructive effects of derogatory remarks of motion picture gossip programs now on the air.

"Wind's" 10% Profit

THE GUARANTEE of a 10 per cent profit to first run exhibitors of "Gone With the Wind" also applies to subsequents, now that the picture is starting to reach those runs, William Frazier Rodgers, general sales manager of MGM, disclosed on Thursday. The 70 per cent rental, of course, also continues.

"Wind" grosses this week reputedly turned the $17,000,000 mark. As detailed on page 53, a total of 1,552 theatres in 1,413 cities in the United States and Canada have played it, in some cases eight, nine and ten or more weeks.

Four-day engagements are now being accepted, for subsequent runs. The same minimum admission prices will prevail: 75 cents for matinees; $1.10 for the evening performances.

Selznick's "Rebecca"

UNITED ARTISTS' home office in New York on Tuesday pointed to David O. Selznick's "Rebecca" as outdistancing the previous big Selznick grosser, "A Star is Born," by 40 to 45 per cent in its first 100 playdates. Going further, UA claims that "Rebecca," with the exception of "Gone with the Wind," also by Mr. Selznick, "is now outgrossing any picture in distribution in the industry."

After a first week box office intake of $115,000 at New York's Music Hall, the picture now is riding along on a $105,000 gross for its second week, the distributor claimed, citing two dozen additional hold-over engagements which had been recorded in the east and south.

"1,000,000 B.C."

UNITED ARTISTS, by this week's announcement of Hal Roach's production, "1,000,000 B.C.," a fanciful tale of the very remote yesterday, may, by adding that to their Korda-Wells production, "Things to Come" of a spell back, be said to have about covered the entire span of Time, or from Then to Tomorrow. The Roach picture seeks to explore for movie purposes, and the mass market, the values implied in the wide circulation of the sort of popular science conveyed in the Sunday supplements, rather a more direct address to the multitudes than the pictures based on H. G. Wells' magazine and book circulations. So now it becomes an experiment of lowbrow, as compared to highbrow. And that reminds some old timers of when Tarzan was born to the screen.

Scandinavia's 4%

ADOLPH HITLER'S National Socialist Workers' Party early this week extended its theatre holdings, with the aid of the German army, navy and air force. It seized Denmark, part of Norway, and threatened Sweden. There are several hundred theatres in the contested areas.

On Wednesday major company home offices were informed that Swedish theatre business was not suffering materially and that Danish theatres were remaining open. Communication with Norway was broken.

The foreign sales departments took inventory of lost customers, and the picture looks somewhat like this:

The four Scandinavian countries (Finland included), accounted for approximately four per cent of distributors' entire foreign revenue.

In Denmark there are 346 theatres, in Norway 270, in Sweden 2,134.

American films had about 50 per cent of the total playing time on Danish screens, 62 per cent on Norwegian, 60 per cent on Swedish.

German pictures, as in other lands, ran a poor second, or worse, in competition to American, on the screens of these countries. In Norway they had 12 per cent, in Sweden about seven per cent, in Denmark approximately 12 per cent.

The best American business was done in Sweden with Denmark and Norway, second and third.

Previous Hitler circuit acquisitions are:

Austria (779 theatres), Czechoslovakia (1,847), Poland (769) Memel and Danzig, the Rhineland and the Saar; this week, Denmark and Norway; next, perhaps, Sweden.

Griffith Buys 40 More

H. J. GRIFFITH has acquired the Dickinson circuit of 40 theatres in 28 cities of Kansas, Missouri and Nebraska, according to announcement of Henry S. Griffing, attorney for the Griffith Amusement Company. A year ago Mr. Griffith purchased an interest in the chain and the name was changed to the Griffith-Dickinson circuit. Glen W. Dickinson retained the Dickinson, Olathe, Kan., and the Macon, Macon, Mo. He also owns the Mission Acres theatre, near Kansas City. No purchase price of the $1,250,000 chain was announced.

Griffith interests last week acquired 30 houses of Southwestern Theatres, Inc.

Ray Higdon has become assistant to R. E. Griffith who is in charge of film buying.

Meanwhile at Oklahoma City Federal Judge Edgar S. Vaught granted a motion for a bill of particulars to the Griffith Amusement Company, charged by the Government with anti-trust violation.

Censor Lord's Prayer

THE LORD'S PRAYER, contained in a sequence of "The Fighting 69th," has been subjected to abridgements by the British Board of Film Censors. It would have been entirely eliminated, it is reported, save for a showing by the producers' representative that it was necessary to the continuity.

Other deletions included rites of benediction, absolution and the sacrament of extreme unction.

The British board has ever customarily required the excision of all Catholic prayers and ceremonies in pictures to be circulated in Great Britain.

Barrymore Wins

IN ANSWER to a request to "name the five greatest performers you have ever seen," 86 representative members of theatrical professions selected John Barrymore, Charles Chaplin, Helen Hayes, Paul Muni and Enrico Caruso, in a poll conducted by The Billboard. The voters were all well-known figures in entertainment fields, including producers, critics, actors, directors and managers. Anyone in "films, the legitimate theatre, radio, opera, concerts, music, the dance, recordings, bands, vaudeville, night clubs, burlesque, hotel spots, stock, circus, carnival, ice shows, showboats, etc., could be selected. Motion picture performers were well represented in the list of 152 named in the poll.

Campaign Films

THE MAJOR political parties already have turned attention to the screen for use in the 1940 campaign. "A New Tomorrow," 45 minute film available in 16 and 35 mm for theatrical and organization distribution, has been completed for the United Republican Finance Committee. F. Trubee Davison, former assistant Secretary of War and chairman of the committee, announced that the picture would be shown to more than 1,000,000 voters in the New York metropolitan area. National distribution is planned.

The film was produced on the West Coast at a reported cost of $50,000 and is said to have a theme based on Abraham Lincoln's words, "With malice toward none, with charity for all, with firmness in the right as God gives us to see the right, let us strive on to finish the work we are in." John Hamilton, Republican national chairman and the research bureau of the Republican national committee cooperated in preparing material for the film.

"A New Tomorrow" will be used for fund-raising purposes. Al Mertz, formerly in charge of RKO short subject sales, is handling the bookings. He said the picture would be shown first to party groups and later theatrical bookings would be sought. The cast includes Robert Barrett, Fuzzy Knight, Russell Hicks, Fay Helm, Donald Curtis, Harlan Briggs, Frank Orth, Edward McWade, Robert Kelland and others.

Equity vs. TAC

IMPLYING that the Theatre Arts Committee of New York (which has staged or aided numerous "liberal" benefits and affairs) is "Red," the Actors Equity Council on Tuesday forbade its members to participate in committee work.

The action was impelled by debate, for several weeks, at Equity Council meetings, over the wisdom of initiating a campaign for a Federal, or subsidized theatre, resembling, somewhat, the Federal Theatre Project which was abolished by Congress last year. It had been charged at these meetings that the "TAC," by its radical activities, aroused the Congressional opposition which destroyed the project; and that the committee's participation in a new drive for a Federal theatre, was resented. The committee's opposition to Finnish relief benefits was cited; also, the similarity of its members' arguments to those advanced by the Communist Party of America.

Equity members, hitherto active in committee affairs, said they would protest to the Associated Actors and Artistes of America, parent actors' group.

NEW SOUND RACE IS ON; MILLIONS ARE AT STAKE

Bell Demonstrates at Carnegie Hall; RCA Debut Coming with Disney Cartoon; Both Claim Third Dimensional Effect

The sound race is on again. It is again the Telephone Company and Radio Corporation of America.

A new sound reproducing system which, if accepted by the public and the industry, will necessitate investment of many millions for new equipment by both theatres and studios, was demonstrated this week in Carnegie Hall, New York, by the Bell Telephone Laboratories, Inc.

As already has been announced, the Radio Corporation of America also has devised a new sound system which will make its first public appearance at the roadshow of Walt Disney's next feature cartoon, "Fantasia," which may be released in November.

Perfect Fidelity Claimed

Both new sound systems are reported to claim the same results: a three dimensional effect and both require new and additional facilities in theatres and studios. Existing theatre sound equipment cannot use films recorded by the new methods. The new stereophonic or stereosonic sound is of such a nature that little or no improvement could be had in small theatres, so those houses would be spared the additional expense even if larger theatres install the new equipment.

T. K. Stevenson, president of the Telephone Company's Electrical Research Products, in an announcement on the applications of "enhanced stereophonic music" made following the first Carnegie Hall demonstration, Monday night, issued a challenge to the motion picture industry to determine how rapidly the new techniques which claim to reproduce all audible sounds may be commercially used in films. He said, "We have demonstrated that it is perfectly possible to record and reproduce sound with a fidelity and with possibilities of enhancement hitherto unobtainable, but it remains with the motion picture industry to determine how dialogue and music recorded with such fidelity can be made commercially successful."

The new sound system will not cause any sudden revolution in the motion picture industry as did the advent of sound; the change will be gradual, said Mr. Stevenson. He concluded by asserting that the new methods represent "the most significant developments in sound in the last decade and unmistakably point the way to continued progress in recording and reproducing of sound either in connection with moiton pictures, or possibly without pictures, as a separate medium for making the best music available to audiences throughout the country."

ERPI Returning?

Although no Telephone spokesman in New York would state with definiteness the company's plans for marketing, there were some who seemed to think that the Electrical Research Products, Inc., of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company might consider returning to the business of selling the equipments, as manufactured by its related Western Electric Company, which was the procedure until the United States Government, three years ago, "invited" Telephone to divest itself of interests in this business. Accordingly, sound-head manufacturing licenses were sold to Simplex and Motiograph manufacturers, and ERPI's sound service business was turned over to a new company, Altec Service, formed for the purpose. The alternative would be for ERPI again to enter licensing arrangements with Simplex and Motiograph.

The Telephone company's new system will not benefit small theatres, but, even so, a changeover to sound would require the industry to pay a bill running well in proportion to the millions spent by the industry when it was virtually forced into sound in the hectic days of the late 1920's. That bill reputedly ran upwards of $50,000,000, spent at a time when chaos growing out of the revolution was rampant and some 100 different makes of reproducers were marketed, many of them small, troublesome and costly, and many of them "bootleg."

The perfection of "Three-dimensional" sound may begin once more the drive to sell reproducing equipment to the motion picture industry. If such a race develops, the telephone company will have a slight head start because it presented its "stereophonic recordings of enhanced music" to the public this week, while the RCA-Disney show is not expected to reach the theatres for another six months. Both companies for years have been working quietly on methods to improve sound.

Similar Effects from Film

In 1933 a symphony concert being played in Philadelphia was reproduced stereophonically before the National Academy of Science. The method demonstrated this week gave similar effects from recordings made on film. According to the Bell Telephone Laboratories, "the new apparatus permits the ready and faithful recordings and reproduction of all the sounds which the human ear is capable of perceiving. It permits the director to enhance the music of an orchestra giving to it interpretations not otherwise possible."

While the Carnegie Hall demonstrations of the Bell system were without accompanying motion pictures, the RCA improved sound is to be related to and give special meaning to the Disney drawings on "Fantasia." The musical score for that feature cartoon was recorded before the drawing started.

The system developed by the Bell Laboratories has been turned over to Electrical Research Products, Inc. (ERPI), for marketing. ERPI handles non-telephonic inventions perfected by the Telephone company. It is expected that the stereophonic sound will be made available immediately to Western Electric licensees in Hollywood Details of the selling plan are not yet available, but it was said that ERPI would announce the development and offer it to the industry. Acceptance would depend, principally, on public reaction to the new sound.

$30,000 Cost Estimated

At the present time the stereophonic equipment for a theatre would cost about $30,000, which is just about the figure large theatres had to pay for sound equipment when it was first introduced. It is expected that the price of the equipment would come down considerably if the demand were great and the equipment were manufactured on a large scale. The equipment for theatres probably would be made and handled by the manufacturers now licensed by ERPI.

The RCA company will make no statements concerning the sound to be used in the next Disney feature cartoon other than that the music for the film was recorded by RCA. The Disney company will be the first to introduce the RCA sound in motion pictures. The subsequent licensing has not yet been determined. The equipment for "Fantasia" will be moved from theatre to theatre, for the film is being made especially for roadshow distribution, as previously published.

Introduction of the new recording system, it was said, would be relatively simple in the studios provided that sufficient sound channels

RANGE OF NEW SOUND SYSTEM DEMONSTRATED

The program presented in Carnegie Hall was chosen to demonstrate the range and possibilities of the new recording system developed by the Bell Laboratories. The system appeared to do everything claimed for it. The illusion of a large symphony orchestra, choir or organ was perfectly created; sounds from a low of a distant flute to a thundering roar, many times louder than has been publicly demonstrated outside nature, were reproduced without distortion. In no sense could the music be called "canned," and only a rare and hardly noticeable sound indicated that the music was recorded. It represented almost perfect recording and reproduction.

The entertainment value of sounds over a certain volume is open to question and some complained of excessive volume. However, the system demonstrated that it can give tremendous volume without distortion or blowing the speakers apart. The only other criticism was against the program and not the sound system. Some music critics present did not like the manner in which Stokowski had "enhanced" the music.

No endeavor was made to relate the demonstration to the motion picture screen. The stereophonic qualities of the system as demonstrated in Carnegie Hall, where the speakers were spread across a wide stage, might be almost lost if the method were used in connection with a standard motion picture screen. One opinion was that if the public accepts the new sound, wide screen pictures might receive another trial. The volume range and the "noiseless" recording have direct applications to film use but it is the "three dimensional" qualities that are most striking. —M. Q., Jr.

CLAIM VOLUME AND NO DISTORTION

are available. In the long run, if the method is universally adopted, studios will have to increase their sound recording facilities at a cost totaling many hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Bell's Four Sound Tracks

The Bell system makes use of four sound tracks, taking up the whole width of the motion picture film. But it was said that the four tracks probably could be squeezed in along with the picture. However, in any case complete new sound equipment is needed in any theatre that will show the new sound. The Telephone company's Stereophonic sound uses three microphones for the recording, one each at the right, center and left of the stage. A fourth track, which gives the special control to the volume desired by the director, completes the system. In the theatre three sets of loudspeakers are installed, corresponding to the three microphones. The volume then is automatically regulated by the fourth track on the film.

The stereophonic recordings presented by the Bell company included orchestra selections from the works of famous composers, a scene from an opera, organ pieces and choir singing and dramatic scenes. The orchestral transcriptions were made by the Philadelphia Orchestra directed by Leopold Stokowski, who also made the RCA recordings for Disney's "Fantasia." The Tabernacle Choir of Salt Lake City sang and the dramatic selections were made by Paul Robeson, Walter Armitage and James Sullivan.

Tenfold Sound Increase

The system, which is said to include a tenfold increase of sound without distortion, was developed by Dr. Harvey Fletcher and his associates—E. C. Wente, J. C. Steinberg, W. B. Snow, R. Biddulph, L. A. Elmer and A. R. Soffel. For example, it is stated that a recording of an orchestra of 200 instruments can be stepped up to the volume of an orchestra of 2,000 pieces.

Perfection of the new system followed years of research by the Telephone Company engineers. The system was developed as one of the results of the company's regular investigations into matters related to telephonic communication. From time to time it happens that the engineers invent something that also has uses in other fields. When this happens the device is turned over to ERPI to handle from the merchandising standpoint. Such, it was said, was the case with the work on stereophonic recordings. The original work was undertaken for telephonic purposes and the results appeared to be of value to the amusement world, so the telephone laboratories turned over the equipment to ERPI, which will try to interest the motion picture companies.

The final decision on the new sound system will rest with the public. The new methods of recordings, as frequency modulation (FM) in the radio field, are said to give more realistic sound; in fact, proponents claim "perfect" reproduction for each. Stereophonic or stereosonic or "three dimensional" sound for motion pictures and FM for radio involve substantial investments for new equipment, and both threaten "revolutions" in sound methods in their respective fields.

Sound Costs Reduced

For many years there has been little change in the quality or methods of sound in motion pictures. The cost to equip a theatre with sound has dropped from a range of about $7,500-$25,000 and more during the first years of sound to $1,200-$10,000 today. Now both Bell and RCA, the two principal companies—which survived the many manufacturers and dealers (some of the socalled "bootleg" variety) which sold sound equipment to theatres, again and almost simultaneously are ready to present improved sound to the industry. The new equipment to be offered will be more expensive, originally and in operation, than present reproducers, but is said to have the compensating advantage of giving "three dimensional" sound. It was said that three dimensional sound and three dimensional sight may both be included in the films of the future.

Hollywood Inspects New Sound

Executives in the sound department of studios on the West Coast have been brought to New York to get firsthand knowledge of new developments in sound. A high point of the trip was Bell's Carnegie Hall demonstration of stereophonic sound. The sound directors who made the trip included Douglas Shearer, MGM; E. H. Hansen, Twentieth Century-Fox; Loren Ryder, Paramount; Bernard Brown, Universal; John Livadary, Columbia; Tom Moulton, Samuel Goldwyn; Elmer Raguse, Hal Roach; Jack Whitney, General Service; Clifford W. Smith and K. F. Morgan of ERPI.

PLAGIARISM CLAIM IS DISCONTINUED

Litigation against Walt Disney and Leopold Stokowski instituted by Mark S. Tutelman of Philadelphia was discontinued on Tuesday. Mr. Tutelman originally lost his case in the lower courts last September when Judge Joseph L. Kun in common pleas court dismissed his bill in equity holding that he had no common property rights in the "mere idea or plan of synchronizing symphonic music of classical renown with animated motion picture cartoons."

Mr. Tutelman's claim was that he had prepared scenarios of the "Nut Cracker Suite" and "Dance Macabre" and submitted them to Mr. Stokowski who, he claimed, had revealed the idea to Walt Disney for use in his forthcoming "Fantasia" without crediting Mr. Tutelman.

Delay Rogers Drive To Week of April 25th

The Will Rogers National Theatre Week will begin Thursday, April 25th, L. E. Thompson, of RKO Theatres, chairman of the campaign, announced Monday. The week's delay was made to permit completion of a one-reel subject which will be shown in theatres.

The film will feature Bette Davis, Judy Garland and Kay Kyser, is titled "If I Forget You." Warner Brothers, Fox Movietone and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer are donating the use of their studios.

Irving Caesar wrote a song for the picture and many others are cooperating.

Eastman Kodak, DuPont-Pathe and Film-ex-Gaevert contributed the raw stock. Distribution will be through National Screen Service exchanges.

Three Boards Elect; Three Set Sessions

Universal's board of directors last Thursday in New York reelected all officers, Famous Players Canadian, Toronto, elected directors, the Western Electric Company held elections, and stockholders' meetings were set by Balaban & Katz, Pathe and Eastman Kodak.

Loew's, Inc., directors this week declared a regular quarterly dividend of $1.62½ a share on the $6.50 cumulative preferred stock, payable May 15th to stockohlders of record April 30th.

RKO Board Meets

At a meeting of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation board last Thursday, the board considered the matter of a quarterly dividend payable May 1st. Although earned in the quarter by the consolidated company, in view of uncertain conditions in the industry, particularly those resulting from the war, the board took no action to pay the quarterly dividend.

Boards of directors of both Universal Corporation and Universal Pictures Company were reelected at the board meeting.

Universal Corporation officers are J. Cheever Cowdin, chairman; Nate J. Blumberg, president; Charles D. Prutzman, general counsel and vice-president; Peyton Gibson, secretary and treasurer, and Margaret M. Sullivan, assistant secretary and treasurer.

Universal Pictures officers are Mr. Cowdin, chairman; Mr. Blumberg, president; Mr. Prutzman, general counsel and vice-president; Mathew J. Fox, William A. Scully, Joseph H. Seidelman and Cliff Work, vice-presidents; Mr. Gibson, secretary; Samuel Machnovich; Ed Muhl, assistant secretary; Harold S. Brewster and Eugene F. Walsh, assistant treasurers.

Officers and directors were reelected at the shareholders' meeting of Famous Players Canadian Corporation in Toronto, when reports for the past year were adopted. Officers are N. L. Nathanson, president, and J. J. Fitzgibbons and directors are Barney Balaban, Y. Frank Freeman, W. D. Ross, F. B. McCurdy, A. E. Dyment, A. P. Holt, T. J. Bragg and R. W. Bolstad. Mr. Nathanson said that receipts for the first three months of 1940 were highly encouraging.

Western Electric Reelects

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Western Electric Company, held Tuesday, all directors were reelected with the exception of Charles L. Rice who retired from active service January 10th. At the annual meeting of the directors, the same day, all officers of the company were reelected.

Stockholders of the Keith-Albee-Orpheum Corporation reelected all directors at their annual meeting in New York Wednesday. Directors are Donald K. David, Monroe Goldwater, Malcolm Kingsberg, John V. McCaffrey, N. Peter Rathvon and George J. Schaefer. A board meeting was held Thursday.

Stockholders of the Eastman Kodak Company will elect five directors at the annual meeting to be held April 30th. The nominees for reelection to the board of directors are Frank W. Lovejoy, president; William G. Stuber, Francis C. Mattison, Perley S. Wilcox and Raymond N. Ball. In the last fiscal year Mr. Lovejoy was paid $161,647; Albert F. Sulzer, vice-president, $65,843, and Thomas J. Hargrave, vice-president and secretary, $66,000.

NEELY ERUPTS WITH A NEW BILL FOR DIVORCING THEATRE CIRCUITS

Calls Senate Measure a Companion to His Anti-Block Booking Bill "to Accomplish Necessary Reforms" in Industry

A bill requiring the complete separation of exhibition from production and distribution was introduced in the United States Senate Tuesday by Senator Matthew M. Neely, author of the block-booking and blind-selling measure passed by the Senate last year and awaiting action in the House.

Move Unexpected

Introduction of the divorcement bill came as a complete surprise to officials in Washington and to the motion picture industry. But Thurman Arnold had said, when the key New York anti-trust case was filed in July, 1938, that if the case were lost, legislation would be introduced to effect the purposes of the suit. Reports on the "consent decree" indicated that divorcement, one of the prime purposes of the suit, would not be required. Senator Neely described his new bill as a companion measure to the block-booking measure and said passage of the two "will accomplish important and necessary reforms in the public interests."

The divorcement bill would make it unlawful for any producer or distributor "to own, control, manage, buy or book films for, or operate, in whole or in part, any motion picture theatre or theatres located in any state, territory or the District of Columbia, or to have any interest, direct or indirect, legal or equitable, through stock ownership or otherwise, in any such motion picture theatre or theatres."

Declaration of Policy

In the preamble Senator Neely wrote a lengthy declaration of policy, in which Congress is to hold:

"That the condition which exists in the motion picture industry whereby certain producers and distributors of motion picture films (1) produce and distribute in commerce a majority of the quality films available for exhibition, (2) have acquired control of or an interest in a large number of motion picture theatres, known as 'affiliated theatres' and (3) are continuing to acquire additional theatres, is contrary to public policy in that it (a) has resulted in granting to affiliated theatres undue preferences, (b) has caused unfair discrimination against independent theatres with respect to the leasing of films in commerce, (c) has enabled such producers and distributors to acquire a virtual monopoly of the first-run theatres in the principal cities and a virtual monopoly of subsequent-run theatres in certain cities and sections, (d) interferes with the freedom and opportunity of independent exhibitors to select and obtain an adequate supply of quality films for exhibition in their theatres, (e) prevents the people of the several states and the local communities thereof from influencing such selection in the best innterests of the public, and (f) tends to create a monopoly in the production, distribution and exhibition of films in commerce. The Congress finds and declares that the condition herein described and the methods and practices bring it about and resulting therefrom adversely affect and constitute a burden upon commerce, and it is the purpose of this act to eliminate such condition by making it unlawful to engage in such practices."

18 Months to Drop Theatres

A period of 18 months after enactment would be given for the companies to dispose of their theatre holdings. The federal district courts would have jurisdiction, and the bill provides that "the power to prevent and restrain violations shall include the power to order the divestiture of theatres or interests in theatres held in violation of the act." Penalties for violations would include fines of up to $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both, and officers, directors or agents of corporations could be held individually responsible for the acts of their companies.

The bill would require every producer or distributor engaged in commerce to file with the Attorney General within 30 days after the act became effective and annually thereafter in January an affidavit stating whether he owns, controls, acts for or has any interest in any theatre and, if so, show fully the nature and extent of such interest or connection.

Industry Opinion Divided

Industry opinion was divided this week on whether the introduction of divorcement legislation would speed a settlement of the trust suit out of court or would make a "consent decree" impossible. The former opinion was backed by the argument that some of the companies would like to settle the suit quickly and avoid the pending legislation on the grounds that the Department of Commerce would tell Congress that legislation would not be necessary, if the key suit were settled.

The opposite viewpoint held that the introduction of divorcement legislation has made an out-of-court settlement of the New York case impossible because there would be no purpose in signing a "consent decree" if the industry still faced legislative action on trade practices.

Some industry attorneys held that divorcement legislation could be attacked on the grounds of unconstitutionality.

In introducing the bill, Senator Neely explained that its purpose "is to prevent producers and distributors of motion picture films engaged in interstate commerce from owning, controlling, operating or investing in motion picture theatres." He said that "the evils attendant upon the ownership or operation of theatres by producers and distributors who control the necessary supplies of quality films are set forth in Section 1."

Senator Neely called attention to the North Dakota divorce law of 1937 which was upheld by a statutory federal court, whose decision

EXCEPTION SOUGHT ON WAGES-HOURS

As hearings on possible revision of definitions on "white collar" workers opened, in Washington, on Tuesday, before the Wage-Hour administration, representatives of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America asked exceptions from the hour provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act, in the cases of executives getting not less than $50 per week, administrative employees paid $30 or more per week, and professional workers with salaries of $200 per month or more.

The salary requirements suggested by the motion picture industry were in addition to stipulations as to the type of work done by employees in the categories under consideration.

Government Gets Court Order to Subpoena 14 Witnesses for Trial May 1st; Split over "Consent" Decree Widens

The almost daily change of the complexion of the motion picture industry's solution to, or adjustment of, its legal and legislative trade practice difficulties, this week found a wide divergence of opinion among the large company defendants, in the Government's "key" New York anti-trust prosecution, over the form of settlement. Last week's optimistic opinions on a "consent" decree were fading rapidly as the May 1st trial date approached.

Despite predictions that the start of the trial would be postponed, the Government is moving along with its preparations at the New York Federal Courthouse. Arrangements were made Monday, on orders of Trial Judge Henry W. Goddard, with William V. Connell, deputy chief clerk of the United States district court at Foley Square, New York, to reserve Room 1306 of the courthouse "indefinitely" from May 1st.

Defense counsel prepared to ask for a postponement until June 1st.

14 Witnesses Summoned

Also advancing its trial preparations, the Government over the weekend summoned its first witnesses against the majors, 14 of them, as follows:

William W. Hodkinson, Carlsbad, Cal.; Richard Rowland, 1030 N. Las Palmas, Los Angeles; T. L. Tally, 1544 W. 8th St., Los Angeles; I. E. Chadwick, 6066 Sunset Blvd., Hollywood; Christ Lampros, Capitol Theatre, Farrell, Pa.; Joseph, William and Al Weiss, McKeesport, Pa.; William D. Davis, Triangle Theatre, Pittsburgh; Thomas A. Gilbert, New Oakland Theatre, Pittsburgh; Charles Morse, 260 Tremont St., Boston; H. A. Batastini, Alpine Theatre, Punxsutawney, Pa.; M. E. Ouslander, Pinebrook Theatre, Scranton, Pa., and Harry Stahl, NuLuna Theatre, Sharon, Pa.

Obtains Order for Subpoenas

The Government obtained an order from Federal Judge Mandelbaum authorizing it to serve subpoenas on these 14 witnesses, directing them to appear at the trial, on May 1st.

An order permitting the issuance of subpoenas is necessary in all instances in which a witness lives more than 100 miles from the courthouse. The Government thus may subpoena witnesses in the New York area, without a previous Federal permission. It was said, last weekend, that the Government would have over 100 of its approximately 300 prospective witnesses on hand, at the trial opening.

In asking for the federal order, the procedure was to request it on the grounds that "the testimony of said witnesses is material and necessary in the trial of the suit."

Split Widens on U. S. Trust Suit Settlement

Meanwhile, on a "consent" decree, the large company defendants appeared to be divided. Paramount and three other companies were known to be opposed to a "consent" decree, in the form proposed; others favored it; in another company, executives themselves were divided.

Should the companies favoring a consent decree, in present form, become parties to it, they would do so in independence of the others it was said. But it was also pointed out that the Government was not likely to approve a consent decree in which only a minority of defendants were parties; inasmuch as the trade reforms which the Government allegedly wants, would not be obtained, in this manner.

Last week, pressure upon Paramount and other companies opposing a consent decree, was reported being exerted by the other companies and by high officials of the film industry

It was also reported that even the individuals championing a consent decree were still unaware of how the Department of Justice viewed the matter.

The board of directors of each company, also, would have to approve their company's participation in a decree, no individual executives of a major defendant being authorized to make an out-of-court settlement.

One settlement proposal said to have met the most objection was that which assertedly would give the exhibitor a prior claim on product, if he established that his theatre is better than his competitor's. How to determine "better" puzzled observers, many stating that it might be confused with newness, rather than business operation.

Last week, the Government was granted an additional week's time in which to prepare more information, in answer to defendants' interrogatories. The additional information is due on Friday.

This week, defense counsel were preparing stipulations, to shorten the trial; however, seven companies must agree before the stipulations can be presented to the Government; so delay was expected.

It was noted last week, in weighing factors for or against acceptance of a decree by the defendants, or the Department, that some state units of the National Allied States Association, which has favored the suit, and legislation to "reform" the industry, had gone on record opposing an out-of-court settlement; and that this may have some bearing on the Department attitude. The Department's case rests, in many instances, on complaints of Allied exhibitors.

Zukor and Montague Testify in N. Y. Case

Despite statements to the contrary made by him in 1918, producers find it necessary, conditions having changed, to own theatres, Adolph Zukor, chairman of the board of Paramount Pictures, testified, in pre-trial examination, last Friday, in the Government's New York anti-trust prosecution, scheduled for May 1st trial.

Mr. Zukor had been confronted with his 1918 statement by Special Assistant Attorney General Robert L. Wright, conducting the questioning. In the statement he had opposed ownership of theatres by producing companies and attacked the threatened entry of exhibitor associations into production and distribution.

Mr. Zukor noted that in 1918 First National, a theatre owning association, had produced and released films, and placed talent in contract. The situation threatened Paramount; so it entered exhibition. In the interval, costs of pictures have risen so much that the producer, and other producers, must now be assured of an outlet for the product upon which so much has been spent, Mr. Zukor asserted.

Because, in 1925-26, Twentieth Century-Fox acquired many theatres, Paramount renewed its buying of them, he said.

When Attorney Wright suggested that long term franchises would solve a problem for a producer-distributor, Mr. Zukor replied that they had been found "unsatisfactory" in the past, that the quality of pictures fluctuated, as did their number.

He admitted that affiliated theatres had an advantage over their competitors because they were assured of product from at least one company.

Sidney R. Kent, president of Twentieth Century-Fox, is to testify on April 18th; William Kupper, the company's western sales manager, on April 16th; William Sussman, its Eastern sales manager, on April 17th.

Abe Montague, sales manager of Columbia Pictures, testified last Thursday, that the company had discontinued its 10 per cent cancellation clause in contracts.

He also testified that the company favored "substantial independents, adding that the sales of a year's product averages 29 units per theatre owner; and that not more than 33 per cent of its accounts order the total output of one season.

Action on the Trust Suits in the Field

Scheduled to come up before Federal Judge William H. Kirkpatrick in Philadelphia Federal Court on Monday, the final hearing in the anti-trust suit of the Landis Theatre, Vineland, New Jersey, against the majors and the Warner Theatres circuit, was postponed to May 6th.

The suit alleges the Landis was unable to get proper product because of collusion between the two Warner theatres in the town, and the majors.

In Burlington the motions by the major distributors, asking dismissal of the anti-trust suit complaint of Andrew Tegu, Vermont exhibitor, have been denied in Federal Court.

In Portland, Maine, the motion of Loew's, RKO, and Twentieth Century-Fox, for dismissal of the $250,000 anti-trust suit against them by the Waldo Theatre Corporation, was dismissed last week by the federal court in that city. The corporation operates the theatre in Waldoboro, Maine.

In Nashville federal court, last Friday, the Government won 45 days' additional time in which to file a bill of particulars in its anti-trust action against the Crescent circuit and the large companies.

The major distributors, and the Griffith Amusement Company circuit, all defendants in the Government's Oklahoma City anti-trust suit, on Tuesday in that city's federal court were granted their motions to have the Government file bills of particulars.

DOUBLED AUDIENCE IS ANSWER, SAYS DIETZ

The best answer to the critics of the screen is that its audience has doubled in the last 10 years, Howard Dietz, advertising and publicity director of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer told a public relations luncheon of the Advertising Club of New York last Friday.

"The critic," Mr. Dietz said, "who takes to task the social position of films is willing to say that he wants a revolution in the shadow world before he is willing to see a revolution in the actual world. They confuse the world of shadows with Utopia."

He described the Neely bill as a product of "confused thinking on the moral issue."

Neely Introduces Divorcement Bill

commented upon the power and influence inherent in integration.

"This 'power and influence inherent in the combination of production, distribution and exhibition,'" he said, "has been and is being used to oppress and drive out of business the independent motion picture exhibitors. Separation of production and distribution from exhibition is the only effective remedy since the evils are inherent in the combining of these functions and the motive and temptation to discriminate in favor of the affiliated theatres and against the independent theatres will continue as long as the combination endures.

"Amazing Record" Cited

The Senator reviewed what he termed "the amazing record" of the major producers and distributors—the "Big Eight"—"in defeating all attempts to legislate with respect to their activities or to curb their predatory activities under the general law."

"Bills to prevent compulsory block booking and blind selling were passed by the Senate in 1938 and 1939, despite the intense opposition of the producers' lobby, but they advanced no farther," he said.

"Three resolutions to investigate the motion picture trust, one in the Senate (by Senator Brookhart) and two in the House (by Congressman Sirovich and Hobbs) were successfully smothered by the lobby.

Charges "Open Scandal"

"The statute of the State of North Dakota was repealed after it had been sustained by the district court and before a hearing could be had in the supreme court. The methods by which its repeal was accomplished were an open scandal.

"Although the Government has filed more than 20 actions against the motion picture industry under the Sherman law, no effective or lasting remedy has been obtained.

"In July, 1938, the Department of Justice filed an action against the 'Big Eight' asking, among other things, that the defendants be separated from their theatres. The case has not been tried and predictions are being made in the trade press that it will not be tried for many months, if ever.

Seeks Early Hearings

"I am informed that the Government has been required to furnish bills of particulars disclosing the minutest details of its evidence.

Senator Neely said he would seek early hearings on the bill which he hoped "will serve to focus public attention on operations of the motion picture trust which, due to the power and influence of its lawyers and lobbyists, have heretofore been beyond reach of the law."

With Congress scheduled to adjourn by June 1st, Washington circles feel there is practically no chance for consideration of the divorce bill this session Its introduction at this time, accordingly, was seen as a public expression by Senator Neely of his opposition to any concessions to the major companies in the settlement of the New York suit.

The bill has been referred to the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, which last year was forced by Senator Neely to hold hearings on and report his bill to abolish block booking.

NEELY BILL AN IRRITANT, DON'T WANT IT AS AN ISSUE, SAY CLUBWOMEN

S. E. Samuelson Defends Measure, Goldberg Opposes It Before Delaware Federation; Milliken on Visual Education

by M. H. ORODENKER
in Philadelphia

The American Federation of Women's Clubs, at least certain sectors of it in Pennsylvania, definitely are not interested in the intra-industry controversy over the pros and cons of the Neely anti-block booking bill now in Congress, nor, for that matter, in any arguments emanating from the outside.

Motion Picture Day, sponsored by the Delaware County Federation of Women's Clubs last Thursday at Chester, Pa., provided the setting for a heated debate on the Neely measure. After it was all over, most of the 600 civic-minded women in attendance professed ignorance as to what the Neely Bill might be and what it stands for. Many others, more enlightened—and confused—were visibly irritated that efforts were being made to force the women's clubs into an issue which, they felt, concerned them little. Several women, early leaders in the Federation movement, indicated that they would fight any attempts to make a women's club issue of the Neely Bill at the State and International conventions of the Federation.

Samuelson Defends Bill

Sidney E. Samuelson, speaking first in behalf of the bill as a representative of Allied States Association, was quite frank in his explanation that the interest of his group for the passage of the measure was "strictly commercial." Harry Goldberg, director of advertising and publicity for Warner Brothers Theatres, arguing against the bill as a representive of the motion picture distributors, was just as candid in his comments when he told the women that he was very much disturbed in that he had to take time out from his regular duties to come here and discuss a proposition that was of little or no concern to those assembled.

"There's something radically wrong with the motion picture industry," said Mr. Samuelson, "and that evil is monopoly which has resulted in internal commercial mismanagement. Representing a group of independent exhibitors who are made to suffer because of these conditions, our interest in the passage of the Neely Bill is strictly commercial. We see in this law the beginning of the end of the motion picture monopoly."

Urges Support for Bill

Hitting at block booking and blind selling, Mr. Samuelson further added that the bill would enable the industry to return to its golden era of 1915-1920 by substituting "freedom for blind selling, taking dictatorship out of its business methods and allowing for free competition instead of compulsion."

Mr. Samuelson urged the women to support a measure that would require that producers supply synopses on product planned. He pointed to a brochure of last season from a distributor which announced pictures never produced yet. Reading from a standard exhibitor contract, he argued that the exhibitor was not allowed a free hand in cancelling pictures he thought should not be shown to his patrons.

Citing figures to refute the arguments raised, Mr. Goldberg, charging that block booking and blind selling was only "oratorical hocus pocus," pointed out that of RKO's 1937-1938 list, only 32 per cent of the exhibitors bought all the product and that that figure represented not only independent exhibitors but the circuit houses as well. The same holds for the plea for wider freedom in cancellations so as to bring in the better pictures, Mr. Goldberg said, citing figures that showed cancellations for pictures like "Midsummer's Night Dream" and "Green Pastures" ran into the thousands while the cancellations on Westerns and crime pictures numbered only in the tens and twenties.

"The only reason some theatre managers are for the Neely Bill is that they have been led to believe that they can make more money," he said. "They think the Neely Bill will increase their profits. As for the improvement of the industry, there's nothing independents can do under the Neely Bill that they can't do now.

"It's a false and fanatical issue, and there is no earthly reason why your time, and my time, too, should be taken up with a question that does not concern us. There is nothing the matter with the motion picture industry today that 'audiences' can't cure."

Preceding the debate, held at the New Century Club, Mrs. Edna R. Carroll, head of the Pennsylvania Board of Motion Picture Censors, had taken the women to task, saying much of the to-do these days by women's clubs on Saturday afternoon children's shows was misplaced guidance.

"Worry less about the kids," advised Mrs. Carroll, "and, instead, let the kids worry about the parents."

Defending the hard-riding and the shooting in Westerns, Mrs. Carroll added, "The children have definite standards on what they expect to see in a Western. Come what may, the hero must be a hard-riding and straight-shooting character, the villain must always die in the end, and the hero must always marry the heroine. For the most part, these standards are much better and higher than those of women themselves who will be shocked by such a book as 'Grapes of Wrath' and then want to be shocked by the picture again."

Mrs. Carroll defended official censorship, as opposed to that of pressure groups. "True, we cannot legislate morals, but a social agency can raise and maintain the moral standards of a community, and I look upon the State Censor Board as a social agency."

"Not only is the State Censor Board self-sustaining, but it even makes money," she added.

"I don't want to be educated by motion pictures," she said, "and I don't want somebody else's propaganda. I go to the motion pictures for entertainment and relaxation. That's what I expect motion pictures to be, and they are."

Milliken Speaks

At a morning session held at the Boyd theatre in Chester, Carl E. Milliken, former Governor of Maine and executive secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, emphasized the importance of motion pictures as a medium for visual education.

"Learning of book facts does not guarantee active participation in the outside world," he said, pointing to the work of the MPPDA in helping solve that problem.

"As a result," he said, "there are available today 70 short subjects on character study, each concerned with a specific life problem. To us, it's a 'human relations' project. Since the future of our country is tied up with the future generation, the motion picture is playing its part in preparing that generation for the role it will have to play in later life."

Following his address, the women were shown four of the shorts, "Give Me Liberty," "The Declaration of Independence," "Song of the Nation" and "Lincoln in the White House."

The day's program had been arranged by Mrs. Homer K. Emmons, chairman, and Mrs. Jules Havelin, co-chairman, of the motion picture division of the Delaware club.

Samuel R. Rosenbaum, president of the Independent Radio Network Affiliates and head of the Station WFIL in Philadelphia, earlier in the week took to task the Parent-Teacher Association of the Shoemaker School at suburban Elkins Park, Pa., for its criticisms of radio programs for children.

"Radio claims it is fulfilling its duty to meet this want," he said, "and keep the level of its material always slightly in advance of the mere average of public taste. If it gets too far in advance, it will be a general without an army. "It is well known that the most popular features of every newspaper in the country are the comic strips. These are devoured with glee by parents as well as children by the millions. It is inconsistent for parents to expect radio programs to be exclusively high-toned and cultured, unless the same criticism is leveled at the universally circulated comic strips in the daily newspapers. On the contrary, both are capable of educating and improving the public taste, and are probably doing so. Certainly radio programs on the average are superior to the average entertainment provided in any other medium."

Mr. Rosenbaum urged constructive criticism to improve the quality of children's programs, instead of nagging.

STARS HIT NEELY BILL IN LETTER

Twenty-three of the leading Hollywood players have expressed their opposition to the Neely bill in a letter to Representative Clarence F. Lea, chairman of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, in which the bill is pending.

"We are convinced," said the letter, "that this bill is highly harmful to the American screen and against the best interests of the American public." "Anyone acquainted with the making of pictures," the letter continued, "knows that the advance synopsis section of the bill is an absurdity. It would build a stone wall around production, destroy the experimental progress so vital to the development of the screen and result in pictures being turned out like automobiles on an assembly line.

18 PRODUCERS BUY 76 STORIES FOR 1940-41 FEATURE PROGRAMS

56 Acquired in February, 20 in March; Columbia Purchases Two Cartoons; "Jekyll and Hyde" to Be Made Third Time

Eighteen producers purchased the screen rights to seventy-six story properties in February and March as potential screen material for the coming product year. These acquisitions represent the first substantial purchases for the 1940-41 season. The material for the current season was bought long since.

56 in February

Of 56 properties acquired in February, 32 were original stories, fourteen were books. There were three published magazine stories and one newspaper cartoon. There also were ten plays. In March twenty purchases were made by producers. These included ten originals, ten books, including two published magazine stories, one newspaper comic strip and one film. The companies did not report the purchase of any plays in March.

Columbia, following the success of the "Blondie" series, bought in February another newspaper comic strip, "Terry and the Pirates," from the News Syndicate Company. This cartoon is drawn by Milton Caniff. In March, Columbia purchased from King Features, which also handles "Blondie" for distribution to newspapers, the screen rights to "Tillie the Toiler," by Russ Westover. For the title role a nationwide casting contest will be undertaken.

Third "Jekyll-Hyde"

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in March acquired from Paramount the screen rights to Robert Louis Stevenson's novel, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde." This will be the third time the book has reached the screen. John Barrymore played the dual character in the silent version in 1922. Ten years later Paramount made a talking picture of the story with Fredric March in the title role. Robert Donat is tentatively penciled in for the starring portrayal in the new production.

In February, RKO purchased not only the screen rights to the Broadway stage production "Too Many Girls" but also the services of all the principals in the play and George Abbott to produce and direct the film version. The picture will be released early next season to coincide with the football season.

"QUO VADIS" A TALKER FOR HIM IN 1909

Talking pictures began 31 years ago for Samuel Rappeport of Buffalo, N. Y., who, with Mrs. Rappeport, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary a week ago.

"Back in 1909 we showed 'Quo Vadis,' our first talking picture," said Mr. Rappeport. "We worked all day getting the phonograph record synchronized with the film. Either the operator in the booth didn't turn the crank on the projector steadily, or the phonograph would go too fast, or the needle would get caught in a groove.

"Although the picture ran only ten minutes, people came from all over the city in their carriages to see it."

In 1907 Mr. Rappeport opened the Royal Star at Niagara and Hamilton streets, the first motion picture theatre west of Main street. A year later he leased a building at Tonawanda and Briggs streets, in Black Rock, and opened his second "nickel show."

Mr. Rappeport started the Ideal theatre at Genesee and Jefferson streets in 1912, moving a year later to the Lovejoy theatre at Lovejoy and Avon, which he operated until the return of his son, Jacob L., from the war.

Since that time Jacob Rappeport has been operating the theatre, although his father, who is 79, retains an active interest.

The Rappeports also have three daughters.

Ludwig Leaves Minnesota Circuit for Ad Business

L. J. Ludwig has resigned his post of general manager of the Minnesota Amusement Company to enter the film advertising business. No successor has been announced and it is not likely that the post will be filled for some time to come, according to Paramount home office officials. No stock transfer or contract settlement is involved in his resignation.

Leonard Goldenson and Sam Dembow, Jr., Paramount home office theatre executive, were to confer with Mr. Ludwig and John J. Friedl in Chicago on Thursday. Mr. Friedl is head of the Minnesota Amusement Company, which is a wholly-owned Paramount subsidiary. The resignation is effective next Wednesday.

SMPE Meeting Changed

Dr. S. J. Begun, of the Brush Development Company of Cleveland, will discuss a new type of recorder at a meeting of the Atlantic Coast Section of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers to be held April 17th at the Hotel Pennsylvania, New York. The date was changed from April 10th to give out-of-town members of the Society who plan to attend the Atlantic City convention an opportunity to attend the lecture and demonstration. The SMPE convention will be held April 22-25, inclusive.

Raguse Named to Council

Elmer Raguse, sound director of the Hal Roach studio, has been appointed a member on the Research Council of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences. The studio is now contributing to the financial support of the council's program, and under Academy by-laws is thus permitted representation on the council.

Greene to Build Theatre

F. A. Greene, owner of the State theatre, Timmonsville, S. C., has purchased a site on South Main Street and will erect a two-story theatre building.

REPERCUSSIONS OF FCC'S STAND ON TELEVISION HEARD AT WHITE HOUSE

Views on Undesirability of Any "Fireworks" Reported Conveyed to Commission as New Hearings Start

by FRANCIS L. BURT
in Washington

Television problems this week assumed somewhat the status of political issues, with repercussions of the Federal Communications Commission's recent suspension of its order for limited commercialization heard at both ends of the capital's Pennsylvania avenue and in the middle.

Outlined to Roosevelt

Specifically, developments of the week were:

1. The FCC started new hearings on the status of television and the desirability of fixing some date other than September 1st, next, for introduction of limited commercial operation.

2. The Senate Interstate Commerce Committee promised quick action on Senator Ernest Lundeen's resolution demanding an investigation of the Commission's television policy.

3. The White House reportedly became interested in the matter after the situation was outlined to President Roosevelt by an unnamed radio executive, and its views on the undesirability of any "fireworks" were conveyed to the FCC.

Progress Traced

At the hearings before the commission, witnesses who had testified at the January hearings told of the progress which has been made in the development of methods and equipment since March 1st, when the order permitting limited commercialization was made public.

There was no demand for postponement of the date for commercial activities beyond September 1st, which, it was pointed out, is the opening of the radio season.

Linking television to frequency modulation, on which extended hearings were held last month, television company officials, while admitting that FM might eventually be useful, urged that picture radio should not be held up until the possibilities of FM had been explored, and vigorously resisted the suggestion of FM Broadcasters, Inc., that the 42 megacycle channel be turned over to them, contending that more television work had been done on that channel than on any other.

Wheeler Promises Consideration

At the Capitol, Senator Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Committee, promised that the Lundeen resolution would be given serious consideration, and there were indications that hearings would be held on the resolution which, in themselves, would partake of the nature of an investigation of the alleged vacillation of the communications commission in dealing with television.

In a radio address broadcast over Mutual and NBC chains on April 6th, Senator Lundeen charged the FCC with overstepping its powers, declaring that Congress had not given the commission authority to regulate, control or supervise the marketing of radio or television receiving sets.

"A new industry is being throttled by a Government bureau exercising power never granted by Congress," he asserted.

The radio talk was in answer to one broadcast April 2 by Chairman James L. Fly in defense of the Commission's attitude, a broadcast which in itself excited comment and led to the charge, later denied, that he had demanded that two networks provide him with time.

Craven Explains Opposition

At the request of Senator Lundeen, Commissioner T. A. M. Craven, generally considered the best-informed and only technically qualified member of the commission, explained his position in opposition to the commission's revocation of its "green light" order, saying that while the majority of the members feared that promotional activities will "freeze" technical development, he did not subscribe to that opinion but, rather, felt that "nothing can stop scientific research and technical progress in a free democracy if incentive is not discouraged by Government."

"The commission itself," he added, "by order of suspension, such as in the instant case, can create such confusion as to retard the development of television and discourage the incentive and initiative of private enterprise."

Fly Admits "Error"

Appearing before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee on Wednesday at a hearing on the Lundeen resolution to investigate the television argument, James L. Fly, chairman of FCC, said his Commission had erred in issuing its original order to permit semi-commercial operation and that it was now seeking to remedy this error. He suggested that no action be taken in the matter until after the Commission completed its current hearings and reached a decision.

Under questioning by committee members Mr. Fly explained that the only subject of consideration before the commission was whether the date for semi-commercial operation should be postponed in the expectation that within a few months flexible receivers would be developed that could pick up the transmission of any station. At present he said this was not possible and it was this factor which influenced the Commission to suspend its order after RCA began a sales promotion campaign.

As the FCC head appeared before the committee, Senator W. W. Barbour, of New Jersey, introduced in the Senate a bill to divest the Commission of all power to control or interfere with radio experimentation, research, or development, or with the use, manufacture, or sale of equipment.

The committee also heard David Sarnoff, president of RCA, charge the Commission with unfairness in citing it for its advertising, but limiting the hearings to one point only, and ignoring the advertising on which the order for hearings was based.

Representative E. E. Cox of Georgia, speaking in the House, asked for an investigation of "the radio trust." The Representative indorsed the stand of the FCC and charged that "this radio trust attacked the commission because that Federal agency refused to permit the trust to unload on the public obsolete television sets."

Rumor of White House Interest

The story of White House interest in the situation was interesting, although purely rumor which could not be confirmed in official circles. It was to the effect that one of the most widely known figures in the radio industry called upon the President following the commission's revocation of its order and laid the whole story before him. The rumored result of the visit was that the commission was cautioned to be careful in its treatment of the crisis in which it had become involved.

Whether there was any truth in the story or not, the hundred or more radio officials and attorneys present at the hearings were struck with the mildness of Chairman Fly's opening statement, in which he sharply delineated the ground to be covered in the testimony. He said "This is not a trial" and his only reference to the RCA advertising which precipitated the storm was that the hearing would consider whether it had retarded research and experimentation.

DuMont Testifies

The first witness before the commission, Allen B. DuMont, president of the company, urged that no standards be fixed that "will set the permanent course of television," explaining that he had developed a receiving set capable of accepting all present programs, regardless of number of lines or frames.

In a statement explaining his position, Mr. DuMont said, "I am the rare exception in upholding the FCC in its television citation of March 23, ordering a leading company to explain its high-pressure merchandising of inflexible television receivers. Frankly, I'm not in accord with the widespread criticism of the FCC's action by other television interests and by an obviously misinformed or at least inadequately informed press."

Clashes between Chairman Fly and witnesses and their counsel were frequent. Mr. Fly sharply questioned any inferences that the commission had exceeded its authority in reopening the matter.

Although, on a request by the chairman for an estimate of the time each witness would need, a total of only six hours direct testimony was asked, the first day was taken up with the questioning of Mr. DuMont, who had asked for only 45 minutees. This made it evident that the sessions would run more than the two or three days contemplated.

On Tuesday the commission heard representatives of the Don Lee Broadcasting System and Philco describe the results of recent research. On Wednesday, the morning hearing was conducted without the chairman, who was appearing before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee in opposition to the investigation proposed by Senator Lundeen.

All of the manufacturer witnesses appearing before the commission urged that commercialization be permitted at as early a date as possible, pointing out that vast sums of money have been expended in television research and warning that this flow of money cannot be continued indefinitely unless there is some return in sight.

FCC DECISIONS ON FM DELAYED UNTIL MAY 1

Decisions on permission for commercial programs on frequency modulation, increase to 50,000 watts and allotment of frequencies may be delayed until May 1st, according to FM broadcasters. No FM questions will be settled, it was said, until the television matter is adjusted.

FM broadcasters asked for the 30-50 megacycles band and expected to get at least the 41-50 band. The number one channel for television, 44-50 m.c., would go to FM under this plan, unless some special exceptions are made. If bands adjacent to the present 41-44 FM band are not assigned existing FM receivers will not be able to get the stations in the new bands.

MONOGRAM CONVENTION NEXT, "U" TO HAVE TWO; INDEPENDENTS ACTIVE

Select Will Have 25 to 30, Says Plunkett; Film Alliance to Distribute 50 British Pictures, Wachberger Announces Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation this weekend will deliver the first pre-seasonal message on product policy and content for 1940-41, at the first of the annual sales conventions to be held this season, opening Friday morning in the Drake hotel in Chicago. Details and the product announcements appear on page 27.

Universal's Plans

Universal will hold two sales conventions early in May, with Atlantic City and Chicago as the probable choices, it was announced Tuesday by W. A. Scully, general sales manager. The company will release 58, the same number of pictures in 1940-41 as were released in the present season.

New season product conferences began in the Home Office Tuesday, with President Nate J. Blumberg, John Joseph, advertising director, and Mr. Scully in attendance. Joe Pasternak, who left Tuesday night for the Coast, also attended the initial conference. Eastern sales manager F. J. A. McCarthy, who returned Wednesday from his vacation, and Western sales head W. J. Heineman, just returned from a trip through his territory, will attend all further meetings.

The remainder of the current season's product was reviewed and set in the Coast session which both Mr. Scully and Mr. Heineman attended.

Monogram Is Next

Next to meet in annual sales convention will be Monogram, timing its meeting to allow participation of its officials and franchise holders at the annual National Variety Clubs convention, in Dallas, next Thursday through Saturday. Twenty-six features and 24 westerns are to be expected from that company for 1940-41.

A number of Monogram executives plan to attend the Variety Club convention in Dallas. The group will include W. Ray Johnston, president; Scott R. Dunlap, vice-president in charge of production; Edward A. Golden, sales manager; Thomas P. Loach, treasurer, and all the Monogram franchise holders in the United States.

Franchise holders who are scheduled to be present are John W. Mangham, Atlanta, Ga.; Ben Welansky and Mark Goldman, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Steve Broidy, Boston, Mass.; Harry Berkson, Buffalo, N. Y.; Forrest Judd, Des Moines, Ia.; George West, St. Louis and Kansas City, Mo.; Nate Schultz, Cleveland, O.; Ed Blumenthal, Dallas, Tex.; John Franconi, Dallas, Tex.; Lon Fidler, Denver, Colo.; Will Hurlbut, Jack Saxe, Detroit, Mich.; Howard Stubbins, Los Angeles, Calif.; Charles Trampe, Milwaukee, Wisc.; Ben Nathanson, Minneapolis, Minn.; Carr Scott, Oklahoma City, Okla.; Sol J. Francis, Omaha, Nebr.; Mel Hulling, San Francisco, Calif.; and Harry Thomas, New York, N. Y.

Independents' Progress

Many independent producers and distributors are making equally favorable progress with their plans for 1940-41.

This week Joseph Plunkett, vice-president of Select Attractions, Inc., said that the company will have 25 to 30 features for next season. The company plans to have its own exchanges in 12 territories by June, he said.

Negotiations are being made with Bernard P. Arons to produce six films from his original stories. A deal has been closed with Charles J. Hirliman for the release of "Wrath of Jealousy" in the United States. Unity Films will release "Lilac Domino."

50 from Film Alliance

Nat Wachberger, executive vice-president of Film Alliance of the U. S., who arrived from Europe last week, announced that the company will begin immediately a program of distribution of 50 British films, half of these have been already finished and the others are to be produced during the current year. Alliance also plans production on the Coast and an extensive distribution organization.

Mr. Wachberger said his company had acquired the remake rights to 23 French films, in addition to rights to a number of books.

Sigmund Neufeld's, Inc., began work this week on its first production for Producers Releasing Corporation, "Sons of the Finest," from a story by William A. Ulman, Jr. The screen play was written by George Bricker and Sherman Scott will direct.

A film based on the life of the late Very Rev. John T. Crowley, padre of Death Valley, is being prepared by Maurice Cleary and Harry Lachman. The new producing company plans three pictures a year for major release.

Sergeant York Feature

Jack L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production for Warner Brothers, has announced that Jesse L. Lasky will produce "The Amazing Story of Sergeant Alvin C. York" at the Warner Bros. studio in association with Hal B. Wallis. A $2,000,000 budget has been set for the picture and the World War hero will be technical adviser. The deal with Jesse Lasky marks the advent of the second individual producer on the Warner lot, the first being Frank Capra whose "The Life of John Doe" will be filmed there and released by Warners.

Warner Brothers announced that the "Sears Drive Ad Sales Week" was the most successful in its history, that in every Warner exchange new highs were recorded for the number of accessories sold, or rented. Advertising accessories sold included the new Silk Screen Accessories line made available with the release of "Virginia City." The slogan for the drive was "An Advertising Order with Every Show."

Collier Young Heads Scenarists

Collier Young, new RKO story department head, will be in charge of all scenarists working at the studio, according to announcement of Harry Edington.

Herb MacIntyre, captain of the Ned Depinet Drive and Harry Michalson, short subjects sales manager, have returned to New York following their tour of 38 RKO exchanges in the United States and Canada.

Andy Smith's Eastern Division has topped the Western Division headed by Cresson E. Smith in RKO's "Smith Month." The contest was based on combined shipments of film against a quota. The three leading exchanges were Calgary, H. F. Taylor, manager; Toronto, J. F. Meyers, manager, and Buffalo, C. Boasberg, manager. The Canadian district headed by L. M. Devaney led all the other districts. The New York branch, headed by Robert Wolff, is now leading in the Depinet sales drive.

Gene Raymond has been signed to a new contract by RKO. He will be co-starred with Wendy Barrie in a Cliff Reid production.

Paul Whiteman and his orchestra have been signed to appear in "Second Chorus," Boris Morros production for RKO. The deal is reported to be for four weeks work beginning June 15th at a total salary of $50,000. It was also reported that MGM had been negotiating for Whiteman for a Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland picture.

Mayflower Productions, owned by Erich Pommer, Charles Laughton and RKO, will resume production in England, according to Mr. Pommer, who is now producing for RKO. He has been assigned to produce the play, "Two on an Island."

19th U.A. Producer

Neville E. Neville, English producer, is the 19th producer listed to date by United Artists for 1940-41. Mr. Neville heads Aurora Pictures, Ltd., and formerly was associated with Aldwych. He is to make three pictures for U.A. release. "An Englishman's Home," made by Neville, is to be released in this country by Columbia under the title "Invasion." United Artists will release the film elsewhere.

Maurice Silverstone announced that "Rebecca" was one of the biggest grossing pictures the company has released in its 20 years of operations.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is preparing a new series of "Crime Does Not Pay" for the next season. The first will be a story on the "baby barter" racket. The story is being prepared by Howard Dimsdale. The second release scheduled is "Crime Merchant," the story of "fences" and the screen play is being written by Julius Hochfelder. Both shorts are being produced by Jack Chertok and Richard Goldstone.

More Independent Activities

Academic Film Company, headed by Milton J. Salzburg and Harold Baumstone, has been organized to produce and distribute a series of two-reel films based on important events in American history. "Our Constitution," the first subject, is ready for release.

Richard C. Kahn and Louis Weiss, Gateway Productions, have made a national tour of exchanges to make arrangements for distribution of two series of six films and four exploitation pictures which the company will make on its 1940-41 schedule.

LOCATION TRIP COST $150,000

Frank Lloyd, producer-director of "The Howards of Virginia" for Columbia, estimates that the location trip to Williamsburg, Va., will cost $150,000. The film is based on the Elizabeth Page best-selling novel, "The Tree of Liberty." Williamsburg has been restored to its Colonial aspect by the Rockefeller Foundation at a cost of $20,000,000.

Mr. Lloyd, Sidney Buchman, scenarist; Cary Grant, Richard Carlson, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Alan Marshall and other members of the cast, and a staff of 40 technicians, who made the trip in a special 16 car train loaded with 80 crates of Colonial costumes, are in Williamsburg.

Widespread interest in the filming attracted thousands of sightseers with all available accommodations booked solid for two weeks.

FOX MAKES FIRST ANNOUNCEMENT OF PRODUCT FOR 1940-41, LISTING 52

Eighteen Features Will Be Personally Produced by Zanuck, Sales Force Is Told at Chicago Convention

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation opened the 1940 sales convention season on Friday, with its meeting at the Drake hotel, Chicago, through Sunday.

There will be no numerical change in the company's commitment for 1940-41. Herman Wobber, general manager of distribution, announced 52 features, 52 one-reel subjects and Fox Movietonews to the 280 field, home office and studio persons attending.

Eighteen of the 52 features will be personally produced by Darryl F. Zanuck, vice president in charge of production; four by Sol M. Wurtzel, executive producer, and four by Lucien Hubbard, associate producer, the company's announcement stated.

Important heretofore on Fox's product roster have been the series-features, the new year bringing four Jane Withers comedies, four Cisco Kid features starring Cesar Romero, and four productions from the company's London studios, all included in the 52 "regular" productions.

Highlight Productions

Cited as new season's highlights, among others, are "Brigham Young," "The Great Commandment," a spectacle about the days of Christ, and "Down to the Sea in Ships," a big film in the silent days.

Several will have a present day international political color: "I Married a Nazi," "Comrade Stalin," being among them.

Darryl Zanuck will be assisted in production executive producer Wurtzel and associate producer Hubbard, Harry Joe Brown, Ralph Dietrich, Raymond Griffith, Fred Kohlmar, Nunnaly Johnson, Gene Markey, Walter Morosco, Kenneth Macgowan and John Stone.

Stars and featured players under contract for 1940-41 pictures listed by the company are:

Among the pictures now being prepared for early production for 1940-41 are the following:

Brigham Young, described as "one of the biggest productions in Twentieth Century-Fox history," now before the cameras with a cast composed of Tyrone Power, Dean Jagger, Linda Darnell, Jane Darwell, Mary Astor, John Carradine, Vincent Price, Brian Donlevy, Ann Todd and Fuzzy Knight. Henry Hathaway will direct from the story of the Mormon leader by Louis Bromfield.

The Great Commandment, a spectacle, "parallelling the happenings of today, as it relates the drama of a crushed and helpless people, during the days of Christ, and their desperate attempts to throw off the hated Roman yoke." Tyrone Power will star.

Down to the Sea in Ships, drama of whaling days, with an all-star cast.

The Great Profile, gleaned from the front pages of newspapers, in which Adolphe Menjou will be in the title role.

I Married a Nazi, expose of life in the Third Reich in which the American wife of a disciple of Hitler is the storm center.

The Return of Frank James, to be produced in color, will have Henry Fonda in the title role.

Elsa Maxwell's Public Deb No. 1, story of a spoiled daughter of the rich, which will have a cast headed by Brenda Joyce, George Murphy, Mischa Auer, Ralph Bellamy, and Maxie Rosenbloom. Gregory Ratoff will direct.

Down Argentine Way, a Darryl Zanuck color feature, a musical with a South American background. Carmen Miranda, South American songstress will have one of the leads.

Young People, already in production with Shirley Temple, Jack Oakie, Charlotte Greenwood, George Montgomery and Arleen Whelan in the cast. Allan Dwan is directing.

Fifth Avenue, an adaptation of a new novel, "Manhattan Holiday," by Polan Banks, a Zanuck production.

Additional Stories

Other stories from which the 52 features will be chosen include the following:

How Green Was My Valley, Richard Llewellyn's novel.
For Beauty's Sake, by Clarence Budington Kelland.
Western Union, a Zane Grey novel.

Highway 66.
Miss Pilgrim's Progress.
Dance Hall.
Breach of Discipline.
Falling Star.
Strange Bedfellows.
The Bride Wore Crutches.

Twentieth Century-Fox may distribute several films made by outside producers in 1940-41, it was to be announced at the convention. If the deals are consummated the pictures will be on separate contracts in addition to the regular program.

More Color Use

An increased use of color in Twentieth Century-Fox short subjects was foreshadowed by Mr. Wobber, in an announcement at the sales convention. In addition to the regular semi-weekly issues of Movietonenews, the company will release 52 single reel subjects during the coming season, Mr. Wobber said.

Amplifying his statement in a detailed analysis of short subjects production for the coming year, Truman Talley, producer of Movietonenews and short subjects, and his staff, comprised of Lew Lehr, Lowell Thomas, Ed Thorgersen, Edmund Reek and Vyvyan Donner, informed the convention of their plans.

"The success enjoyed by our color short subjects and the additional revenue they brought in, have prompted us to expand our program for the coming year in that direction," said Mr. Talley. "We feel that our production plans are sufficiently flexible to allow for expansion or contraction if necessary."

COAST FAIR TO HAVE FILM SET

Contracts have been signed for the construction of a 6,000-seat indoor theatre at the Golden Gate International Exposition, San Francisco, to be called "Stage 9", where fairgoers will see actual motion picture production. F. Herrick Herrick, former Twentieth Century-Fox director, will direct a full-length color film, to be produced day-by-day before audiences. Leading roles have been assigned Marian Marsh and Neil Hamilton. A Hollywood syndicate, including Richard Barthelmess, is backing the production. Major studios, it is said, have agreed to cooperate, with each having a special "week" in which various stars will make personal appearances.

280 FIELD DELEGATES HEAR PLANS

will be four single reel productions of "Lowell Thomas' Magic Carpet of Movietone" series. The first of these, "Land of Flowers" has already been filmed in color.

The first of six "Ed Thorgersen's Sport Reviews," "Vacation Time," has already been photographed in color. It has been decided to make at least half of this series in color next season.

Vyvyan Donner's color "Fashion Forecasts" will be four in number as in the past, and the company will also produce four "Adventures of a Newsreel Cameraman" and four Lew Lehr Comedies.

Two of the four "Father Hubbard's Alaskan Adventures," made in co-operation with the "Glacier Priest," "Eskimo Trails" and "Isle of Mysteries," are already in preparation and the remaining two are being readied for production.

A full half of the total of 26 Terrytoons made during the coming year will be in color, Paul Terry, their producer, told the convention. This is a greater use of color than Terry has made before.

Delegates to the convention were as follows:

Stage Show in St. Louis

The first stage show in St. Louis since shortly before Christmas is scheduled for the St. Louis theatre the week starting Friday. Ted Lewis and his troupe will be the headliners. The 4,000-seat house has been used principally in the last three years by Fanchon & Marco as a Class B film house. Prices, now 25 and 35 cents, will be raised for the stage show, which will be accompanied by a film.

Name Pioneers' Committee

CHICAGO CENSORSHIP AGAIN IS UNDER FIRE

This Time It's Civil Liberties League Demanding Police Censorship Be Dropped

Chicago's oft-attacked system placing the censorship of motion pictures for theatres in the hands of the local police department, this week faced its strongest opposition in a decade. The Civil Liberties League, after weeks of protests, took its demands for a new system directly to Edward J. Kelly, mayor, and James P. Allman, police commissioner.

Attack Trailer Scenes

Ira Latimer, Civil Liberties League secretary, said Monday that his group and others were drafting an ordinance governing a new censorship setup, closing many of the "loopholes" now existing, including the "sexy" lines and scenes permitted in advance trailers shown before audiences with children, scenes which they said were often the very ones deleted by the censors in the feature.

"These scenes shown in trailers put over the ideas as well as if they appeared in the full picture," declared Mr. Latimer, adding that his group demands censorship of trailers also.

The League secretary said the motion picture censorship situation in Chicago would be "torn wide open" shortly. The shows in parts of south State Street (mostly socalled "sex films") will be investigated.

"Fast" dialogue line in features also are under attack. Some attention is promised for the specific censoring, or rating, of films for children.

Any eliminations made by the Chicago board usually apply to most of Illinois, because prints are serviced by film exchanges out of Chicago.

The five-member Censor Board, a part of the Crime Prevention Division of the Chicago Police Department, last week passed "Strange Cargo" without any cuts or restrictions, giving it a general permit. "Primrose Path" was given an adult permit ("pink ticket"). But there were no cuts. Both these films were banned in their entirety by the Detroit censors. The Legion of Decency banned "Cargo," gave "Primrose" a "B" rating.

Millions of Feet Reviewed

The Chicago Board, which is under the supervision of Police Lieutenant Harry Costello, and Commissioner Allman in the last ten years has reviewed 86,306,000 feet of film, made 13,900 cuts and rejected 243 films. In the first three months of this year, the board inspected 1,828,000 feet of film in 411 pictures, rejected seven, gave 13 "Pink" or adult certificates, made 90 cuts.

On the board are four women and one man, all civil service employees, as follows: Edith E. Kerr, with 25 years of service; Anna M. Costello, 22; Cora C. Doolittle, 12; William A. Foust, 20, and Amy Louise Adams, now on leave of absence, 21 years. Lt. Harry Costello reviews pictures only when the board is deadlocked.

The board, according to Lt. Costello, has its own standards, and political, racial, religious or economic factors do not enter into the decisions.

The Civil Liberties Committee, demanding that the board be abolished, suggests the following changes in the ordinance that controls the board.

That the ordinance provide for review of films for the sole purpose of determining whether pictures may be seen by children;

That newsreels and educational films be exempted from such review;

That a separate board, independent of the police department, be established to review films; that it consist of five persons selected for their training or experience in psychology, education or such other fields;

That the board be required to make public a complete report at least once a year.

In the past year this group was active in a campaign to have a number of films passed over the rulings of the board, among them "Prof. Mamlock," "Hitler, the Beast of Berlin," now called "Goose Step," and "The Living Dead."

Britain Bans "Dole" Film

The British Board of Film Censors has refused to sanction the production of a film based on the play, "Love on the Dole," unless the script were altered considerably. The play deals with unemployment and has been staged all over Britain. It also ran on Broadway.

Lift "Ecstasy" Ban

The motion picture "Ecstasy," banned in Baltimore since 1936, will now be permitted to be shown there, minus 18 "obnoxious" scenes. Judge Rowland K. Adams, in Baltimore city court, this week signed an order vacating an injunction issued by Judge Joseph N. Ulman and permitting the Czechoslovakian film to be shown in a downtown theatre. Judge Ulman issued the injunction in December, 1936, after a theatre owner had advertised certain portions of the picture which had been ordered deleted by the court.

Also filed in city court was an answer by the board of censors in which the three members signified they were willing to permit the showing with the deletions.

Sponsor "Censorship" Meeting

The Philadelphia Civil Liberties Committee is sponsoring a meeting on "censorship" at Whittier Auditorium in that city April 12th. H. T. Craven, local theatre critic; Allan Scott, radio news commentator, and Morris L. Ernst, counsel for the American Civil Liberties Union, will participate in the discussion.

Ohio March Eliminations

Fifty-nine eliminations, the largest number since January, 1937, were ordered by the Ohio censors in March, in reviewing 497 reels. In February they reviewed 459 reels, from which 39 eliminations were ordered. Figures for March, 1939, were 733 reels reviewed and 33 eliminations.

Appeals Board Hears Plea

Named by Albany, N. Y., newsmen a year ago as motion picture state censorship's No. 1 argument of the year, the controversy over New York State's ban of "The Birth of a Baby" finally reached the court of appeals in Albany Monday, after many motions in lower courts. The seven justices, headed by Chief Judge Irving Lehman, heard Charles H. Tuttle, former candidate for governor, plead for a reversal of the ban by Irwin Esmond, censor.

Mr. Tuttle represented the American Committee on Maternal Welfare, Inc., co-appellant with Sam Citron, distributor.

While "The Birth of a Baby" is "not entertainment in the sense of amusement," Mr. Tuttle asserted it was "entertainment in the sense of drama."

Charles A. Brind, Jr., law director of the State Education Department, told the court that Mr. Citron was the original figure involved and that the American Committee on Maternal Welfare did not appear "in the picture" until after Mr. Esmond's refusal to grant a license had been upheld by the commissioner of education, Frank P. Graves.

Film Broadcasts Will Continue

In the 41st week of industry cooperation, the short wave broadcasts of motion picture news and gossip, to Europe and Central and South America seem to have caught hold, say the international divisions of the National Broadcasting Company, and Columbia Broadcasting System; and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, which, with the large film companies, supplies the networks with motion picture information.

On Monday, executives of the two networks, after displaying analyses of mail response, declared the broadcasts good, and that they would continue. Will H. Hays, president of the MPPDA, two weeks ago told the organization's directors that the broadcasts were being exceptionally well received.

For Goodwill in Foreign Markets

The broadcasts were started to create goodwill for the American film industry in foreign markets, especially in Latin America; also to counteract German short wave stations' propaganda for German films.

The NBC incorporates the MPPDA material into special programs on the Hollywood scene; rewriting it, or choosing from it. Additionally, it broadcasts in six languages, once a week in each language: the languages being English, French, Spanish, Italian, German, and Portugese. The CBS broadcasts in only three languages, English, Spanish, and Portugese; does comparatively little revision, the material usually being read by a commentator. It, too, broadcasts in each language, once each week.

The NBC estimated that 35 per cent of the 5,000 letters received per month were prompted by its short wave motion picture broadcasts.

Most from Latin America

Of the letters received by the NBC foreign division, 51¼ per cent are from Latin America, the division asserts. Of this percentage, 57 per cent are from the Carribean area; the rest from the southern part of South America, and the northwest coast. Of this percentage, too, 41¾ per cent are written in Spanish; nine and one-half per cent, in Portugese.

It was said, by NBC's foreign division manager, Guy Hickok, that the best response to the concern's short wave broadcasts had always come from the Carribean area and the northwest coast of South America, despite the large response from Argentina at the time the Louis-Godoy fight was transmitted by short wave to that country and others, and re-broadcast.

The letters, mostly, ask for photographs of favorite stars, or commend the programs. The company has imposed a rule not to send more than two photographs to each fan. Some letters ask for eight, ten, two dozen pictures.

The NBC, during the latter six months of 1939, sent out 16,500 post-card size photographs of motion picture stars. It had been supplied with 45,000, by the MPPDA. The company pays transportation on these photographs. The photographs are of 96 Hollywood stars.

The MPPDA supplies only the NBC with photographs.

The CBS programs have elicited less response, Elizabeth Ann Tucker, in charge of the international division, admitted. Only "about a dozen" letters a month, concerning motion picture broadcasts, are received, she said, but she added:

"We are not discouraged by that: we are convinced that they just don't write down there."

The letters are mostly commendatory, she said. There are "comparatively few" requests for pictures," she said.

Old 'Store-Show' Remodeled, Opened

The reopening of the only living store-show in Tampa, Fla., brings back memories of the days when this grand old nickelodeon first turned on the lights. The Prince, it was known then, more than a quarter century ago, when the late William H. Carroll bought a store building; built an inclined floor over the old one, kicked out the store front to leave a six-foot space for a lobby, which housed a tiny box office on one side and one for the manager on the other. A tin lined projection booth was placed above the entrance and exit and there were some 300 three-ply seats and a canvas sheet stretched on the back wall, well lathered with kalsomine.

$21 Weekly Nut

Three reels for a nickel and over and over they rolled from 1 o'clock to 11 with not a vacant seat after the supper hour and turning 'em away all day on Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. Expenses were small. There was the rent and light bill, an operator and rewind boy, who also operated during the meal hour; a cashier, who was relieved by the manager for her supper hour, and a porter. Three reels came in daily from a nearby town with seldom over 40 cents charges, and the paper, a one-sheet for each reel, came along in the same can. The cost of the complete service was $21 per week.

Then one day hell started popping over in Europe, and Uncle Sam took a hand. He called on the theatres to collect a cent for him on each dime, or fraction thereof, from the customers. This odd cent business was going to make a lot of penny change and the manager didn't like the idea. Instead of making it 5c and 1c, why not make it 9c and 1c?

So the Prince became a dime show with hardly a protest. Just as many attended and that meant double receipts, less, of course, the war tax.

Bought by Circuit

Then came the day when the S. A. Lynch circuit invaded Tampa, buying up theatres. But not the Prince. However, soon it became known that the circuit had taken a 90-day option on a store building across the street. Before the 90-day option had expired, Mr. Carroll set a price. So the circuit took it over.

Then the Publix circuit took over all the Tampa houses and started building bigger and better theatres. The Prince was sold out lock, stock and barrel to a dealer, with the understanding that the house must be wrecked. It was. Fixtures were pulled out, all equipment was sold. Only the raised floor and booth were left.

Reopened and Closed

Soon after the lease expired, J. E. Ramos leased the house, re-equipped it, and opened up with the old name, The Prince. A small stage was built, and some tin dressing rooms for actors, and now tab shows held the boards along with the picture programs. Sickness caused Mr. Ramos to turn the house over to James L. Raulerson. Then came sound with all new equipment, plus higher rentals, and the little gold mine started producing red ink instead of gold, and the lights went out again.

Years trooped past the closed doors, but not permanently. Folk get hunches, and the other day the little old Prince burst forth in all its former glory, not as a nickelodeon but a modern talking picture theatre, again under Mr. Raulerson's management. It takes three jitneys to crash the gate, and the name is higher, too—it's the Rex.

LEGION CONDEMNED 9 IN YEAR, CRITICIZED 50

One Major Company Feature Receives "C" Rating, for First Time; Two Separately Classed

Nine features were condemned in 1939 by the Legion of Decency, and fifty films were considered objectionable in part, of which 25 were produced by large American film companies. As in preceding years, no film made by a major American company was condemned in its entirety in 1939, according to the Legion's annual report.

This year, in March, for the first time since the Legion began reviewing pictures in 1936, a picture made by one of the members of the organized industry committed to self-regulation under the Production Code was turned down. "Strange Cargo" (MGM) was the first picture of a large company given a "C," or "condemned classification.

This week the Legion published a complete list of films reviewed last year.

573 Features Reviewed

In the 1939 Legion business year, which ran from November, 1938, to November, 1939, the New York office reviewed 573 feature motion pictures. 511 of these were domestically produced; 62 were made in foreign countries in six different languages.

Of the 573 features, 312 were rated Class A, Section I (Unobjectionable for General Patronage); 200 in Class A, Section II (Unobjectionable for Adults); 50 Class B (Objectionable in Part); nine Class C (Condemned) and two in the "Separately Classified" group.

Monogram did not have any picture classified in the B group in 1939 or in 1938. The 1939 rating of the American companies according to the percentage of films reviewed and rated Class B or objectionable in part was as follows: United Artists, 15 per cent; Warner Brothers, 11 per cent; MGM, 10 per cent; Grand National, 6.7 per cent; RKO, 4.3 per cent; 20th-Fox, 3.8 per cent; Columbia, 3.7 per cent; Paramount, 3 per cent; Republic, 2.2 per cent, and Universal, 2 per cent.

The nine pictures condemned last year, as was the case of the five rejected in 1938, were principally of the "sex" or "hygiene" type of film. The features rejected in 1939 were "Children of the Sun" (Public Welfare Pictures Corporation), "Human Wreckage" (Cinema Service Corporation), "Indiscretions" ("Nouveau Testament" Tri-National), "Mad Youth" (Willis Kent-Real Life Drama), "L'Orage" (Tri-National Films, Inc.), "The Pace That Kills" (Willis Kent), "The Puritan" (Derby Lenauer International Films, Inc.), "Wages of Sin" (Willis Kent-Real Life Drama) and "With a Smile" (Films Marquis-Pathe Cinema of France).

As in 1938 two films were separately classified in 1939, "Spain in Arms" and "The Will of the People" ("Spain Fights On"). In 1938 the two pictures given a separate rating were "The Birth of a Baby" and "Blockade."

10 Pictures Classified For Current Week

Of 10 pictures reviewed and classified by the National Legion of Decency in its listing for the current week four were approved for general patronage, four were found unobjectionable for adults and two were cited as objectionable in part. The films and their classification follow.

Class A-1, Unobjectionable for General Patronage: "The Biscuit Eater," "Golden Gloves," "Star Dust," "Texas Stagecoach." Class A-2, Unobjectionable for Adults: "And One Was Beautiful," "Beyond Tomorrow," "Lights Out in Europe" (documentary), ""Til We Meet Again." Class B, Objectionable in Part: "Johnny Apollo," "King of the Lumberjacks."

Paul Terry Recalls 25 Years Of Animated Cartooning

TODAY: THE OWL AND THE PUSSY-CAT VISIT A JUSTICE OF THE PEACE

TWENTY-FIVE years ago this month Paul Terry, owner and guiding genius of the Terry-Toon studios in New Rochelle, N. Y., finished and sold his first animated motion picture cartoon. It was "Little Herman," a 400-foot pen and ink imitation of a performance of Hermann the Great, and it was sold, with the benefit of a little showmanship involving the packing of the projection room with children, to the old Thannhauser company for $1.35 a foot.

The picture, first of a long series of what are not known as Terry-Toons, was the result of three months of back-breaking labor in a little room on 42nd Street in New York, where the Cameo theatre now stands. It was made without benefit of the celluloid and fixed background method on which Mr. Terry now holds patents.

Inspired by McCay's Work

Reminiscing this week on a quarter century of work in the medium in which he and others have since become famous, Mr. Terry said he owed the inspiration for that first cartoon to Winsor McCay, famous newspaper cartoonist of the period. Mr. Terry had been in New York four years, having come from San Francisco search of new fields to conquer, when he attended an artists' dinner at which Mr. McCay screened "Gertie the Dinosaur," an incomplete animated cartoon on which he had been working for some time.

The cartoon and Mr. McCay's enthusiasm for the medium for which he predicted an important future intrigued Mr. Terry and he forthwith sank most of his slender resources in equipment for the 42nd Street workshop.

With the completed "Little Herman" under his arm, Mr. Terry took a train for New Rochelle to try out his salesmanship on the Thannhauser officials. He met a cool reception, but he argued and pleaded until it was agreed that the cartoon would be screened later in the day.

Mr. Terry used the interval to good advantage. When the time came for the screening he had the projection room packed with children from the streets of New Rochelle. As "Little Herman" stepped out on the screen, bowed, tipped his hat and began to take out of the hat everything from rabbits to elephants, the audience roared. "Little Herman" went into the Thannhauser magazine reel.

All One Man Labor

During the following year he contributed several more subjects to the magazine reel. It was all one-man work. No one had thought in terms of the organization by which the present cartoons are turned out. Before starting his second picture, however, Mr. Terry determined to find a simpler method of production.

McCay had started by drawing a complete new picture for each frame. Background as well as animated figures had to be redrawn for each frame.

Mr. Terry thought of trying celluloid and he had some sheets made up. These were better to work on and their complete transparency enabled him to make one drawing of a background on opaque paper and then repeat only the moving figures on the celluloids. With this improved method his second picture, "Farmer Alfalfa," was less back-breaking labor.

Made Aesop's Fables Series

After the Thannhauser days Mr. Terry worked through several different associations. He served during the World War, doing animation of medical subjects for the Army Medical Corps and then returned to making comedy cartoons. Howard Estabrook suggested to him the use of Aesop's Fables for a series of cartoons and the suggestion resulted in a series which continued for nine years, until the coming of sound.

Aesop's Fables started with the staff of 19 men who had been engaged in producing the previous comedies.

At present a staff of 100 men are engaged in making the Terry-Toons for Twentieth Century-Fox release. They are shown in more than 10,000 theatres in the United States and Canada.

Rockefeller Grants Total $225,800

The Rockefeller Foundation in 1939 made grants totaling $225,800 for studies and developments of social and educational aspects of films and the drama, it is disclosed in the annual report of Raymond B. Fosdick, president, released in New York this week. The foundation in its appropriations totaling $11,219,442, also include $126,000 for radio.

The Rockefeller interests—besides the Foundation work—is considerably interested in motion pictures, in Rockefeller Center and the Radio City Music Hall.

In the field of films the largest grant was $60,000 to the American Film Center for general expenses in a two-year period. The Center was established in 1938 to act as a central agency for promoting the production, distribution and use of films for educational and cultural purposes.

The Foundation also appropriated $7,500 to the National Committee on International Intellectual Cooperation for the development of international exchange of educational films, and $19,380 to the National Film Society of Canada for the same purpose.

In the drama field, grants included $17,500 to Vassar College toward the cost of a report on the Federal Theatre Project and for a survey on the promotion of community drama on a national basis; $25,000 to the Studio Theatre School of Buffalo for the development of school and community drama; $25,000 to the National Theatre Conference for fellowships in advanced drama training, and $30,000 to the Stevens Institute of Technology for research in the control of sound and light for dramatic purposes.

The Foundation gave Harvard University $24,000 to help establish a lectureship in radio broadcasting. To this lectureship the University appointed Charles A. Siepmann, formerly with the British Broadcasting Corporation. Princeton University received a grant of $17,500 for radio study.

Charity Fund Film

A short subject made for the Greater New York Fund by Paramount will be shown in the theatres of the major circuits as well as independents in New York. Burgess Meredith is the narrator. The Fund serves 393 voluntary social welfare and health agencies throughout greater New York. The Fund was launched in a Town Meeting at Madison Square Garden last week in which stage, screen and radio stars contributed their services.

Bull Fights Lose To 'Movies' Now

by JAMES LOCKHART
in Mexico City

The gross monthly income of all local motion picture theatres amounts to approximately $216,500, according to the report of the municipal treasurer. There are 71 active film houses in the city, which has a population of 1,500,000. The average wage of the working population of the city is about $45 per month.

The total average monthly expenditure on entertainment in the city is about $350,000. Bull fights, second to the screen in popularity, draw about $37,500 a month, and legitimate theatres approximately $33,500.

Union Proposal Hit

The proposal by the workers' union that its members be paid off on a basis of half wages in cash and the rest from shares of profits from films as a solution of industry problems here is not as feasible as it seems, according to the opinion of some producers. However, some distributors and studio owners like the proposition so well that they have agreed to extend the producers long term credits.

The objecting producers hold that the offer does not mean half wages at all, that the share in profits plan is but a deferred charge against production. It is even hinted that the debts producers would acquire from the profit-sharing phase would pile up so thick and fast that they would equal the value of an entire company, or even companies, a circumstance that might result in labor taking over the business in liquidation of these debts.

Some producers believe that a straight 25 per cent reduction in wages would be a big help. The workers' union is against the pay cut angle. Other producers who are perhaps pessimists even murmur that expropriation of the entire picture industry, at least in its domestic phases, is the real object of what they style the astonishing proposition of the union

Mexican production this year will prove a disappointment in point of quantity, unless more capital is forthcoming. Up to March 20th, only six pictures had been completed. At this rate 1940 production will be around 24 films.

Only three of the founders of the Association of Mexican Motion Picture Producers are still in the picture business. They are Jose Bohr, Ramon Pereda and Miguel Contreras Torres. There were 13 founders. The association now has 29 members.

Plans 12 Features

Rene Cardona, noted Mexican producer, has arranged for the consecutive production of 12 features. This plan is expected to go well as mass making is counted upon to give low overhead and permit bargain rates for distributors and exhibitors.

The case of a made-in-Mexico picture being a failure in Mexico but a success in the United States is "Junto Pero No Revueltos" (Together but Well Behaved). The film failed to make expenses in Mexico but garnered $18,000 net profit north of the Rio Grande.

Argentine producers have supplied Mexican distributors with some 40 films, almost without cost, to seek wider showings in this country. "La Puerta Cerrada" (The Closed Door) grossed 67,000 pesos ($11,150) at the Cine Encanto, Mexico City, in a three week run.

Exhibitors of Nayarit, Sinaloa and Sonora States, among the most important of the Mexican Pacific zone, warded off a general strike by making labor contracts that are similar to those in effect in other parts of Mexico.

The Chinese Palace, a 4,500 seat theatre, has opened in Mexico City. It is similar in style and appointments to the Chinese theatre, Hollywood.

LABEL PROPAGANDA, SAYS DAVID SELZNICK

Warns Synopsis Requirement in Neely Bill Would Delay Independents' Sales

David Oliver Selznick, producer of "Gone with the Wind," MGM and "Rebecca," for United Artists, arrived in New York last Friday from Hollywood with some fresh observations on old and new subjects of production, distribution, exhibition, the Neely Bill, costs and income and whatnot.

Sitting in the board room of his Selznick International Pictures New York headquarters (picture in pictorial section), Mr. Selznick observed, briefly, that pictures containing propaganda should be labeled propaganda; that "big" pictures will increasingly be the rule in the film industry; that producers never made much money with "B" pictures; that stars were never made with "B" pictures; that the domestic market is "just being tapped," and "big" pictures may help the process but must have higher admission prices; that production costs must rise more, inevitably; that he will spend about $1,500,000 for "Joan of Arc"; that color costs will come down, and in five years every picture will be made in it; that it pays for the producer to be faithful to the book from which a picture is made; that the synopsis clause in the Neely Bill is bad; and that the independent producer's product will be increasingly sought by the large companies.

Opposes Realism in Films

"Realism" in pictures is all wrong, said the producer. "I don't believe in it," he boomed. "Propaganda pictures or social pictures should be advertised as such, or the public is being cheated. They pay their money to be entertained, not solicited. Many pictures are ruined by directors striving for critical acclaim." He added, however, that "'Grapes of Wrath' is a great picture."

The producer of "Gone With the Wind" said he might spend about $1,500,000 on "Joan of Arc," in which Ingrid Bergman will star, but commented, "Anyone who spends $4,000,000 on a picture today is insane. I don't even delude myself that it can be done again. In part, 'Gone With the Wind' was necessitated by the public demand for Gable."

"Big" Films, Higher Admissions

The domestic gross for pictures can be made higher, he remarked, but that demands big pictures and higher admission prices, and "in the process of doing all this, I believe a great many producers will go broke."

The majors will make fewer pictures, and the independents more, he predicted.

He called "extraordinary successes" the only cure for the film industry's situation.

"There is so little profit in the little ones," he added.

It is "ridiculous" to charge the same admission for a large budget picture as for a "$75,000 quickie," he went on.

Recalls Thalberg Plan

A chain of first-run high admission theatres for "big" pictures, one theatre to each key city, as advocated by Harry Brandt, New York independent exhibitor leader, was first suggested several years ago by the late Irving G. Thalberg, MGM producer, he said.

Mr. Selznick said costs in Hollywood "cannot be brought down; the fact is, they're going up."

Union wages contribute more than star salaries to huge production costs, according to the producer. He estimated stars' checks were "10 to 15 per cent" of the total outlay. He hastened to add, however, that the unions are entitled to what they get." He was not including talent organizations among the unions.

Hollywood writers, he said, are underpaid.

Mr. Selznick noted that production costs had been geared to the world market, but feared that "Hollywood was not yet aware of the magnitude" of the recession.

He did not make "Rebecca" in color, he said, because it was "not suited."

This picture, he remarked, represents "the dividends paid by extreme faithfulness to the book. It is more faithful to the book than is 'Gone With the Wind.'"

Protests Synopsis Clause

The synopsis clause in the Neely Bill, he said, would prevent an independent producer from selling his picture until he has finished it. Furthermore, "if you force people to stick to their synopsis, you not only hamper them but inevitably you prevent change for the better, because, obviously, the changes that are made are to improve the picture."

If the bill becomes law, the great companies, "despite themselves, would break into units," he said.

He noted a trend, in any event, towards more and better independent pictures. He cited Warner Brothers' acquisition of Jesse L. Lasky.

Mr. Selznick will make at least two pictures for United Artists release next season. Besides "Joan of Arc," which he definitely will make, he may produce a picture based on the life of Jesus Christ.

The producer is conferring with MGM and United Artists foreign managers, in New York, on foreign distribution of "Rebecca" and "Gone With the Wind." The picture of the South is opening at three London theatres simultaneously, and will play in England on a 70 per cent basis.

The picture also is being sent to India and the Philippines, in English version.

Mr. Selznick confirmed the report that he would make a series of Robert Benchley short subjects, but did not know whether he would release the shorts through MGM.

Plans of New York's Mayor Fiorello La Guardia to make the city a production center for motion pictures are practical, Mr. Selznick told reporters for the New York newspapers, later in the afternoon, last Friday.

Dark Command

(Republic)

Historical Epoch

Some time ago in New York, James R. Grainger, president of Republic's distributing corporation, announced that the company had achieved a record breaking number of accounts for its product, and that "Man of Conquest," its then most expensive production to date, had played in more houses than any other picture of the studio. "Man of Conquest" was the struggle of a band of settlers against Mexico for the possession of Texas, and reached its climax with the battle of the Alamo. Comes now Republic with "Dark Command," which tops "Man of Conquest" in both American historical panorama and production quality, and the company puts far greater hopes into this.

"Dark Command" tells the story of bloody Kansas in the dark days preceding and during the Civil War, of massacres by bands of guerrillas, of gun running, and of the fight between the North and the south for the territory. Embossed on this background is the tale of a love triangle, in which the principals are a Southern girl, a stalwart young Texan representing law and order, and a figure of history, school teacher by day and raider by night.

John Wayne and Claire Trevor, who appeared together in "Man of Conquest" and other large scale outdoor action pictures—RKO's "Alleghany Uprising" and Walter Wanger's "Stagecoach"—and Walter Pidgeon are starred in this historical drama. They are supported by Roy Rogers, himself a star in Republic's westerns and Number 3 outdoor action money maker in the MOTION PICTURE-FAME poll of exhibitors; George "Gabby" Hayes, Porter Hall, Marjorie Main, Raymond Walburn, Joseph Sawyer, Helen MacKellar, J. Farrell MacDonald and Trevor Bardette.

First purchasing the best selling novel, "The Dark Command," by W. R. Burnett, the studio assigned its top producer, Sol Siegel, to the picture. Siegel in turn went outside of the lot to select Grover Jones, Lionel Houser and F. Hugh Herbert, each with a long string of writing credits to do the screenplay. Jan Fortune, who worked on the script of "Man of Conquest," did the adaptation. Then Raoul Walsh, whose last previous picture was "The Roaring Twenties" at Warners, was signed to direct.

The result is a broad history of Kansas during its darkest days, roundly amenable to vigorous exploitation campaigns. One of the darkest figures of American history, Cantrell was a school teacher who turned raider and pillaged and burned in a desire to fulfill his ambition as a leader of men.

Played by Pidgeon, "Cantrell" turns gun runner when defeated for town marshal by "Bob Seton" (Wayne) and then engages in the business of slave running. When the Civil War starts, his guerrilla band steals uniforms of both sides and pillages the entire state. Swayed by his pseudo aid to her brother "Fletch" (Rogers), "Mary McCloud" marries him, only to discover his true character. "Seton," still in love with "Mary," resigns to save her from a crowd seeking to run her out of Lawrence because of her husband's depredations. He escorts "Mary" to "Cantrell's" camp, but is captured himself and is to be executed. "Seton," "Mary" and "Fletch" escape on learning that Lawrence is next in the path of the "Dark Command" of "Cantrell," and arouse the townsfolk. Lawrence is pillaged. "Cantrell's" mother is killed trying to stop her son, and the raider himself meets death.

Saturday's Children

(Warner-First National)

Middle Class Comedy Drama

Although this is a picturization of Maxwell Anderson's Pulitzer Prize play of several years ago, showmen who elect to represent it, exploitation wise, as a fourth in the sequence of pictures launched with "Four Daughters" and including "Four Wives," will not be misinforming their customers save technically. Although it does not deal with the fictional family of those pictures, it is, as they were, a script from the Epstein Brothers, Julius and Philip, employing the same variety of dialogue to the same effect. Further, it stars the John Garfield of "Four Daughters" and features the Claude Rains of that picture and the others, with Anne Shirley, the daughter in this case. It was produced by Henry Blanke and directed by Vincent Sherman.

Although a Hollywood preview gathering may not be in all cases typical of the national audience, a clocking of the audible reactions of the one present at the screening covered would seem to indicate that this film contains entertainment values likewise comparable to those of the pictures named in the foregoing. For 90 of the film's 100 minutes the auditorium was filled with sounds of amusement, ranging from small laughter at regular intervals to occasional gales of merriment. For the nine minutes preceding the ending, during which time the girl and boy of the story approach a parting of the ways and the girl's father attempts suicide in the hope of thus making available to them insurance money which will bring them together again, there was a deep silence broken by sobbing here and there. The happy ending brought a return of the earlier laughter.

The story is about a boy and girl employed by a large corporation who marry and get along reasonably well until she loses her job. He begins to wish he had not married before making a name for himself in a job open to him in Manila, and she, learning she is going to have a baby, first conceals from him a renewal of the Manila offer and then, contrite, tells him of it, but withholds the news of her condition. They quarrel and he books passage. Her father's desperate move restores understanding.

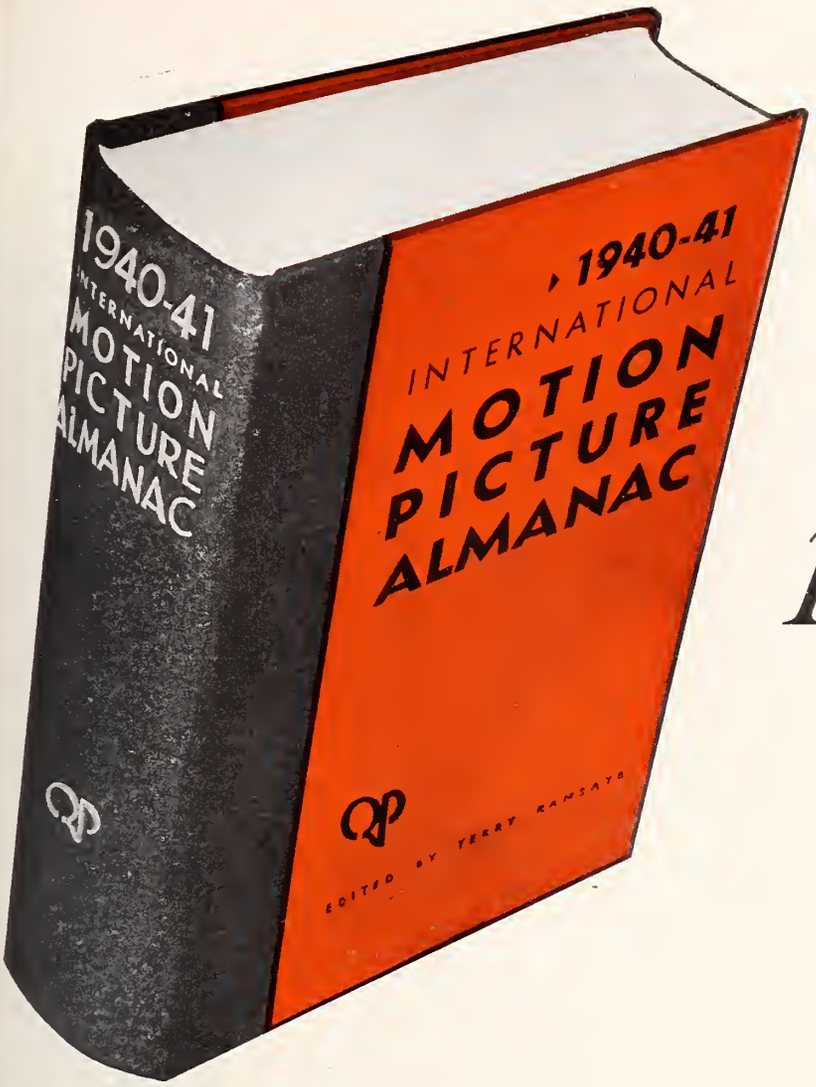
Jones Family, No. 17

This is the seventeenth presentation of the Jones Family's affairs. Jed Prouty, reportedly desirous of breaking away from the parental role in which he long has been featured, is not in this number, but the script has been written in such fashion as to account for his absence by indicating that the head of the house is in the hospital after a nervous breakdown brought on by financial reverses.



The family must sell the home. The mother salvages the family car and trailer, and they start for California with $400 in cash and hopes.

The overland journey takes on some of the aspects of another overland journey to California by another family (the Joads) in another recent picture from the same studio ("The Grapes of Wrath"), as in the montage shots of the same state greeting signs "Arizona Welcomes You," etc.) but the Jones Family makes out somewhat better. The boys trade the car and trailer for a bungalow court, advertise apartments for families with children, get plenty of business that way, make plenty of trouble for neighboring apartment house owners, wind up by winning a court trial because the judge also has noisy youngsters, and end the picture as happily as is commensurate with the fact that the head of the family is still in the hospital and still unseen by the audience.

Although economic pressure is the motivating force of the current Jones story, the matter is dealt with lightly and for humorous purposes. The personnel, save far the absent Mr. Prouty, is approximately as usual.

Prehistoric Melodrama

Showmen recalling exploitation methods used for "The Lost World" and "King Kong" have in this melodrama of the era indicated by the title a third opportunity to use that variety of promotional effort. The use of papier maché monsters for lobby and window display, made up mannikins representing prehistoric men and women, jungle props in general, is indicated. Newspaper and billboard copy in key with the foregoing, together with imaginative publicity, may be employed to round out a campaign fitted to a picture in the production of which imagination was a fundamental.

Directed by Hal Roach and Hal Roach, Jr., from an original screen play by Mickell Novak, George Baker and Joseph Frickert, the picture depicts the adventures of two tribes of people whose paths and cultures cross in the year 1,000,000 B. C. A boy of the rock tribe meets a girl of the shell tribe and learns the ways of her people, taking them and her back with him to his own. Attacks by monsters are recurrent throughout the picture, and a volcanic eruption is a highlight toward the end.

Considerable exploitation emphasis may be given to the fact that the prehistoric animals in this picture, unlike those in the earlier ones, give no suggestion of being puppets. It might be considered a point of interest to mention also that dialogue is dispensed with during much of the action, pantomime giving a suggestion of silent picture technique. It may also be remarked that in this film Lon Chaney, Jr., although a secondary principal, makes his first display of the Chaney talent for makeup.

Boy-and-Dog Story

This picturization of a Saturday Evening Post story by James Street about a boy and a dog was applauded several times at its preview unreeling in Hollywood. It also drew several rounds of laughter, and at other times there were more than several tears shed. While it has much in common with other boy-and-dog stories, it also has much, inclusive of informally imparted information about the training of and devotion to hunting dogs, which is fresh.

Exhibitors doubtlessly are aware of certain steps which have been taken by the distributing company to exploit the film, such as the staging of a world premiere at Albany, Ga., scene of the story and likewise the place where the film was produced. Tieing in with these enterprises seems a natural procedure for exhibitors.

Produced by Jack Moss on the scene depicted, with the effectiveness noted, the film was directed by Stuart Heisler from an adaptation by Stuart Anthony and Lillie Hayward. Billy Lee and Cordell Hickman, a colored boy, in the roles of the two youngsters devoted to a dog despised by their elders, are the principal centers of human interest.

'Til We Meet Again

(Warner Brothers)

Romantic Melodrama

Produced in 1932 as a comedy melodrama under the title "One Way Passage" and starring William Powell and Kay Francis, Warner Brothers again has taken the original story by Robert Lord and made it into a romantic melodrama with George Brent and Merle Oberon in the leading roles. In this version the comedy has been limited largely to the portrayals by Frank McHugh and Eric Blore.

The picture's innate appeal is to women, especially women who are fans of the love story type of magazine. For marquee exploitation there are also the names Pat O'Brien, Geraldine Fitzgerald and Binnie Barnes.

McHugh plays the same role, the slightly inebriated petty criminal, that he portrayed in "One Way Passage."

Directed by Edmund Goulding and adapted for the screen by Warren Duff, the picture is the story of two persons who, after an introduction in Hong Kong, are destined to share the remainder of their inevitably short lives, each concealing the secret from the other.

"Dan Hardesty" (George Brent), runaway from the law, meets "Joan Ames." He is captured after a long chase by "Steve Burke" (Pat O'Brien) of the San Francisco police. Returning to the United States "Dan" and "Joan" meet again on shipboard. A romance develops but both realize it can't last long, he because he is to be executed for murder and she because of an incurable heart disease.

Pat O'Brien and Binnie Barnes in supporting roles do much to aid the continuity of the story, with Miss Barnes handling the role of the bogus "Countess de Bresac," onetime sweetheart of "Dan" and now a world traveling gold digger who in the end marries "Steve."

Tony Gaudio directed the photography. Ralph Dawson, film editor of the original picture, also edited the new production. Leo F. Forbstein arranged the musical background.

The Briggs Family

(Warner Brothers - British)

Wartime Detective Drama

First impressions are deceptive with this comfortable and neatly made little picture from Warners' British producing company. At the outset its tidy and quietly contrived domestic atmosphere suggest a human study of the middle class English family in wartime. Its paterfamilias carries his gasmask to and from the city, there is talk of the blackout, and the local middle-aged seem mostly to be in the special police. Soon, however, the atmosphere is discarded for a conversation yarn about a car crash and some stolen jewelry, though the ultimate court room scene is well handled and has an agreeably native flavor.

Warners' policy in making English films with an English scene and a really native flavor is an excellent one. The film has grand technical sheen, as do most of the Teddington pictures.

Edward Chapman registers a quiet but authentic characterization as a solicitor's clerk, a true cameo of the British middle class citizen.

Mary Clare as the mother, and the fascinating child Glynis Johns are next best of an excellent cast.

Curtain Call

(RKO Radio)

Comedy

The first picture to be produced by Howard Benedict, "Curtain Call" depicts in a light vein the processes by which a youthful playwright is led to decide that home and marriage are preferable to the glamour of Broadway and the stage.

Barbara Read portrays the would-be author whose play is so weak that it is chosen to force a recalcitrant star to sign again under the management of a Broadway producer. The star (enacted by Helen Vinson) thinks the play a piece of artistry, and humorous complications follow.

Alan Mowbray is cast as the harassed director, Donald MacBride the producer whose ideas backfire, John Archer the young man in love with the playwright. Frank Woodruff directed the screen play by Dalton Trumbo, based on a story by Howard J. Green.

Contraband

(British National - Anglo American)

Wartime Melodrama

Films that dramatize the gruesome and gloomy side of war are not necessarily pabulum for belligerent audiences. "Contraband," fortunately, dramatizes the adventure which lies in all war, and does so with a convincing and exciting documentary background. The picture, in essence, is the frankest brand of spy melodrama and rattling good entertainment at that. Its seaboard and naval sequences were made with the full collaboration of the British Admiralty, and ring true. Thanks to zealous direction, which brings the tang of the spume into the earlier passages, the whole machinery of control and examination of wartime shipping by the British navy is turned into absorbing screen fare, with grand harbor canvases and the efficiency and bronzed bonhomie of the Navy.

With its strong topical flavor and its melodrama and action, appeal is indicated beyond the home market.

The drama does not stay long aboard ship. Most of its unrolls over one night in blacked out London, where a Danish captain finds himself entangled in a German bid to waylay two Secret agents, and rescues a young woman spy.

Veidt handles efficiently the role of Captain Anderson, and Valerie Hobson supplies intelligent feminine support. Hay Petrie in a Danish twin act, Esmond Knight as a Secret Service man, Harold Warrender as a Naval officer and many others help the film by excellent portrayals.

The camerawork is crisp and luminous and the cutting competent though there is still room for concise treatment of certain passages. Music by John Greenwood backs the film with dignity and distinction.

Seen at the London Odeon, where it was slipped into the bill for the benefit of the press, the film obviously gripped the audience, and was warmly applauded. A notable object of appreciation was its absence of jingoism. The general feeling was that on topical interest and narrative vigor it should register with all audiences.—AUBREY FLANAGAN.

The Hidden Menace

(Alliance Films)

Backstage Melodrama

A melodrama with most of the action taking place in the wings of a theatre stage, "The Hidden Menace" is a tale of love and jealousy among top flight artists of a variety program, a tight rope specialist and a dancer, a magician who provides the basis for the title and the climax.

Produced in England and released in this country by Alliance Films, the production stars Otto Kruger and Gertrude Michael, both of whom have appeared in several Hollywood pictures. The others are less familiar. The film was directed by Albert De Courville from a screen play by Elizabeth Meehan.

A "ray" machine, used by the magician in his Hindu rope trick, figures largely in the proceedings.

Paramount Benefit for Injured Exhibitor

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD:

I was the victim of an automobile accident January 1, 1940. My wife was killed and I was badly injured. In fact, I am still flat on my back in a big cast, although my arms are free now.

March 31, April 1, Paramount Pictures of Milwaukee—Mr. Frank C. Clark is the manager—put on a benefit show for me. The picture was "Remember the Night," and it was run in my theatre, the Kickapoo. Paramount sent out letters to every exhibitor in the Wisconsin Division, explaining the purpose and including tickets. Every one responded royally and the benefit show was certainly a success.

I am very grateful to Mr. Clark and also to Mr. Irving Werthamer, the salesman in my territory. I thought it would show my appreciation of the wonderful thing they did for me, if you would say something about this in MOTION PICTURE HERALD.

Western

Cattle rustling on the Mexican border is the spearhead of this latest western starring the robust George O'Brien. It is a typical O'Brien western, which means that it has plenty of action into which the star is precipitated before he can establish himself as the top hand.

The girl is played by Virginia Vale. She and her father "John Mathews," played by Howard Hickman, have a ranch which is the only unpatrolled land around, so the rustler gang, led by "Gorman," (portrayed by Walter Miller) gets busy. "Steve Condon" (O'Brien) offers his help to "Mathews" but one of the rustlers circulates a lie that "Steve" killed "Bud Mathews." "Steve" doesn't deny the story, so that he may do some investigating. Then comes the showdown.

Melodrama of the Rockies

Under the guidance of two directors, Vin Moore and Charles Hutchinson, Fine Arts Producing and Distributing Corporation, is releasing a picture that originally was made for Grand National under the title of "Children of the Wild."

Photographed in the Rocky Mountains with Silver Wolf, German shepherd dog, and Goldie, a trained American eagle, a study of bird and animal life in its native habitat is given prime importance in the picture, with the plot secondary.

Starred are Joan Valerie and James Bush. Jill L'Estrange, daughter of the production manager, Dick L'Estrange, is the two-year-old child kidnaped by the eagle and rescued by Silver Wolf.

THE HOLLYWOOD SCENE

War is Hell

Hollywood's continuing belief in General Sherman's dictum that "War Is Hell" is indicated by the few war films made for release since the beginning of 1940. Pictures concerned, however remotely, with the depiction of war accounting for only 17 of the 242 pictures released or already shooting and scheduled for release since last January 1st, or 7 per cent of the total.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, with five pictures in this category, has the greatest number of any studio. Its "Arouse and Beware" treats of the Civil War; "Florian" and "Waterloo Bridge" both show, in part, aspects of the first World War; "Northwest Passage" is concerned with the French and Indian War, and "The Mortal Storm," from the Phyllis Bottome novel, treats of the internal strife in Germany, since 1933.

Columbia's forthcoming "Arizona," based on the Clarence Buddington Kelland story, has the Civil War in the story. The company also will release Frank Lloyd's "Tree of Liberty," from the novel of Revolutionary War days by Elizabeth Page.

In addition to "Arouse and Beware" and "Arizona," three more of the 17 pictures treat of Civil War days: Selznick-International's "Gone With the Wind"; Republic's "Dark Command," and Warner Brothers' "Virginia City." Thus, to date, the proportion of Civil War themes is far greater in films than during the 1914-1918 period. The present number accounts for 29 per cent of all war themes in films released since the start of 1940, while during the period of the last World War, as reported in MOTION PICTURE HERALD of Oct. 7, 1939, only one per cent of war films went back to Civil War days.

Republic's "Women in War" is concerned with the current European conflict. Warners' "Fighting 69th" is based on the last World War, and its forthcoming "Sea Hawk" on the conflict between the Spanish and English just prior to the Armada episode.

Based on the Kipling novel, Paramount's "Light That Failed" portrays fighting between the English and natives in a Sudan campaign, while Cecil B. De Mille treats of the warlike activities of the uniformed Mounties in his "North West Mounted Police."

Walter Wanger recently has placed Vincent Sheehan's "Personal History" in production, with Riffs and Chinese and other soldiers seen in action. Nearing completion is Universal's "Ski Patrol," which deals with the recent Finnish-Russian war.

Studio Change

William LeBaron will relinquish his executive duties at the Paramount studio in the near future to Henry Ginsberg in order to concentrate exclusively on production assignments. Mr. Ginsberg's appointment last week as general manager in charge of studio operations makes it possible for him to relieve Mr. LeBaron of many management functions which he has performed hitherto. Indications are that under the new setup Mr. LeBaron will be personally responsible for a greater number of productions.

PRODUCTION IN FURTHER DROP

Dropping further from the production peak established two weeks ago, Hollywood this week finished four films, started five, had 28 shooting, 32 being prepared, and 56 edited. This compares with the nine finished and five begun last week, and the eleven completed and seven started two weeks ago.

Monogram completed "Land of the Six Guns"; Paramount "Henry Aldrich"; Republic "The Crooked Road"; Universal "If I Had My Way". Started were "Arizona", Columbia; "Four Sons", Twentieth Century-Fox, and "No Exit", "Bad Man from Red Butte" and "South to Karanga", Universal.

For the second successive week, Warner Brothers led with the greatest number of pictures shooting, accounting for five. Columbia had two, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer four, Paramount two, RKO Radio three, Republic three, Edward Small one for United Artists release, Twentieth Century-Fox two, and Walter Wanger one for United Artists.

Three short subjects were completed and the same number started, and were shooting. Eleven were being prepared and thirteen edited.

Relief Polo

Seventh of the annual motion picture polo games played in Hollywood, the match scheduled for Sunday, April 14th, at the Midwick Country Club, will feature a match between film stars and producers, in the interests of the Motion Picture Relief Fund.

In the match such Hollywood names as Walter Wanger, Spencer Tracy, Darryl F. Zanuck, Frank Borzage, Jack Holt are scheduled to appear; with Mr. Wanger also serving as chairman of the polo committee.

The feminine contingent is represented by a motion picture women's committee, sponsoring the match and consisting of Joan Bennett, Myrna Loy, Ginger Rogers, Joan Crawford and Mrs. Samuel Goldwyn.

Enemy Agent

(Universal)

Action Melodrama

Sixty minutes of action and suspense leavened with comedy, Universal's "Enemy Agent" affords opportunity for topical exploitation campaigns. Its plot is based on efforts of spies to steal the secret of a newly developed airplane bomb sight from an American aviation company.

Richard Cromwell has the role of a young aviation draftsman; Helen Vinson, an undercover government operative; Robert Armstrong, a G-man chief, and Marjorie Reynolds is the heart interest. The support is by Jack Arnold, Russell Hicks, Philip Dorn, Jack LaRue, Bradley Page, Abner Biberman, Luis Alberni, Jack Carson and Milburn Stone.

The screenplay was written by Sam Robins and Edmund L. Hartmann, from Robins' original story. Ben Pivar was the associate producer. Lew Landers directed.

"All Hands", "Now You're Talking" and "Dangerous Comment"

(Ealing-Metro)

British War Propaganda

These three films, sponsored by the Ministry of Information, bear no trademark or sign revealing their inspiration. Only the use of the "anti-gossip" posters broadcast through Britain, as an end-piece to each one and forming part of the continuity, so identifies them. They are all well made and quite exciting cameos, not dissimilar from the "Crime Doesn't Pay" series, directed with punch by John Paddy Carstairs and, though inexpensively made, are free from shoddiness. As pocket thrillers they will fit well into the program of the cinemas, all those in Britain, to which they are going. The cast includes—and no wages were paid in any case—names well known here, for example, John Mills, Elliot Makeham, Edward Chapman, Dorothy Hyson, Frank Lawton, Milton Rosmer, Ronald Culver. Feature players readily have taken on crowd parts. Top line technicians and star writers have collaborated. Hence the polish. One of them shows how a talkative bar lounger gives away a secret and permits a laboratory to be blown up, another tells of a garrulous waitress and sailor and a torpedoed warship, and the third pillories an inconsequential young woman who talked freely about a bombing raid. The moral pill goes home in a great deal of entertainment jam.—Running time, 10 minutes each.

March of Time, Vol. 6, No. 9

(RKO Radio)

America's Youth—1940

Themed on the youth problem, the current survey of the March of Time is and should be a command show to be seen not only by the young folk but also by their parents and allied personnel. Running the scale of young life, from an upperclass debutante to an unemployed lad from the lower rung, the inspection stops for a look at the collegiate, white collar workers and semi-skilled levels, and finds them compositely the healthiest and happiest lot in the world today. Besides the educational possibilities, there are shown other aids and agencies, such as religious and social groups and governmental divisions in the guise of the National Youth Administration and the CCC corps. Except a brief shot of the radical ranks of the American Youth Congress, pictured under chastisement by the President for its leftist leanings, the younger set is shown as a normal, ambitious and level headed set. Two striking sequences are itemized, one showing the anxious turning of heads to the opening of an employment office door and the silent lineup of sick Negro youth awaiting medical aid.—Running time, 19 minutes.

A Door Will Open

(MGM)

Psychic Study

Carey Wilson, continuing his series of psychic phenomena, presents the story of Arthur Campbell, an American composer and pianist, who some 10 years ago, had a strange experience which led to years of success in his chosen field. When his career seems about to be dealt a severe blow in the form of a plagiarism suit, a light through a window guides him to a book and among its pages is found an old I. O. U. he had signed on a manuscript containing 16 bars of the music in dispute. Thus he is exonerated. The film poses the question whether the events were coincidental or of the supernatural. Dalies Frantz, concert pianist, plays Campbell, and Lynne Carver has the role of his wife.—Running time, 11 minutes.

Information Please, No. 8

(RKO Pathe)

Erudite Celebrities

The board of experts of the Information Please subjects, John Kieran, Franklin P. Adams and Oscar Levant, and the questioner, Clifton Fadiman, have as their guest expert in the eighth of the series Ruth Gordon, stage star and now of two motion pictures, as the wife of Abe Lincoln and of Dr. Ehrlich. Miss Gordon more than upholds the name of her sex in this battle of intellect and repartee. The experts do not always hit the bullseye, but they have a fair score at that, especially on baseball. —Running time, 10 minutes.

The Singing Dude

(Vitaphone)

Two-Reel Western

Starring Dennis Morgan, who appeared in a feature role of the Scotch cop in "Three Cheers for the Irish," and Lucile Fairbanks, Vitaphone has packed action into a western melodrama in color. Dennis Morgan portrays the hunted man easily spotted by his excellent riding. Nevertheless, to save the girl's ranch he enters the rodeo and wins. Then he discovers that he has been exonerated. The subject was directed by William McGann and based on an original screenplay by Jack Scholl. Others in supporting roles are Fuzzy Knight, Frank Wilcox, Oscar O'Shea and Dickie Jones.—Running time, 18 minutes.

Pennant Chasers

(RKO Pathe)

Baseball

Anyone interested in baseball—there must be quite a few considering it's the "national pastime"—will find "Pennant Chasers" one of the most instructive baseball short subjects ever made. It is all about the National League and its stars. There is not a mention of the American League and the Yankees, but the younger circuit's absence is hardly noticed in the entertaining presentation of players and plays.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Flycasting

(RKO Pathe)

Sportscope

Trout fishing seems to draw a particular, and one might say, a peculiar breed. A real angler, it would appear, rarely smiles, has great endurance and is usually quite competent at his favorite sport. The two anglers at work, or is it play, here are grimly determined men. The camera follows them as they try their skill with both wet and dry fly in a stream of the Sawtooth Range of Idaho.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Jack Pot

Crime Does Not Pay

The latest racket, but certainly not a new one, to be exposed by the MGM Crime Reporter is that of the slot machine, taken from an actual case history of one city, unnamed, in which gangsters flooded the metropolis with slot machines and with the nickels established a crime "empire.' How the police, acting on orders from the mayor, break up the racket is another thriller of this series. The cast includes Tom Neal, Jean Rouverol, Ann Morriss, Edwin Maxwell, Joe Downing and Paul Phillips. Roy Rowland directed the film from a script by Douglas Foster and Alan Friedman.—Running time, 19 minutes.

No Parking

(Vitaphone)

The Grouch Club

Directed by Lloyd French, this number in the Grouch Club series reveals how socalled friends turn a public-spirited citizen into the Public Enemy No. 1-A plus. "Wallace Jipper" is nearly excused by a policeman for admitting a parking violation until a friend arrives and insults the law. More "influential" persons undertake to "fix" the ticket. "Jipper" hides, is captured, gets 60 days.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Men Wanted
(Vitaphone)
Alaska Today

Alaska's progress and the possibilities of developing new fields in a country that has practically no commercial competition is shown in the latest Vitaphone's Color Parade series. Airplanes are the major means of transportation due to undeveloped land and roads. The fishing industry and other businesses are described. Color adds to the interest.—Running time, 10 minutes.

Cross Country Detours
(Vitaphone)
Merrie Melody

Another satire on the present-day travelogues produced in the comical vein of Leon Schlesinger, this subject takes in the Grand Canyon, Yellowstone, Alaska and the Redwood Forests of California. The camera flashes back to an Eskimo dog's journey from Alaska to the redwood trees. A desert lizard is shown shedding its skin in "strip-tease" fashion to the music of the burlesque.—Running time, 7 minutes.

For Outdoors
(20th Century-Fox)
Fashion Forecast

The latest Vyvyan Donner Fashion Forecast goes to new lengths in achieving male audience appeal. It may well be that the men will follow the picture with even greater interest than the women. To Miss Donner's usual troupe of models has been added an equal number of southern belles. The film was shot, in color, on the Warren Wright estate at Miami Beach, Florida, and the tropical setting runs a close second in eye appeal. The costumes are luxurious.—Running time, 9 minutes.

Romance in Rhythm
(Vitaphone)
Variety Program

The music of Carl Hoff and his orchestra is presented in this one-reel musical and variety short subject. Barry McKinley sings, The Kidoodlers offer their version of "Old McDonald Had a Farm" on toy and home-made musical instruments, and the Three Randalls, girl trio, present in swing harmony "The Whirling Dervish."—Running time, 10 minutes.

Pilgrim Porky
(Vitaphone)
Looney Tune

Reminiscent of the days of the Pilgrims, this Looney Tune cartoon, produced by Leon Schlesinger, brings Porky the pig to the screen as captain of the good ship Mayflower. The eventful crossing and the landing on the shores of America are given a modern comedy touch. —Running time, 7 minutes.

Resume Baseball May 1st

The annual tournament of the Motion Picture Baseball League will get underway on May 1st in the New York area. Twilight games are scheduled for Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays at the George Washington High School Stadium. Harry Marcus, Republic, is president of the league; Morris Rosenbaum, Skouras Theatres, treasurer, and I. A. Goldberg, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, secretary and publicity manager. Seven teams have signified their intention of joining the league and the eighth is expected shortly. The seven teams are Consolidated Film Industries, National Screen Service, National Broadcasting Company, Rockefeller Center, Paramount, RKO and Skouras Theatres.

U. S. COMPANIES FACE HEAVY ARGENTINE TAX

"Clarification" of Income Tax Makes Companies Liable for Exemptions Dating from 1934

by NATALIO BRUSKI
in Buenos Aires

An amended income tax on royalties, sanctioned in the 1940 budget law, presents a heavy taxation problem to American and other foreign film distributors operating in Argentina.

Prior to Jan. 1, 1939, all film companies distributing pictures on the basis of a royalty were subject to a 5 per cent tax on 50 per cent of the amounts credited or paid to their principals or the beneficiaries of such royalties. On and after that date, this taxation was increased to 5 per cent on the entire amount of the royalty paid, beneficiaries, however, being allowed a deduction for such expenses as were incurred in the country for obtaining, maintaining and preserving the source of such income.

Retroactive to 1934

With the new amendment all royalties now are subject to the 5 per cent taxation without any deduction whatsoever. This amendment becomes particularly detrimental to beneficiaries of royalties because by treating this change as a "clarification" and not a modification, the provisions become retroactive to the year 1934. In other words, beneficiaries must now pay the difference between 5 per cent on 50 per cent and 5 per cent on 100 per cent of the "royalties" received since the year 1934, and in addition on all amounts which might have been deducted for expenses since Jan. 1, 1939, when such deductions were authorized.

This situation has affected greatly all American and other foreign film companies operating in this country, and if these companies cannot find some means of changing the Government's decision, it will indeed be a very sizable tribute they will be called upon to pay in the very near future.

Audiences Must Be Neutral

A decree issued by the mayor of Buenos Aires at the request of the ministry of foreign affairs instructs all cinema and theatre managers that when films shown, or plays, make any reference to the countries at war in Europe, they must instruct their patrons to abstain from expressing their personal feelings.

The municipality of Buenos Aires has confirmed the decree which creates special awards to be given to those persons who have distinguished themselves in furthering the interests of Argentine production. The decree says in part:

Special awards are to be made to the best Argentine talking pictures released every year in the motion picture theatres of the federal capital.

One first award of $20,000 for the best picture of the year, this to be divided as follows: $7,000 will be made to the producer, $3,000 to the writer, $3,000 to the director, $1,500 to the composer of the music, $1,500 to the sound technician, $1,500 to the chief cameraman and $1,000 to each of the two outstanding players. In the event there is no music, the share that should have gone to the composer will be distributed among members of the cast.

A second prize of $7,500 will be awarded to the second best picture, with amounts as follows: $3,000 to the producer, $1,000 to the writer, $1,000 to the director, $500 to the composer, $500 to the sound technician, $500 to the chief cameraman and $500 to each of the outstanding players. Two additional awards per year, of $2,500 each, include one to the best picture with a cast of children resident in the country, though the picture may have adult players in it, the other to the Argentine picture which best publicizes the beauties and customs of the country, and shows the growth of the cities. These awards will go to the producers:

Two more prizes, of $2,500 each, are for the best Argentine cartoon and the best Argentine newsreel.

The method of carrying out this plan of encouraging domestic production has left many dissatisfied. Cine-Prensa, Argentina's leading trade publication, pointed out that a mediocre film might have a very fine musical score, but the composer does not reap any reward. On the other hand, the musical score of the winning picture may be very far below standard, and yet the composer gets a part of the award.

Dave Lewis, MGM's local manager, has been transferred to the same post in Brazil, with headquarters in Rio de Janeiro. Stuart B. Dunlap, general manager of the company in Latin-America, will take up his post in Argenina.

Free Academy Award Trailer Ready May 4th

Warner Brothers will make available a free trailer announcing the four-reel featurette, "Cavalcade of Academy Awards," on May 4th. Among the Award winners since 1928 who are seen in this film are: George Arliss, Fay Bainter, Lionel Barrymore, Warner Baxter, Claudette Colbert, Bette Davis, Walt Disney, Robert Donat, Marie Dressler, Clark Gable, Judy Garland, Janet Gaynor, Helen Hayes, Katharine Hepburn, Charles Laughton, Vivien Leigh, Fredric March, Hattie McDaniel, Victor McLaglen, Thomas Mitchell, Paul Muni, Luise Rainer, Norma Shearer and Spencer Tracy.

Renew Altec Service

Seventeen Detroit theatres, including the Madison theatre, and the Birmingham theatre in Birmingham, Mich., of the United Detroit Theatres Corporation will continue Altec sound service, under a renewal contract just negotiated by F. C. Dickeley, Altec district manager.

Freedley on League Board

Vinton Freedley has been appointed a member of the board of governors of the League of New York Theatres.

IN THE CUTTING ROOM

Lucky Cisco Kid

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Series

The latest in the Cisco Kid series starring Cesar Romero is concerned with the discovery of real bandits using the Kid's name. As usual, Chris-Pin Martin enacts the role of the leading character's sidekick, and the cast includes Mary Beth Hughes, Dana Andrews, Evelyn Venable, Willard Robertson and Young John Sheffield.

The original story was written by Julian Johnson, the screen play by Robert Ellis and Helen Logan, who last collaborated on "The Man Who Wouldn't Talk."

John Stone was associate producer. H. Bruce Humberstone, director, handled "Pack Up Your Troubles."

Release date: To be determined.

Twenty Mule Team

(MGM)

Outdoor Action

Reuniting Wallace Beery and Leo Carrillo for the first time since "Viva Villa," the screen story told here has as its setting the open spaces of Death Valley in the 1890's, when twenty-mule teams were used to pull borax wagons across the desert to Mojave.

Making her film debut in the romantic feminine lead is Anne Baxter, Noah Beery, Jr., plays opposite her. J. Walter Ruben produced, as he did on such previous Beery films as "Bad Man of Brimstone" and "Thunder Afloat."

Directing was Richard Thorpe, his latest having been "The Earl of Chicago," while the screen play was written by Cyril Hume, who last wrote "Tarzan Finds a Son." The picture is based on the novel by Robert Dusoe and Owen Atkinson.

Release date: To be determined.

Pals of the Silver Sage

(Monogram)

Western

With a cast headed by Tex Ritter and Sugar Dawn, billed the "world's youngest rodeo star," this picture's story concerns the discovery of cattle thefts from a ranch owned by the 6-year-old portrayed by the youthful Miss Dawn.

Others in the cast include Slim Andrews, Clarissa Curtis, Glen Strange and Carleton Young. An original screen play, the story was written by George Martin. Edward Finney produced and Al Herman directed, as he did "Roll, Wagons Roll."

Release date: April 20, 1940.

Women in War

(Republic)

War Melodrama

Set in present day wartime England, "Women in War" relates the story of a girl who joins the nursing corps in order to combat the resentment against her part in the death of an Army officer.

The cast includes Elsie Janis, Wendy Barrie, Mae Clarke, Patric Knowles, Dennie Moore, Pamela Randell and Barbara Pepper. The original screen play was written by Doris Anderson, who contributed dialogue for "Mickey, the Kid" and F. Hugh Herbert, who collaborated on "The Dark Command."

Sol Siegel was associate producer and John Auer directed, as he did last on "Thou Shalt Not Kill."

Release date: To be determined.

Lillian Russell

(Twentieth Century-Fox)

Film Biography

Depicting the life and times of one of America's most glamorous stage figures, "Lillian Russell" has among its many cast names Alice Faye, Don Ameche, Henry Fonda, Edward Arnold, Warren William, Leo Carrillo, Ernest Truex, Helen Westley, Dorothy Peterson, Nigel Bruce, Lynn Bari, Una O'Connor, Eddie Foy, Jr., and Weber and Fields.

Miss Faye portrays the title character, Mr. Ameche the pianist who becomes her first husband, Henry Fonda the newspaper man who she marries after the death of her first husband, Edward Arnold "Diamond Jim Brady," and Leo Carrillo "Tony Pastor.

Irving Cummings directed, as he did "Everything Happens at Night" and "Hollywood Cavalcade." William Anthony McGuire wrote the original screen play. "Rosalie" and "The Great Ziegfeld" were from his pen. Two songs were contributed by Alfred Newman and Mack Gordon, and Gus Kahn and Bronislau Kaper. Gene Markey was associate producer.

Release date: To be determined.

Ski Patrol

(Universal)

War Story

A film which uses the recent Finnish-Russian war for background, "Ski Patrol" features the recently imported Luli Deste, also Philip Dorn in his first American screen appearance. Samuel Hinds, Stanley Fields and Edward Norris.

With war the basic ingredient, the film ends on a note depicting the futility of international conflict, while telling the story of a group of men and women concerned in the fighting.

Paul Huston wrote the original screen play, with Lew Landers directing, as he did "Honeymoon Deferred" and "La Conga Nights." The associate producer was Ben Pivar, whose action films include the Richard Arlen-Andy Devine series.

Release date: May 3, 1940.

Cowboy from Sundown

(Monogram)

Tex Ritter

Seventh in the annual FAME-HERALD poll of leading box-office western stars, Tex Ritter is cast as a sheriff who finds trouble when he has to quarantine ranches because of an epidemic of hoof and mouth disease.

Seen with Ritter are Pauline Haddon, Roscoe Ates, Carleton Young, George Pembroke and Dave O'Brien. Three songs are featured in the picture, which was produced by Edward Finney.

The screen play was written by Roland Lynch and Robert Emmett. "Westbound Stage" was from Emmett. The original story was by Mr. Lynch. Spencer Bennett directed, as he did last on "Westbound Stage."

Release date: May 2, 1940.

TRADE HEAD RULES QUOTA STAYS BUT PROBLEM REMAINS UNSETTLED

Duncan Announces No Change in Provisions; American Distributors Continue to Press for Monetary Basis

by AUBREY FLANAGAN
in London

The Films Act of 1938, embracing the quota stipulations which have been in effect since April of last year, will continue to operate, Sir Andrew Duncan, president of the British Board of Trade, told film interests in London this week. However, from authoritative sources here it is understood that American interests expect a realization of the Government promise to alter the form of the quota substantially from a footage to a monetary basis.

Further Discussion Seen

It is the general belief that while some form of quota obviously is to be retained, discussions will be held looking to the best application of the quota principle under the present difficult war conditions. Sir Andrew's statement, it was understood, is not a final answer to the problem.

His statement, however, was in line with indications current for some time relative to the Government's plan on film industry legislation and it set at rest much of the speculation which the uncertain situation caused by the war developed. The continuation of the quota will mean an immediate impetus to British independent production and it is certain to meet a cordial reception on that score.

The chairman of the British Films Council, as well as deputations from the industry, were present as Sir Andrew indicated the Government's intention. He said negotiations were continuing with American interests in accordance with the remittance agreement reached last November. The Americans at that time promised not to interrupt their British production programs pending a final settlement of the situation. It was reported before the meeting that American companies had guaranteed to produce 30 features annually in England.

Finance Plan Discussed

Sir Andrew discussed the report of the Films Council on production financing, embracing plans for the establishment of a finance corporation, which apparently are still under consideration by the Government. Additional meetings are planned.

Producer, exhibitor and labor groups are of the opinion that the quota will be retained on its present footage basis but American distributors in London insist emphatically that their position in the film legislative and quota situation is still undetermined. They seek a monetary, rather than a footage basis.

Rental Campaign Continues

Following the recent war council of mid-March, local exhibitor groups have discussed the forthcoming campaign to win lower rentals and whilst a secrecy even more tight lipped than ever has been observed, exhibitors have spared no pains in expressing themselves forcibly, not only on how relentlessly the fight must be fought, but why it must be fought at all. An undue increase in the number of fifty per cent films, coupled with an alarming decrease in imported product, and the present tendency for immediate release are laid against the distributors.

Among the weapons which it is suggested should be dusted up and extracted from the exhibitor armory is that of the "booking holiday." One powerful group at least and the idea is not confined to one particular locality—has discussed constructively the establishment of such a holiday, during which no films at all should be booked, and provision for which should be made now, many weeks ahead. Whether the "booking holiday" will form part of the CEA campaign has yet to be seen. It is certain not to be dismissed without keen and exhaustive discussion.

Foremost among the aggravating factors is the drop in film imports. As has already been pointed out exhibitors face an inconvenient decrease. In the ten months expiring in February last year some 364 films were available. In the same period expiring February this year the figure dropped to 279. Certainly, and even if other product will have been registered, picture houses in Britain will be between seventy and eighty films short on the year's available product.

Solution Lies with Exhibitors

A section of trade economists see a solution only to be found among exhibitors themselves. A change in the early release system, greatly a result of circuit pressure, possible because of circuit power, a penalty clause to penalize if not to prevent the gratuitous paying of high rentals by exhibitors themselves, and an adjustment or elimination of bars, are thought not least practical of possible solutions.

On the other hand exhibitors protest that the number of fifty per cent films has never been so high as at present. Twenty-two of them are currently on the market. One American major is said to demand fifty per cent for nine out of his thirteen current program items. It is generally accepted that seventy per cent will be asked and is already being talked of for at least one of the year's supers. Such practice is denounced in vigorous language. "An attempt at extortion" is the term used by ex-President Teddy Hinge.

Whilst high rentals are contested generally by British exhibitors they are more keenly fought now than ever before, for whilst the war has probably brought good trade to certain districts—notably "reception" areas, it has made trading well nigh impossible in others. More than one exhibitor spokesman has unequivocally accused the major renters of seeking to make the exhibitor pay the distributors' increased overheads and war costs.

Ostrer Held in Contempt

Mark Ostrer, managing director of Gaumont British, on Monday was ruled in contempt of court by Justice Crossman in refusing to give evidence before a Board of Trade inspector investigating the affairs of the company. The court said there would be no punishment if an apology was made. Mr. Ostrer pleaded that he was unwilling to give the evidence because a stenographer was present and because the investigation was made at the request of a minority influenced or headed by John Maxwell, head of Associated British Pictures Corporation. He claimed an object of the investigation was to obtain information useful to the company's competitors.

THEATRE SAFETY RULES MODIFIED

British Home Office regulations regarding the safety of patrons at film houses and of theatre staffs, have been modified following conferences between the Cinematograph Exhibitors' Association and the authorities. One of the most drastic stipulations in the original orders was that shelters be provided for audiences. Under the modification, only theatre staffs need be provided for.

U. S. Films Hold Lead in Brazil

by L. S. MARINHO
in Rio de Janeiro

Almost 90 per cent of the feature motion pictures released in Brazil during the last year were from the United States, according to figures just released. Of a total of 558 pictures including dramas, westerns and serials released in 1939 by exchanges in Rio de Janeiro, 426 features and 23 serials were American made. France was second with 43.

Releases from other countries were as follows: Germany, 26; England 15; Italy, 9; domestic production, 5; Argentina and Mexico, 3 each; Portugal and Spain, 2 each, and China, 1. Also 535 short subjects were produced in domestic studios.

Domestic production showed no increase over previous years but three features have been released this year and the prospect is for a greater number before the end of 1940.

It is expected that the war will further reduce the number of European pictures this year.

Special VFW Film

The National Headquarters of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, with the cooperation of Filmack Trailer Company, Chicago, has completed a special production for the 19th Annual Buddy Poppy Day sale for release in May. The film, "Lest We Forget," will be furnished free to exhibitors.

Posts to Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Cornwell

Mrs. Henry Miller and Mrs. William Cornwell have been made chairman and co-chairman, respectively, of the motion picture division of the Philadelphia Federation of Women's Clubs and allied organizations.

NICK QUITS IATSE; BIOFF HALTS STRIKE IN HOUR

St. Louis Leader Reported Negotiating to Reduce Payment Terms to Union

Their careers in film industry labor apparently diminished, and possibly ended, by court decisions, those two labor union figures, Willie Bioff, of Chicago, and late of Los Angeles, and John P. "Big" Nick, of St. Louis, continue, with unquenched vigor, to create the motion picture industry's labor news.

Nick, long deposed, and several weeks ago permanently ousted, as head of the St. Louis projectionists' union, Local 143, sentenced recently, with another, to pay back $48,399 to the union, and still under indictment for extortion of $6,500 from the city's theatre owners in 1937, last week resigned as first vice-president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees. He still retained a membership card in the projectionists' local, a card which might be exchanged for waiving of the $48,399 judgment.

Bioff, fighting in Chicago against serving a 17-year-old jail sentence of six months but still a West Coast Alliance leader, and still the chairman of the Conference of American Federation of Labor Studio Unions, showed his power last Friday, by halting, in one hour, a strike by the Sound Technicians' Local 659 against Republic.

The Bioff trial in federal court in Los Angeles on two counts of income tax evasion this week was shifted to the September calendar.

Nick Resigns IATSE; Autonomy Restored

A 16-month-old fight waged by 19 insurgent members of the Motion Pictures Operators' Union, Local 143, with the aid of the Circuit Court of St. Louis, came to a successful climax last week in St. Louis when autonomy was restored in the local.

At the same time, John P. Nick, ousted czar of the union, resigned his lucrative office as first international vice-president of the powerful International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, parent body of the operators' union.

Autonomy was restored to the local by George E. Browne, international president of the operators' union and a good friend of Nick. He and Joseph Padway, general counsel for the American Federation of Labor, were in St. Louis for a week, to settle differences between the anti-Nick and Nick factions.

Nick's resignation was due to illness, announced Padway. He was paid a salary of $1,000 a year, plus $110 a week and $12 a day hotel allowance when away from home, together with first-class transportation expenses. Thus, his aggregate remuneration was believed to have been from $7,000 to $10,000 annually.

He holds a membership card in the local, but negotiations were reported underway for him to surrender the card, if in return the union would waive part of the $48,399 judgment rendered against Nick and Clyde A. Weston, his aide, by Circuit Judge Ernest F. Oakley recently.

Included in the judgment against Nick is $10,500 which Judge Oakley held he had received in a secret transaction from State Representative Edward M. Brady, who is charged with obtaining it from theatre owners as a "payoff" in 1936; and the $6,500 "payoff" Judge Oakley ruled Nick and Weston had received from the theatre owners in 1937.

Even after restoration of autonomy, the local proceeded cautiously, reluctant to leave the protection of the court, which had placed the union in receivership and ousted Nick from domination, exercised from 1935 to 1939.

The local's 105 operators, last week, voted to admit 47 operators, some of whom had received membership cards from Nick. Twenty others, who had received cards from him, were excluded.

New officers of the local are: Robert Tomsen, who led the fight against Nick, business agent; Harry Darco, president; William Robinson, vice-president and chairman of the executive board; Harvey O'Loughlin, recording and corresponding secretary; Harry A. Meyer, financial secretary; A. H. Bode, treasurer.

The union, this week, was reported asking Nick to turn over to it, its canceled checks, records, and check books, as well as funds. Waiving part of the judgment Judge Oakley rendered against him is a condition of the negotiations.

On Thursday a meeting was to be held between the local and the Fanchon & Marco circuit on their dispute over the hiring of operators.

Bioff, in Chicago, Halts Coast Strike

Willie Bioff, West Coast studio union leader, on Monday in Chicago Criminal Court, was granted a continuance to next Monday of his efforts to have the Illinois Supreme Court rehear his appeal for a review of a state Court of Appeals decision in 1922, affirming a Chicago jail sentence, of that year. Mr. Bioff's plea for a writ of supersedeas and freedom on bail, pending a review by the Supreme Court, of his appeal, was denied last week. He is now on bail granted by the Criminal Court.

Bioff continued active in Hollywood labor negotiations, even while fighting incarceration. Last Friday he halted a one-hour walkout of sound technicians, members of Sound Technicians' Local 659, on the Republic lot, promising them by telephone that he would handle their wage increase demands and that he would confer with Herbert J. Yates, president of Consolidated Film Industries, which operates Republic.

Forty-five sound department workers struck at noon hour last Friday at Republic. They halted production on four pictures. After Bioff's telephone call from Chicago, they resumed work.

NLRB ORDERS POLL FOR WAREHOUSEMEN

Employees of the warehouse maintained at 619 West 54th Street, New York, by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.; Warner Bros. Circuit Management Corporation, Producers Settlement Corporation, Circuit Settlement Corporation, Globe Export Corporation and Vitagraph, Inc., are to hold an election within 30 days to determine whether they are to be represented for bargaining purposes by the American Federation of Office Employees (AFL), under an order issued by the National Labor Relations Board April 5.

An effort of the companies to have the Music Publishers Holding Corporation, which also is located in the building, included in the order was dismissed by the board on the argument of the union that it had never attempted to organize the music company's employees.

Union, Circuits Confer On Vaudeville Contracts

A vaudeville union plan for reemployment of hundreds of vaudeville performers in theatres now showing films only is moving to completion in New York. At the same time the executive secretary of the American Guild of Variety Artists, Hoyt S. Haddock, met on Tuesday with Marvin Schenck, of the Loew circuit, and executives of other major circuits, on another problem for the fast growing vaudeville union: the unionization of all performers in all theatres still playing vaudeville, and a closed shop contract.

The plan for reintroducing vaudeville in film houses that once used it is still "only a plan," Mr. Haddock said on Monday. At present, Miss Sheila Kennedy, of the Theatre Arts Committee, at Mr. Haddock's request, is assembling information on the number of houses which used to play vaudeville, their incomes, possibilities, and the like, with which Mr. Haddock may face circuit executives and other theatre owners, at some future date.

Mr. Haddock also plans conferences on the subject with officials of the American Federation of Musicians, which, for some years now, has been chronically conferring with affiliated theatre executives, on the proposals of Joseph M. Weber, federation president, for the reemployment of the thousands of musicians who once filled now empty orchestra pits in the nation's 15,000-odd film theatres.

Negotiations with the circuits for a closed shop contract and adherence to the guild's "code" of fair practices have been held up, to this week's meeting, by disagreement over "only three points," Mr. Haddock claimed. The three points are minimum wages, maximum number of performances, and the five per cent booking fee to circuits.

The guild is asking for a $40 per week minimum salary for chorus performers; $50 per week minimum for assistant players; and $70 per week minimum for principals.

In the maximum performance question, the guild asks for a maximum of 30 per week.

The five per cent booking fee accorded to circuits is unfair, the guild holds, Mr. Haddock calling it a "kickback" to employers. He asserted that payment of such a fee is payment to one's employer for the privilege of obtaining a job.

The guild is planning a "Sunday vaudeville" show in New York City, for the purpose of establishing a "show window" there.

At the end of last week, the guild became involved in a strike against the Ringling Brothers Circus, at Madison Square Garden, New York City; the strike having been started by Ralph Whitehead's Circus, Carnival, Fair and Rodeo International Union, with picketing beginning, by that union, last Friday night. The management, refusing to treat with Mr. Whitehead's union, recently chartered by the American Federation of Labor, negotiated with the Variety Artists' guild, whose charter from the AFL, its officials claim, covers circus workers.

Government Intervenes in Philadelphia Music Strike

The government intervened this week in the Philadelphia musicians strike against Warner theatres, when Thomas J. Williams was ordered to collect statistics for the Department of Labor on the situation. Mr. Williams offered to mediate. A. Rex Ricciardi, secretary of the musicians local, accepted the offer. The strike is five months old.

The local has appealed to the American Federation of Musicians for support on a national basis.

ASIDES and INTERLUDES

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM

Hollywood producers, writers and others associated in supplying the screens of this country and elsewhere with motion picture entertainment have variously been more imaginative in their creations than can be imagined. But let any of them top, if they can, "Forever," in which MGM is to star Norma Shearer in an original story—very, very original—which deals with two spirits falling in love before birth.

Jeanette MacDonald has a weakness for sweetpeas. . . . And Errol Flynn has a secret garden in the San Fernando Valley about which the Warner Brothers publicity department doesn't know a thing. Just a few pines, mulberries, lemons, figs and oranges, a rock garden, a water-lily pond, a lawn, and a few hidden kennels for his lion dogs, and a hilltop site for a house he hasn't built. Very secret.

Long-distance derision spiced with scoffing advice was hurled at Hollywood this week by Harvard University's magazine, Lampoon, sequel to its quixotic tilt with "Oomph Girl" Ann Sheridan.

The Lampoon announced it would put the following program into effect "as soon as Hollywood realizes it cannot do without Lampy any longer:

"Cut all swimming pools in half.

"Let Sonja Henie skate; Nelson Eddy sing; Eleanor Powell dance, and leave acting to actors.

"Persuade the Lane Sisters that the woman's place is in the home—some quiet, out-of-the-way place.

"Correct the mistaken idea that a picture cannot be good or even artistic and still make money, and

"Give the little girl (Ann Sheridan) a great big chance by throwing 'oomph' into the ash-can."

"The most versatile Western actor in the world," so-termed by his own admission, wants a job with the Marx Brothers in their stage tour and motion picture, "Go West," MGM.

In case you can't use a real horse on the stage, I've played either end of one in a horse costume."

HOLLYWOOD'S WORLD TAX BILL ON FILMS AND THEATRE TICKETS

PART III

PROBLEMS placed before American producers and distributors, and before exhibitors too, in the Near and Far Eastern countries because of restrictive taxes by the local governments, in the interest of building their own production vehicles for profit and propaganda, are noted in the tables herewith, the third and last installment of the study made for MOTION PICTURE HERALD by Nathan D. Golden, Chief of the Motion Picture Division of the U. S. Department of Foreign and Domestic Commerce.

The complicated taxation systems in China and Japan are traced at the end of the Far East table.

The European situation was treated in Part One of the study project, which appeared in the issue of March 30, the Central and South American in last week's issue.

Translations of foreign moneys into American dollars are in a footnote.

VARIED TAXES IN CHINA AND JAPAN

Countries (Continued)	Import Taxes and Customs Duties on Motion Picture Films	Censorship Fees and Taxes	Taxes on Distribution	Theatre Taxes
CHINA	*	Censor fee charges not available, except in Nanking, where the so-called Reformed Government recently established a film censorship office. A fee of yuan 20 will be charged for every 500 meters. Films less than 500 meters will be regarded as being of that length. In case of reexamination a double fee will be charged. Chinese films exempted but if necessary a fee of not more than 15 yuan may be collected for every film. (At today's rate of exchange, 1 yuan or Standard Chinese Dollar is equivalent to approximately US$.06 13/16).	No figures.	**
JAPAN	Yen 11.13 per kin 1,323 lbs. 15% commodity tax on arbitrary value and amount paid as duty. Yen 90 per kin on colored film and Yen 45 per kin on black and white film. This tax levied after duty has been paid, importer being obliged to pay this special tax on arbitrary valuation and also on amount paid as import duty. Subject to import quotas.	Censor fee charges not available.	†	10% admission tax, 2% gross receipts all other taxes. Taxes and methods of assessments vary according to locality.

Import taxes and customs duties:* According to a revised Customs Tariff which went into effect on June 1, 1938, and which is applicable to all areas under Japanese occupation (including Shanghai), the import duty on cinematographic films (developed) is 20% ad valorem with surcharges amounting to 14% of the duty assessed. Prior to this revision, the import duty (as established by the Chinese National Government) was 25% ad valorem and with the same 14% surcharges. This latter tariff is still in effect for all foreign made imports entering territory (original entry) under the control of the Chinese National Government. American pictures imported at Shanghai later than August 1, 1938—the date when official Chinese censor representatives ceased functioning in Shanghai—have not been released in "Free China". As of September 1, 1939, Japanese authorities established arbitrary exchange rates for currency to be used in payment of import duties. Payment is now required either in "Hua Hsing" notes (a Japanese sponsored currency in circulation in the Hongkew district of Shanghai and other Central China areas under Japanese occupation) which are artificially valued at 6 pence or US$0.09875 (on the basis of the New York-London cross rate of US$3.94) or in Chinese legal tender notes which must be computed so as to make up the difference between the open market rate of Chinese legal tender and the "officially" maintained value of the "Hua Hsing" currency. This exchange differential, however, remains in effect only when the open market value of the Chinese National Dollar (yuan) is below 6 pence. As a result, all import duties at Shanghai were increased by an indefinite percentage (averaging about 20% in mid-November) dependent upon the open market value of the Chinese yuan.

Theatre taxes:* There are no uniform rates of taxation levied on cinema theatres in China. Each province has its own particular method of taxation and the rates may even vary considerably within provincial borders. Then, too, the number of taxes collected and rates charged in one city may vary from those in another. Similarly, rates may vary in different sections of the same town should there be foreign concessions located within its boundaries. The following represent approximately the municipal, provincial or National Government taxes and rates which could be said to apply generally throughout the country prior to the commencement of the Sino-Japanese hostilities. At present, in areas under Chinese control where foreign or domestic pictures are still being exhibited, emergency taxes have either been substituted or added to the following list. Not all of the taxes here listed are levied on any one theatre. Theatre Tax (Local), yuan 15. to yuan 150. or more per month. Stamp Tax (usually Government), yuan 0.01 on tickets selling for 0.50 or under; yuan 0.02 for tickets selling for over yuan 0.50. Educational Tax (Government) about same rate as Stamp Tax. Amusement Tax (Local or Provincial), from 5% to 15% of gross box-office receipts. Business Tax (Local), 5% of gross receipts or a flat charge per month. Advertising Tax (Local) about yuan 0.05 to yuan 0.20 per poster or 100 handbills; sometimes on a flat rate basis per month. Since January 20, 1938, all Shanghai cinemas and theatres within the French Concession and the foreign controlled sections of the International Settlement have voluntarily levied a small Refugee Tax on each ticket for relief work. Rates range from yuan 0.05 to yuan 0.10 per ticket.

†Japan's taxes on distribution: National ordinary income tax: 22½% on amount of profits. National excess income tax: Profit over 10% of capital, 4.4% to 22%. Surtax (Tokyo rate) on National income taxes. 45% of 10% of profit and 10/11 of National Excess Income Tax payable.

National Special Excess Profits Tax—Class A: Levied at the rate of 20% on whichever amount of excess profit is applicable, under Article 4 of Law No. 20, 1935 (revised by Law No. 49, 1939).

National Special Excess Profits Tax—Class B: This will be levied on the profits of business terms ending on or after April 1, 1939, at the rate of 40% (30% in the case of a company with a capital not exceeding Yen 100,000) on the amount of profit which exceeds the amount which would have been earned if the ratio of average profit during business terms ending in 1934, 1935 and 1936 to average capital over the same years had been maintained in respect of business year ended on or after April 1, 1939.

However, if the ratio of the average profit to the average capital during 1934/36 exceeds 10%, and the capital for the current business year is greater than such average capital, then in working out the Class B Special Excess Profit, the average ratio will apply only to that part of the capital equivalent to such average capital or the capital at December 31, 1936, whichever is the higher, and a rate of 10% will apply to the remainder as in the case of Class A Special Excess Profit.

NOTE: If the total National taxes enumerated above (excluding surtaxes) exceeds 55% of the amount of the profit, then the remainder will be cancelled. But, as a concession, this maximum amount payable will be reduced by an allowable deduction representing 15% of that part of the profit which has not been distributed in the form of a dividend, etc. The taxes mentioned below are not included in this concession.

If that part of the profit which is not distributed exceeds 40% of the total net profit, then a further deduction can be made from the maximum National taxes payable, amounting to 2.45% of such undistributed profit.

Business Profits Tax: National Tax at 4% of profit and prefectural surtaxes at 172.5% on 3.4% of profit (Tokyo Prefecture rates), if the profit is less than 75% of the average profits for 1934-36 (if a new company less than 75% of the 1939 profit) then reductions in Business Profits Tax will be granted, if claimed.

Hundreds of Small Theatres Adopt Roadshow Policies and Prices for First Time; Booked Into 1,413 Cities

"Gone With the Wind," after playing eight, nine, ten and more weeks' first-run in key cities, is now going into subsequents and smaller towns. The same 70-30 per cent terms are to hold in all the engagements in this country and abroad. This week the total theatre gross on "Wind" was reputedly $17,000,000.

Roadshows in Small Theatres

Hundreds of small theatres are adopting roadshow policies and prices for the first time. Prices in the towns and subsequents remain at the 75c for matinees and $1.10 evenings set for the key city openings. The film has now been booked into 1,552 theatres in 1,413 cities in the United States and Canada. Four-day engagements are now being accepted.

Last week MGM branch managers' meetings were held in New York and in Atlanta to acquaint the organization members with sales policies for small towns. The meetings were conducted by E. K. O'Shea and Charles Kessinch, district managers.

Attending the meeting in New York were Ben Abner, New Jersey manager; Jack Bowen, New York; Rudy Berger, Washington; Benn Rosenwald, Charlotte; Ralph Pielow, Albany, and Ralph Maw, Buffalo.

At the Atlanta session were Roy Avery, Atlanta; Leroy Bickel, Dallas; James Bryant, New Orleans; William Zoellner, Oklahoma City; Frank Willingham, Memphis. Harold Postman, assistant to T. J. Connors, Eastern, Southern and Canadian division manager, represented him in Atlanta. Mr. Connors attended the New York meeting.

Field Men for All Runs

Ed Saunders, Western division manager, held conferences this week in Chicago with field men in connection with subsequent dates on the Selznick film. No matter how short the run, MGM plans to have field men help the local exhibitor with exploitation and special arrangements for showing the film on a road show basis.

"Wind" will have the "first black out premiere" at its triple opening in London at the Empire, Palace and Ritz theatres. D. E. Griffith, former managing director of Warner Brothers-First National in Great Britain, has been engaged by MGM to supervise sales of "Wind" in Great Britain.

The advance ticket sale for the engagements at Loew neighborhood houses in New York totaled $175,000. Additional figures were not available. Other records set by the film include: ten weeks in Cleveland, witnessed by over 300,000 people for a gross of about $220,000; a similar period at the Warner in Pittsburgh where it grossed over $230,000; nine weeks at the Warfield in San Francisco.

MGM's 20 Mule Team

A transcontinental tour of MGM's 20 Mule Team began last week from Los Angeles. Wallace Beery, star of "20 Mule Team" and other members of the cast were present as Mayor Fletcher Bowron gave the official send-off from City Hall.

The cross-country trek stunt was originated by Howard Dietz and is being executed by William R. Ferguson and Frank Whitbeck.

GALA PREMIERES NORTH AND SOUTH

the studio production staff, and Jack Dailey of the studio advertising department.

In the week following the opening "The Biscuit Eater" will be shown in more than 100 theatres, chiefly in Georgia. John Kirby, Atlanta branch manager for Paramount, announced that 50 prints instead of the usual maximum number of five have been ordered to handle bookings in the territory.

Radio coverage of "The Biscuit Eater" included a complete description of all the events by the Albany station, WGPC; CBS network Vox Pop program with Parks Johnson and Wally Butterworth broadcast from Albany following the premiere. WSB, Atlanta, NBC station, and WGST, CBS outlet in that city, also planned to give radio coverage to the celebration.

"Buck Benny Rides Again" will have its world's premiere at the New York Paramount on April 24th. Jack Benny, Ellen Drew and other members of the cast will attend. Ray Milland and Mark Sandrich, producing director was born, a reception and parade.

"Forty Little Mothers" April 17

The world premiere of Eddie Cantor in "Forty Little Mothers" will be held April 17th at Loew's Canal theatre, on New York's lower East Side. The opening will climax a series of homecoming festivities honoring Cantor.

Festivities will include a luncheon at the East Side Chamber of Commerce, the placing of a metal plaque marking the site where Cantor was born, a reception, and parade.

The proceeds from the opening of "Forty Little Mothers" will be donated by Loew's, Inc., to the following settlement houses: the Madonna House, the Educational Alliance, the Yeshiva, the University Settlement, the Henry Street Settlement House, the Madison Settlement, the Jacob A. Riis House, the Hamilton House and the Grand Street Settlement House. The tickets will be sold at $1 each.

Following the premiere Cantor and the picture begin a regular run at the Capitol. The stage show will be the first in that theatre since last August when Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland appeared with "The Wizard of Oz." Cantor will tour 11 cities.

"1,000,000 B. C." in Louisville

Hal Roach's "1,000,000 B.C." opened last week in Louisville for a special pre-release engagement. The premiere was attended by Victor Mature, star of the film; Governor Johnson and Mayor J. D. Scholtz.

Lynn Farnol, advertising and publicity director of United Artists and Monroe Greenthal, exploitation manager, are on a national tour to outline special campaigns for the company's customers and salesmen for the film. A national advertising campaign on the picture is scheduled to lead up to the release date, May 3d.

Ruggles Day in Tucson

Ruggles Day was observed in Tucson Sunday with Governor R. T. Jones and 23 mayors of Arizona cities participating in the dedication of Columbia's $500,000 adobe city of old Tucson for the filming of the Clarence Budington Kelland historical drama, "Arizona," starring Jean Arthur, William Holden and Warren William.

Festivities started at a luncheon in the Santa Rita Hotel's Desert Rood Garden, where Mr. Ruggles met the governors and visiting mayors and was presented with an official scroll designating him state historian.

In studio busses the guests were conveyed to within a half mile of old Tucson and from there continued the journey in ox-drawn wagons, stage coaches and carretas to America's only walled city. Catherine Jones, daughter of the Governor, officially opened the pioneer city. After the procession passed the general store, stage depot, the mission, Father Julian of the St. Xavier mission blessed the set and keys to old Tucson were presented by Nick Hall, mayor, to Mr. Ruggles. Other keys were presented to him, inviting him to the cities represented by the visiting mayors.

After the ceremonies several thousand Tucsonians were taken on tours through the eleven streets of the huge set. On Monday the company of 146 players and a technical crew of 200 moved into Tucson to film the first scenes, Peter Muncie's wagon-train entering the town.

AMPA Heads Set Five Aims

The retiring officers and directors of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, in New York, Thursday, set forth five recommendations for the continuance of the organization, as the membership was about to ballot for a new regime, results of which will be published in the next issue.

Retiring Paul N. Lazarus, Jr., president; Vincent Trotta, vice president; Herbert Spencer Berg, treasurer; Kenneth Clark, secretary and board members James R. Cron, Louis Lifton, Elias Sugarman and Martin Starr, recommended that the Ampa further its efforts to establish a relief fund for the eastern branch of the industry, limit its membership to only those actually working in film advertising and publicity, assign a committee to draft an up-to-date constitution to replace the six-year-old model now in effect and to drive for new members and at the same time weed out "dead-wood" from the ranks.

Eighteen new members joined during the retiring management's regime, in 1939-40, with six candidacies pending. Taking over last year, there was a $150 deficit, which has been turned into a three-dollar cash credit—the first time in years AMPA has been solvent. Average meeting-luncheon attendance was 74 persons weekly.

The Quigley Awards luncheon, last May, was among the special highlight meetings listed by the retiring officers during their administration.

Solomon to Join 20th-Fox

Eddie Solomon, a member of the Balaban & Katz publicity department in Chicago for the last 15 years, has resigned to take a position in the Twentieth Century-Fox home-office publicity department. He joins Twentieth Century-Fox Friday. He will be succeeded by Jack Garber.

Postpone Trial of Goldwyn-U.A. Action

The trial of Samuel Goldwyn's action against United Artists and Alexander Korda, involving the producer's attempt to obtain a release from his distribution contract with United Artists, has been postponed to April 23rd. Schwartz & Frohlich, Mr. Korda's counsel, requested the postponement on the grounds that they were not ready for trial. The trial will be held in federal court in New York.

Standard Plea Denied

Applications by George Leganas and Standard Pictures Distributing Corporation to dismiss a $32,400 breach of contract action against them have been denied by Samuel Hofstadter, New York supreme court justice. The plaintiff, Harry Segal, claims breach of a three-year employment contract, entered into in July, 1939, whereby he was general sales manager of Standard at five per cent of the gross. Mr. Segal claims that he was promised that the defendants would produce or acquire for distribution, at least 12 pictures yearly. He estimates the gross each year to be $216,000, and his salary $10,800. He is seeking three times that amount, for the three year-period.

Fire Loss Action

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation and De Luxe Laboratories, Inc., were named defendants this week in a suit for $82,346 damages filed in New York supreme court by Atherton Productions, Inc., Peck's Bad Boy Corporation and Principal Pictures Corporation. The suit claims that negligence of defendants caused a fire in a film warehouse in Little Ferry, N. J., in 1937 resulting in the loss of plaintiffs' negatives. Atherton Productions demands $42,864, Peck's Bad Boy Corporation, $29,700; Serial Producing, $4,768; and Principal Pictures, $5,014.

Decision Reserved

Decision was reserved in New York supreme court this week in the minority stockholders' suit against Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., Republic Pictures of Delaware, Setay Company, Columbia Broadcasting Company and Cajo Company. The plaintiffs claimed that Consolidated lost approximately $2,000,000 in deals with Republic and CBS.

Dismiss "Wind" Suit

A copyright infringement suit filed in Birmingham, Ala., by Ann R. Davis, administratrix of the estate of Susan Lawrence Davis, author of the book, "Authentic History of the Ku Klux Klan—1865-1877," against Margaret Mitchell, author of "Gone With the Wind" and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, was dismissed this week by T. A. Murphree, federal judge.

Berkson Closes Deal

J. S. Berkson of Screencraft Pictures has returned to New York following the closing of a deal with Superior Pictures, Inc., for its entire line-up consisting of 10 Tim McCoy westerns, eight Thrill-O-Dramas and "War Angels," featuring an all-women cast. The deal with Superior covers their four exchanges in Chicago, St. Louis, Milwaukee and Indianapolis. Screencraft has also closed a deal with International Pictures Distributing Company of Philadelphia for the entire program. B. H. Mills negotiated the deal.

Building Gulfport Theatres

A. L. Royal, Royal Theatres, Gulfport, Miss., is constructing a 550-seat theatre in downtown Gulfport and also a 400-seat Negro theatre there. Opening is expected in early May.

Theatre Circuit Formed in Idaho

A group of theatre owners, representing four of the largest independent circuits served out of the Salt Lake City exchanges, at a meeting last week in Blackfoot, Idaho, completed an organization that is to have a bearing on the operation of approximately 35 theatres. The organization's plans also call for control of additional theatres and affiliated lines of business.

The new company, known as the Theatres Security Corporation, organized under the laws of Idaho, with application made for the transaction of business in Utah, also has theatres in Nevada, Wyoming and Oregon. Capital authorized is $500,000 divided into $100 par value shares. Officers are C. E. Huish, Salt Lake City, president; I. H. Harris, Burley, Idaho, vice-president; Claude Hawk, Salt Lake City, secretary, and Paul De Mordaunt, Blackfoot, treasurer. The board of directors is comprised of the officers and Hugh Drennen, Rexburg, Idaho; C. C. Voeller, Buhl, Idaho; L. C. Denton, Caliente, Nevada, and V. A. Gilhool, Salt Lake City.

According to the Articles of Incorporation, the corporation will own, lease, purchase and operate motion picture theatres in the states mentioned, and may extend its operations to any part of the United States; may buy and distribute film or may engage in the theatre supply business; may acquire television franchises or own and operate radio stations; may purchase, lease or mortgage real and personal property, or may acquire, hold and dispose of securities of all kinds and stocks in other corporations.

The company will maintain offices in Salt Lake City and Blackfoot.

Vyvyan Donner Party

Vyvyan Donner, Movietone News fashion director, gave her annual party for New York Settlement House women last Friday when she entertained 25 members of the motion picture committee of the League of Mothers' Clubs of the United Neighborhood Association at the Twentieth Century-Fox Movietone studio, New York, for luncheon. After the luncheon the guests watched Miss Donner direct a spring bride fashion sequence for the newsreel.

Releasing 15 Czech Films

Edgar E. Lloyd will release in this country 15 Czechoslovakian features, all of which were made before the Nazi invasion. The films include "Merry Wives" (formerly "The Maidens' Guild of Kutna Hora"), "Zborov," "Karel Hynek Macha" and "Svanda Dudak," which is based on the modern Czech opera, "Svanda the Bag-Pipe Player." "Merry Wives," a historic comedy, won an award at the Venice Exposition.

Academy Television Survey Ready

The Research Council of Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences will soon issue its fourth annual comprehensive report on television. The report has been prepared by the Council's new developments committee, headed by Wesley C. Miller, of the MGM studio, aided by Charles Daily, William Mueller and Gordon Sawyer.

Myron Selznick Files 20th-Fox Court Action

The two year dispute between Twentieth Century-Fox and the Myron Selznick agency flared again this week when the agency filed a suit in superior court in Los Angeles for an injunction to prevent the studio from interfering with its business.

The complaint claims that on February 5, 1938, studio executives announced that henceforth they would not negotiate with representatives of the agency and, further, that the agency's activities were proving injurious to its own clients. Also made defendants were Joseph M. Schenck, Darryl F. Zanuck and Lew Schreiber, who are charged with inducing those under contract with the studio to break their pacts with the agency.

Music Copyright Action

An injunction and $500 damages are sought in an action filed this week in New Haven by Gene Buck, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, Irving Berlin, Inc., and Santley-Joy-Select, Inc., against the Pequot theatre, New Haven, from any further alleged infringement of the music copyright laws. Harry L. Lavietes, operator of the theatre, is specifically charged with the unlawful playing of "Bye, Bye Blues" and "An Apple for the Teacher" early this year.

Sues RKO over Script

Olga Linek Scholl Russ has filed suit in New York supreme court against RKO Radio for $25,000 damages and an injunction. The plaintiff charges the pirating of her script, "Long Live Love," in the Lily Pons film, "I Dream Too Much."

Lloyd Action Dismissed

A complaint by William J. Rapp and Lowell Brentano, authors of the story "Greek to You," charging plagiarism in the Harold Lloyd film "Professor Beware," was dismissed in federal court in New York this week. In the trial Mr. Lloyd testified that he returned the story five years ago and dismissed it from his mind. He said he paid $99,300 for the story "Professor Beware" and its adaptation rights.

M. V. Carroll, Treasurer Of National Supply, Dead

Matthew V. Carroll, treasurer and a director of General Theatres Equipment Corporation, and treasurer of National Theatre Supply Company, died in his 47th year at his home in Bronxville, N. Peter Clark, Inc., designer and manufacturer of stage equipment, is observing its 35th anniversary. Arthur Clark, son of the founder and now vice-president and director, in complete charge, also is observing his 35th birthday anniversary. Mr. Clark reports that the gross sales in 1939 approached $500,000.

Remodeled Theatre Opens

The remodeled and redecorated Pines theatre, Waldron, Ark., has been reopened under the name of the Scott theatre. Gerry Doig is manager of the house, which is part of the K. Lee Williams circuit.

William Faversham Dies; Famous Stage Character

William Faversham, 72, one of the American stage's most versatile actors, who became famous in the role of "Jim Carston" in "The Squaw Man," died at Bay Shore, Long Island, April 7th. Born in England the youngest of 11 boys Mr. Faversham, whose original name was William Jones, ran away from home to become an actor after a taste of soldier life in India.

His stage career began with "The Swiss Cottage" in London in 1886 and ended with "Lord and Lady Algy" in Montclair, N. J., in 1932. To list the plays in which he had appeared three columns of agate type are required in "Who's Who in the Theatre." For the last three years Mr. Faversham had lived in the Percy Williams Home for Actors at East Islip, L. I. He came to this country in 1887.

In 1914 Mr. Faversham had his first try at motion pictures. He took the leading role in Gilbert Parker's "The Right of Way." Other pictures in which he appeared were "Secrets of the Chateau," "Lady by Choice" and "Mystery Woman." He returned to Hollywood in other years but was never a success. His own outstanding role in "The Squaw Man" was taken by Dustin Farnum in the film version. In 1935 he appeared in a minor role in the color film, "Becky Sharp."

Francis Heacock Dies

Francis Heacock, 35, of the Warner Brothers West Coast publicity staff, died April 5th from injuries suffered last Tuesday when his automobile struck an embankment in Laurel Canyon, Cal., while he was returning home from a Warner preview.

Given blood transfusions by Jean Parker, actress, and Irving Rubine, a fellow-worker, Mr. Heacock failed to rally after two days in an oxygen tent. He formerly worked for the Associated Press in Hollywood and San Francisco and also on San Francisco and Portland newspapers.

Frank Carey, Circuit Operator

Frank Carey, 52, of the firm of Carey & Alexander, operator of theatres in Indiana and Illinois for many years, died April 5th in Lebanon, Ind., following a major operation. He and his brother-in-law, John R. Alexander, owned houses in Lebanon, Attica, Monticello and Rockville, Ind. Mr. Carey was a director of Affiliated Theatres, Inc.

Conrad Foster Dies

Conrad H. Foster, 65, former mayor of Traverse City, Mich., and manager of the local Butterfield circuit theatre, died there April 3rd. Mr. Foster started in the theatre in his native Boston when 14 years old. Later he became assistant treasurer of the Barnum & Bailey circus. In 1921 he went to Traverse City as manager of a film theatre for the Fitzpatrick McElroy Company and joined Butterfield Theatres. (Picture in Pictorial Section.)

Patricia Donovan

Miss Patricia Donovan, 23, daughter of Colonel William J. Donovan, former Assistant Attorney General of the United States and RKO counsel in the Government's anti-trust suit against the industry in federal court in New York, and commander of the "Fighting 69th" in the World War, died April 8th in an automobile accident 35 miles south of Fredericksburg, Va. Miss Donovan was born in Buffalo, where she was baptized by the late Rev. Francis P. Duffy, "Father Duffy" of her father's regiment.

Michael Mayen

Michael G. Mayen, 46, district manager for all suburban houses of the Minnesota Amusement Company in Minneapolis and St. Paul, died in Minneapolis April 6th. Mr. Mayen had been in show business since he was 15.

WHAT THE PICTURE DID FOR ME

Columbia

HIS GIRL FRIDAY: Cary Grant, Rosalind Russell, Ralph Bellamy—As good a comedy as you will have all season. Give it your best and it will do the same for you. Just a good show with an excellent cast that does all right for you and the patrons. Running time, 92 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

HIS GIRL FRIDAY: Cary Grant, Rosalind Russell, Ralph Bellamy—Dandy, snappy, fast moving picture that brought one of my largest crowds of the year. Everyone liked it without exception. What more could one ask? The dialogue is rapid but easily followed and the wisecracks are close together. Running time, 92 minutes. Played March 14.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

LONE WOLF STRIKES, THE: Warren William, Joan Perry—Just a fair picture. Not up to previous "Lone Wolf" films. Running time, 66 minutes. Played March 1-2.—J. Harry Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: James Stewart, Jean Arthur, Edward Arnold, Claude Rains, Thomas Mitchell, Guy Kibbee, Eugene Pallette—Played this late to fair crowds. One of the best pictures of 1939, in my opinion. James Stewart is one of my favorite players and Jean Arthur is so different. I guess it is because she only plays a part when it has something to offer and fits her type. Running time, 125 minutes. Played February 28-29.—C. W. Davis, Rockingham Theatre, Reidsville, N. C. Small town patronage.

MR. SMITH GOES TO WASHINGTON: Jean Arthur, James Stewart, Edward Arnold, Claude Rains, Guy Kibbee, Eugene Pallette, Thomas Mitchell—An exceedingly clever picture, well played and very interesting from start to finish, and all seeing the picture sure to like it and recommend it to their neighbors. Miss Arthur was excellent and pleasing. Jimmy Stewart played his part as an embryo Senator to perfection, and the remainder of the cast were fine in their several parts. Nearly everybody seeing the picture would like to see it again. Running time, 130 minutes.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

MUSIC IN MY HEART: Tony Martin, Rita Hayworth, Edith Fellows—Played this on gift night to average business. The picture pleased everyone. Would like to see Tony Martin in more good musical pictures. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 26.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

MUSIC IN MY HEART: Tony Martin, Rita Hayworth, Edith Fellows—Very good program picture. Pleased public. Good music. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 26.—Charles E. Myers, Jr., Myers Theatre, Nashville, N. C. General patronage.

TWO FISTED RANGERS: Charles Starrett, Lorna Gray, Sons of the Pioneers—When I first started playing Starrett's films, I didn't think so much of them and neither did the patrons, but he's growing on us. A good, fast-moving western with plenty of action, and that is what our cowboy fans crave. The Sons of the Pioneers, former radio musical unit, has become a definite asset to these westerns. Running time, 61 minutes. Played March 1-2.—J. Harry Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

TWO FISTED RANGERS: Charles Starrett, Lorna Gray, Sons of the Pioneers—Better than average Starrett western that drew the usual Saturday crowd. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 23.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

First National

DR. EHRLICH'S MAGIC BULLET: Edward G. Robinson, Ruth Gordon, Otto Kruger—Very fine production with excellent acting by the entire cast, but the poorest weekend gross we've ever had. Was ashamed of percentage report. The few who came out praised it very highly. Running time, 100 minutes. Played March 9-11.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

FIGHTING 69TH: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Jeffrey Lynn, Dennis Morgan, Alan Hale—It is a good picture, especially for Catholic situations. Business here was only average. That was partly due to a competitive all-college dance on one night. I tried to give them a good clear date on this picture but they knew better than I did and lost money by it. I doubled this with "Mexican Spitfire." Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 15-16.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

FIGHTING 69TH: James Cagney, Pat O'Brien, George Brent, Jeffrey Lynn, Dennis Morgan, Alan Hale—Absolutely tops. Ought to get the Academy Award. Good BO. Running time, 91 minutes. Played March 3-4.—A. J. Turcotte, Star Theatre, Newmarket, N. H. Small town patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, Gale Page, Jeffrey Lynn, Claude Rains, Eddie Albert, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—Business very good. The weather cold. Running time, 99 minutes. Played January 1-2.—Charles Israelson, Wells Beach Theatre, Wells Beach, Maine. General patronage.

FOUR WIVES: Lane Sisters, Jeffrey Lynn, Gale Page, Eddie Albert, Claude Rains, Dick Foran, Frank McHugh, May Robson—Good picture although not as good as "Four Daughters." Business good on this. Running time, 100 minutes. Played March 31-April 1.—A. J. Burcotte, Star Theatre, Newmarket, N. H. Small town patronage.

RETURN OF DR. X: Wayne Morris, Humphrey Bogart, Rosemary Lane—Creepy type of picture; no business on this since the stars will not draw much. Running time, 62 minutes. Played March 26-27.—A. J. Turcotte, Star Theatre, Newmarket, N. H. Small town patronage.

WE ARE NOT ALONE: Paul Muni, Jane Bryan, Flora Robson, Una O'Connor—The title of this one has already brought forth many wisecracks concerning the size of the audience in different localities. Well, we were not alone; but we were too close to it for comfort. This just didn't draw them in. I liked it greatly myself, and maybe it was nice that there was hardly anyone there to disturb me. It's magnificent but not magnetic. Running time, 112 minutes. Played March 28.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ANOTHER THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Ruth Hussey—Business pretty good. Running time, 102 minutes. Played December 29-30.—Charles Israelson, Wells Beach Theatre, Wells Beach, Maine. General patronage.

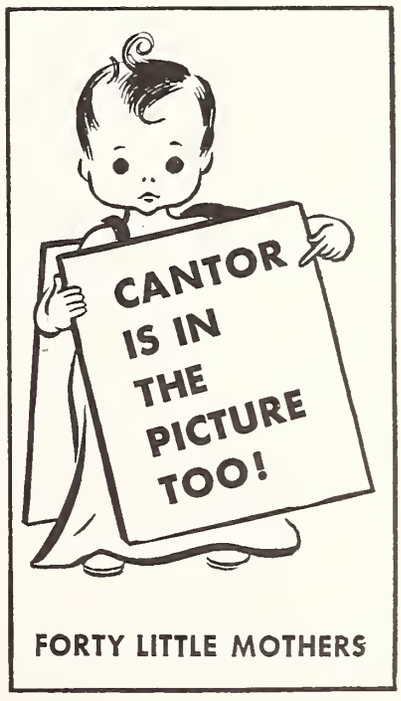
ANOTHER THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Ruth Hussey—I played this late and those that came thought it was very good. However, there were not too many there. Maybe they had all seen it elsewhere, but whatever the reason, they didn't turn out for it here. William Powell was in top form, the humor was dandy, the mystery held your interest and the action was very rapid, but the box office was out to lunch. Running time, 102 minutes. Played March 29-30.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

ANOTHER THIN MAN: William Powell, Myrna Loy, Ruth Hussey—Good picture; lots of excitement. Enjoyed it very much. Running time, 102 minutes. Played February 25-26.—Saul Korman, Grant Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Negro patronage.

BROADWAY MELODY OF 1940: Fred Astaire, Eleanor Powell—A glamorous dancing musical, but Astaire without Ginger Rogers doesn't click. A romance with Eleanor Powell just doesn't seem convincing. She can tap dance, and does in this. Booked an extra day (3) but it fell flat on the second day. Running time, 100 minutes. Played March 4-6.—C. W. Davis, Rockingham Theatre, Reidsville, N. C. Small town patronage.

CONGO MAISIE: Ann Sothern, John Carroll, Rita Johnson—A good show with Sothern doing all the work assisted by Rita Johnson. Mr. Carroll is no shakes as a lead, so do not expect too much from this picture. Sothern gives plenty of laughs with the wisecracks but that is all. Good but nothing to rave about. Running time, 70 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

DANCING CO-ED: Lana Turner, Artie Shaw and His Orchestra, Richard Carlson—Picture wasn't as much as expected. Artie Shaw sold the picture but we didn't see much of him. Played it with "Another Thin Man." Running time, 84 minutes. Played February 25-26.—Saul Korman, Grant Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Negro patronage.



EARL OF CHICAGO: Robert Montgomery, Edward Arnold—Failed to please. Montgomery cast in wrong type of picture. Running time, 87 minutes. Played March 28-29.—Charles E. Myers, Jr., Myers Theatre, Nashville, N. C. General patronage.

FAST AND LOOSE: Robert Montgomery, Rosalind Russell—We didn't expect a great deal from this one and were greatly surprised in a pleasant manner. Although there is no heavy acting and the plot is very light, we did very nicely on it at the box office and most of our audiences enjoyed it. Should stand by itself for a short run in most spots. Running time, 79 minutes. Played March 28-29.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining community patronage.

HARDY'S RIDE HIGH, THE: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Fay Holden, Cecilia Parker—We have found that this series of family pictures is a natural. This particular feature is not quite up to the standard of the previous Hardys but it makes pleasing entertainment and I think everyone was well satisfied. Good draw at the BO. Running time, 82 minutes. Played March 14-15.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining community patronage.

I TAKE THIS WOMAN: Hedy Lamarr, Spencer Tracy—Good entertainment. Pleased public very well. Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 10.—Charles E. Myers, Jr., Myers Theatre, Nashville, N. C. General patronage.

JOE AND ETHEL TURP CALL ON THE PRESIDENT: William Gargan, Ann Sothern, Walter Brennan, Lewis Stone—No pull to this but it pleases in spite of its rather slow pacing and lack of action. Cast fine, story very good, but the development is too slow to hold attention. Business slow, too. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 22-23.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

JUDGE HARDY AND SON: Mickey Rooney, Lewis Stone, Cecilia Parker, Fay Holden—Rooney will always pull them in here. Business above average and we welcome every one of these. Up to normal in the series and they're all good. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 31-April 2.—Roy Heffner, Jr., Key Theatre, Middleboro, Mass. General patronage.

MAN FROM DAKOTA, THE: Wallace Beery, Dolores Del Rio—Thin story, but Beery pulls and they accepted it as a good program picture, but not as good as "Thunder Afloat," and some that have gone before. —A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MAN FROM DAKOTA: Wallace Beery, Dolores Del Rio, John Howard—We have never been disappointed in any of Beery's pictures. Played this on Saturday to a mixed audience with good results. Running time, 74 minutes. Played March 30.—Morris Littman, Sylvan Theatre, Rutherfordton, N. C. Small town patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire—A good picture for the city but definitely not for farmers. No draw here. Running time, 110 minutes. Played March 31-April 2.—L. Woody, Jr., Palace Theatre, Golden City, Mo. Very small town and rural patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire—I played this during Holy Week when things are supposed to be poor but I had better than average attendance so there must be some draw to it for me. There are certainly some funny scenes in this but the humor is subtle. Western fans, of course, will not like it. Garbo has gained in popularity here because of this picture. Running time, 110 minutes. Played March 21-22.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

NINOTCHKA: Greta Garbo, Melvyn Douglas, Ina Claire—Surprised me because Garbo is poison here. This one they liked and did fair business. Running time, 110 minutes. Played March 12-14.—Saul Korman, Grant Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Negro patronage.

NORTHWEST PASSAGE: Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan, Ruth Hussey—Color. A most exciting and thrilling picture, full of thrills and intensely interesting from start to finish. Tracy and Young seen at their very best, and who would have put more action into the picture, but more action simply impossible. A sequel of "Northwest Passage" would be most heartily welcomed. The picture is going on second week at the Tower theatre, where many more Oklahomans will be highly entertained. Running time, 126 minutes. Played March 21-27.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

NORTHWEST PASSAGE: Spencer Tracy, Robert Young, Walter Brennan—Good picture; good business. Beautiful color and scenery but a little too bloodthirsty for the women. Running time, 126 minutes. Played March 27-28.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

SHOP AROUND THE CORNER: James Stewart, Margaret Sullavan, Frank Morgan—Good picture; fair business. Lots of subtle comedy in this show. Running time, 100 minutes. Played March 24-25.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

THEY ALL COME OUT: Rita Johnson, Tom Neal —Don't you believe it. They don't all come out to see this picture. Leo will have to change his diet. A glorified "Crime Doesn't Pay." Rita Johnson looks good.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

YOUNG TOM EDISON: Mickey Rooney, Fay Bainter, Virginia Weidler, George Bancroft—Saw this at an advanced preview and what a picture. Fay Bainter did a swell job along with everyone else. Rooney perfect as young Edison.—Roy Heffner, Jr., Key Theatre, Middleboro, Mass. General patronage.

Monogram

GANGSTER'S BOY: Jackie Cooper—Acting by Cooper very good but the rest of the cast was not so good. Name very misleading; people expected more of a thrill. Very little action. Not so well liked but would be OK as a double feature. Running time, 58 minutes. Played March 20.—A. L. Cady, Lyceum Theatre, Birnamwood, Wis. Rural and small town patronage.

MUTINY IN THE BIG HOUSE: Charles Bickford, Barton MacLane—Monogram need not take a back seat on this one, nor the exhibitor who plays it. A gripping action film with plenty of punch that kept our bargain night crowd on the edge of their seats. As good as any of the majors' productions of similar type. Running time, 81 minutes. Played February 29.—J. Harry Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

STREETS OF NEW YORK: Jackie Cooper, Marjorie Reynolds, Dick Purcell, Martin Spellman—A very good picture enjoyed by everyone. A picture with a good moral for boys up to sixteen years of age. Acting by Cooper very good. Played to a full house. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 12.—A. L. Cady, Lyceum Theatre, Birnamwood, Wis. Rural and small town patronage.

Paramount

BUCK BENNY RIDES AGAIN: Jack Benny, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Andy Devine—Saw this at the exchange in Boston, and Paramount should star this "Rochester." Production handled very well but Benny should stick to the radio.—Roy Heffner, Jr., Key Theatre, Middleboro, Mass. General patronage.

DISPUTED PASSAGE: Akim Tamiroff, Dorothy Lamour, John Howard—Here is a fine picture from Paramount. In fact, it is the first good picture we have had from them for quite some time. This one has what people like, good story, good acting and public appeal. This is one you should not pass up. Business was above average. Played February 25-27.—Frank J. Biberstein, Attica Theatre, Attica, Kansas. Rural patronage.

GREAT VICTOR HERBERT, THE: Walter Connolly, Allan Jones, Mary Martin—Here is a very good picture for music lovers. I have a lot of them here so we did quite well at the box office. I am not sure how this will go in small towns but I do not think the music is over anyone's head. The plot is interesting and no one should come in during the middle of the picture, but just try to fix it so they won't. Have your sound checked for the extremely high notes in the last reel. Running time, 91 minutes. Played March 19.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

GREAT VICTOR HERBERT, THE: Allan Jones, Mary Martin, Walter Connolly—Not a show for the small towns. It is too much of a "class" type film and there just isn't enough patronage who will appreciate this effort. Too bad, because it is really a fine picture and some of the music is outstanding. Running time, 90 minutes. Played February 27-28.—J. Harry Abbott, Grant Theatre, Georgetown, Ohio. Small town and rural patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Max Fleischer Color Cartoon Feature—A much finer cartoon in every respect that grossed about one-third as much as "Snow White." The art work, characterizations and music are excellent, but the adult draw was very poor. Only criticism: it was too short. Running time, 77 minutes. Played March 16-20.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

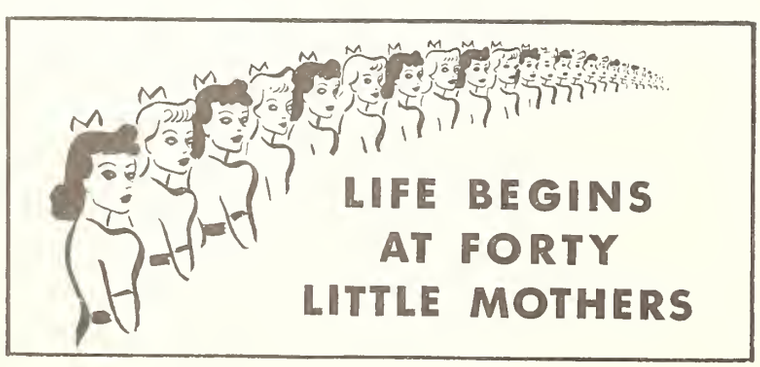
GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Max Fleischer's Color Cartoon Feature—If Mr. Gulliver had only forgotten to stop at this house, we would have been much more happy. With the exception of the character of "Gabby" there was nothing to hold the attention. Kids ate it up, that is, the younger ones did. Adults were totally unimpressed, except to comment on the jerky movements of the figures. All in all, Gulliver will not further the cause of the cartoon feature as entertainment. Business fair. Running time, 77 minutes. Played March 7-9.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS: Max Fleischer's Color Cartoon Feature—You won't get rich on this one. Not enough adult business. Running time, 77 minutes.—A. J. Turcotte, Star Theatre, Newmarket, N. H. Small town patronage.

HONEYMOON IN BALI: Fred MacMurray, Madeleine Carroll, Allan Jones, Helen Broderick—One of those pictures you never get tired of looking at. Excellent entertainment from start to finish. Paramount deserves a word of credit for this one. Will please all if you can get them in. Business just so-so. Title greatest handicap for small town exhibitor. Running time, 95 minutes. Played March 16-20.—F. O. Slenker, Slenker Theatres, Rock Island, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

KNIGHTS OF THE RANGE: Russell Hayden, Jean Parker—Very good western. Better than average story and beautiful outdoor scenery. Played March 22-23.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

LIGHT THAT FAILED: Ronald Colman, Walter Huston, Ida Lupino, Muriel Angelus—Business just average but this Colman is one of the finest actors in the business. Even the kids were quiet all through the picture. Running time, 90 minutes. Played March 28-30.—Roy Heffner, Jr., Key Theatre, Middleboro, Mass. General patronage.



MAN ABOUT TOWN: Jack Benny, Dorothy Lamour, Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, Edward Arnold, Binnie Barnes—Excellent musical comedy. "Rochester" is very good and does a little job of show stealing. Should please even the most cantankerous. Running time, 85 minutes. Played March 20-22.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

PAROLE FIXER: William Henry, Virginia Dale, Robert Paige—Just another picture, the likes of which we play, about 100 others, during a year. No draw even on bargain night. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 12-13.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

SEVENTEEN: Jackie Cooper, Betty Field—Fell far short of the entertainment record set by their previous picture, "What a Life." Picture did a disappointing business, as based on hopes of equaling "What a Life" gross. Betty Field was just a little too sophisticated to be believable as a high school age flirt. Think the "Seventeen" plot is getting a little frayed around the corners anyway. Running time, 78 minutes. Played March 23-26.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

SHOWDOWN: William Boyd, Russell Hayden—Good picture; good business. Running time, 63 minutes. Played March 26.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

WOMEN WITHOUT NAMES: Ellen Drew, Robert Paige—Better than average programmer with several exciting and dramatic sequences. Picture should do well in action houses. Running time, 63 minutes. Played March 20-22.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

Republic

IN OLD MONTEREY: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Story, George Hayes—This is the finest Autry we have ever played. Many fine comments from the audience. We think this feature should be played in every theatre. Business good on this picture at a time when it has been 'way off. Hats off to Republic. Let's have more like this one. Played March 17.—Frank J. Biberstein, Attica Theatre, Attica, Kansas. Rural patronage.

JEEPERS CREEPERS: Weaver Brothers, Elviry, Roy Rogers—Don't give your best time to this one. It will please the farm trade but not the city folks, at least, not here. Definitely not a percentage. Double bill feature. Hard to sell title. Fair to low gross on weekend.—State Theatre, Larned, Kansas. Rural patronage.

MOUNTAIN RHYTHM: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—Never could understand what the fans find in this guy Autry, but he seems to have what it takes, so maybe I'm wrong. Invariably will do as well if not better than the biggest things I play. My prayer, bigger and better Autrys. Played March 2-6.—F. O. Slenker, Slenker Theatres, Rock Island, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

MY WIFE'S RELATIVES: James, Lucile and Russell Gleason, Harry Davenport—First of the Higgins Family I have played and in every situation audience literally ate it up. Just the type of picture for the average small town. More favorable comments than on some of better bets. Harry Davenport as "Granpa Higgins" a real favorite. This series should prove a great bet for exhibitors. Played double with Autry's "Mountain Rhythm." Played March 2-6.—F. O. Slenker, Slenker Theatres, Rock Island, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

ROVIN' TUMBLEWEEDS: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, Mary Carlisle—Why can't they give this Autry a good story? If he is good box office without any story, what would he be in a good picture? Running time, 61 minutes. Played March 28-30.—L. Woody, Jr., Palace Theatre, Golden City, Mo. Very small town and rural patronage.

SOUTH OF THE BORDER: Gene Autry, Smiley Burnette, June Storey—The title pulled them in, but, even so, Autry pictures do not click as they used to. This is somewhat better in plot than some of his others. Even the youngsters comment on the fact that, as an actor, Autry is a fair singer. But, why, oh why, must he always be "Gene Autry" in every picture, and why must the dialogue be so stilted and trite, and why does every situation place Autry in the position of an exalted personage? Every character, with the exception of Burnette, kowtows, if not in action, then in lines, to the "Great I Am." It's just too much for patrons to swallow any more. His old fans are dropping out and new ones are seemingly not being created. At least that is the situation here. Business just fair. Reaction on about same basis. Running time, 71 minutes. Played March 15-16.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

WALL STREET COWBOY: Roy Rogers, George Hayes, Raymond Hatton—Here's one that's different and will prove a welcome change to the action fans. "Windy" Hayes and Raymond Hatton divide honors with Rogers, the star. One of those East-West stories that always seem to click. Played double with "Zero Hour" to a trifle better than average. Played March 14-16.—F. O. Slenker, Slenker Theatres, Rock Island, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

ZERO HOUR: Frieda Inescort, Otto Kruger—Played double with "Wall Street Cowboy" to a trifle better than average. Played March 14-16.—F. O. Slenker, Slenker Theatres, Rock Island, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

RKO Radio

EVERYTHING'S ON ICE: Irene Dare, Edgar Kennedy—Very nice picture; will please all those who see it. With proper stories will draw them in at box office. Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 7-9.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

FLYING DEUCES: Laurel and Hardy, Jean Parker—Same old Laurel and Hardy with their dead pan comedy and gags. Proved a welcome change to my audiences, perhaps because they had not seen this pair in several years. Picture well produced and got plenty of laughs; in fact, laughter in last reel of aviation escapades almost drowned out dialogue and sound. Played with "Marshal of Mesa City" to better than average business. Running time, 65 minutes. Played March 21-23.—F. O. Slenker, Slenker Theatres, Rock Island, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

HUNCHBACK OF NOTRE DAME: Charles Laughton, Maureen O'Hara, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Walter Hampden, Thomas Mitchell, Basil Rathbone—It's as big as they said it was. Good BO on this. Running time, 116 minutes. Played March 24-25.—A. J. Turcotte, Star Theatre, Newmarket, N. H. Small town patronage.

ISLE OF DESTINY: William Gargan, Wallace Ford, Jung Lang, Katherine DeMille—Cancel, P.N.P., or swap, but don't make the mistake of playing this even on the lower half of a double bill. A complete waste of time, film and effort. The plot becomes so entangled that the actors got to wondering what it was all about and wandered around in a fog of color. They had nothing on the audience, though, some of which just stopped wondering and wandered to the nearest exits. No draw, no business, no wonder. Running time, 83 minutes. Played March 22-23.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

MARSHAL OF MESA CITY: George O'Brien, Virginia Vale—Too bad—these O'Briens have capable casts, plausible story, action and direction, but still don't do as well at the BO as other outdoor pictures. I hope in time the fans will get over their peeve over O'Brien's conceited mugging and take these present day offerings for what they are worth. Played double feature with "Flying Deuces," the two making ideal fare for small towns. Running time, 62 minutes. Played March 21-23.—F. O. Slenker, Slenker Theatres, Rock Island, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

MEET DR. CHRISTIAN: Jean Hersholt, Dorothy Lovett—A small town natural. Nothing big or pretentious but just the type of picture that all the natives can understand. Hersholt as usual gives one of his stellar performances. This series from RKO should develop into a good bet for the small towns. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 9-13.—F. O. Slenker, Slenker Theatres, Rock Island, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

MEXICAN SPITFIRE: Lupe Velez, Leon Errol, Donald Woods—This is decidedly crazy and slapstick but the audience roared all the time it was showing. In other words, they liked it. I had average business as this was doubled with "Fighting 69th." Running time, 67 minutes. Played March 15-16.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

NURSE EDITH CAVELL: Anna Neagle, Edna May Oliver, May Robson, George Sanders, Zasu Pitts—A fine picture of its kind. A swell cast, and Anna Neagle wonderful. Will register with the intellectuals of your community but unfortunately the rank and file in the small towns never heard of Edith Cavell. Hence, picture will not break any records. Running time, 97 minutes. Played March 7-9.—F. O. Slenker, Slenker Theatres, Rock Island, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON: Thomas Mitchell, Edna Best, Freddie Bartholomew, Terry Kilburn, Tim Holt—Grand entertainment that pleases just about everyone. This is the kind of a picture you can take pleasure in presenting your patrons. School cooperation should be readily forthcoming for this stellar attraction. Even without it we turned in the best mid week business in months. Step on it, it will pay you well. Running time, 91 minutes. Played March 20-21.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON: Thomas Mitchell, Freddie Bartholomew, Edna Best, Terry Kilburn, Tim Holt—An excellent production, finely acted, that should appeal to any class of audience. Local chuches sponsored the show and with our regular business our midweek gross was a little better than normal. Running time, 91 minutes. Played March 27-28.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

BLUE BIRD, THE: Shirley Temple, Spring Byington—A fantasy. It is a beautiful picture; pleases about 75 per cent. Shirley is certainly slipping fast at the box office. Seems she was a novelty that is wearing off. She is as pretty and talented as ever but is losing adult appeal. Running time, 83 minutes. Played March 29-30—C. W. Davis, Rockingham Theatre, Reidsville, N. C. Small town patronage.

CISCO KID AND THE LADY, THE: Cesar Romero, Marjorie Weaver—They liked this one. It is much better than Warner Baxter made the last one. I think they have the right cast in this one. Running time, 74 minutes. Played March 26-28.—Saul Korman, Grant Theatre, Detroit, Mich. Negro patronage.

DAY-TIME WIFE: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Warren William, Binnie Barnes—Here is a picture that is really tops. Well liked by everyone. In faot, people were talking about it days after the picture was played. It has fine audience appeal. Linda Darnell plays a wonderful part, in fact, as near perfect as one could wish. Power plays his usual fine role and he is tops here. Congratulations, Fox. Let's have more of them. Played February 11-13.—Frank J. Biberstein, Attica Theatre, Attica, Kansas. Rural patronage.

DAY-TIME WIFE: Tyrone Power, Linda Darnell, Warren William, Binnie Barnes—Fair comedy that did not do anything at box office. Allocated too high for its value. Running time, 72 minutes. Played March 17-18.—A. J. Turcotte, Star Theatre, Newmarket, N. H. Small town patronage.

DRUMS ALONG THE MOHAWK: Henry Fonda, Claudette Colbert, Edna May Oliver—Very good picture and very good business. Running time, 103 minutes. Played November 17-18.—Charles Israelson, Wells Beach Theatre, Wells Beach, Maine. General patronage.

GRAPES OF WRATH, THE: Henry Fonda, Jane Darwell, Russell Simpson, John Carradine—If you are interested in box office receipts, here is the answer. A picture that everyone wants to see, fearlessly produced with plenty of action. This one did the biggest opening day in years with plenty of crowds turned away. Picture held up good. No other pictures doing any business of consequence, but this one gets the money. Play it early and advertise it. They will come. Running time, 128 minutes. Played March 24-28.—State Theatre, Larned, Kansas. Rural patronage.

HE MARRIED HIS WIFE: Joel McCrea, Nancy Kelly, Mary Boland—I played this against bad competition at a bad time but did very well at the box office. It is very funny and is of the fast talking type. A good many risque remarks were enjoyed here by the students. The sound and quality of the picture were excellent and well worth mentioning. If your patrons like the screwy type of comedy, they'll like this one. I doubled it with "Raffles." Running time, 83 minutes. Played March 23.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

HERE I AM A STRANGER: Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce, Richard Dix, Roland Young, Gladys George—Skip it if you can; you won't miss anything. Running time, 83 minutes. Played March 21.—A. J. Turcotte, Star Theatre, Newmarket, N. H. Small town patronage.

HIGH SCHOOL: Jane Withers, Joe Brown, Jr.—Jane must be growing up or her previous pictures are catching up on her. She has lost her draw for us. Running time, 74 minutes. Played March 15-16.—A. J. Turcotte, Star Theatre, Newmarket, N. H. Small town patronage.

JONES FAMILY IN QUICK MILLIONS: Jed Prouty, Spring Byington—Played this Friday and Saturday and believe it is the best of the series to date. It went over fine and the audience left with a request that we bring them back again. Business was above regular Friday and Saturday. Played February 16-17.—Frank J. Biberstein, Attica Theatre, Attica, Kansas. Rural patronage.

LITTLE OLD NEW YORK: Alice Faye, Fred MacMurray, Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce—Good picture that pleased an average crowd. Would do more business with a different title in sections this far away from New York. Played March 24-26.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

LITTLE OLD NEW YORK: Alice Faye, Fred MacMurray, Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce—Fine prevue trailer on this feature but the picture did not live up to the promises of the trailer. Alice Faye sadly miscast, acted all over the screen with the abandoned movements of a jitterbug. Greene not much better. After "Rulers of the Sea," this looks like a carbon copy of that story in new settings. Business fair; patron reaction mild. Running time, 100 minutes. Played March 24-26.—M. R. Harrington, Avalon Theatre, Clatskanie, Ore. Small town and rural patronage.

LITTLE OLD NEW YORK: Alice Faye, Fred MacMurray, Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce—Here's another good picture from Fox. Good story and good acting, though title should have been first steamboat by Robert Fulton. Business above average. Running time, 100 minutes. Played March 27-28.—Morris Littman, Sylvan Theatre, Rutherfordton, N. C. Small town patronage.

LITTLE OLD NEW YORK: Alice Faye, Fred MacMurray, Richard Greene, Brenda Joyce—Rates just a fair program picture. The Negro (Clarence Hummel Wilson) stole the show from the rest of the cast. It got by, but that is just about all. The trailer ballyhooed it too high, for one thing. It certainly was not all they claimed for it. They make the mistake of overselling the pictures on a lot of trailers. Some restraint in this matter would be welcome. You can't gull the public any more.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

MAN WHO WOULDN'T TALK, THE: Lloyd Nolan, Jean Rogers—Your patrons will be talking to themselves after seeing this one, but if I were you, I would not listen; you wouldn't sleep well.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

SHOOTING HIGH: Jane Withers, Gene Autry, Marjorie Weaver—Good picture for small town and good business. Not a big picture but one that will please the weekend crowds. Running time, 65 minutes. Played March 29-30.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronge.

SWANEE RIVER: Don Ameche, Andrea Leeds, Al Jolson—As fine a picture as we've ever played, that grossed an average weekend business with advanced prices. The older patrons turned out good for this one.

"THE KID IS GREAT!"

"CANTOR SHOWS PROMISE"

40 LITTLE MOTHERS

Running time, 84 minutes. Played March 23-25.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

United Artists

FOUR FEATHERS: Ralph Richardson, John Clements, June Duprez, C. Aubrey Smith—A very good picture that did nice weekend business. I can't understand why so much is made of Ralph Richardson. Dialogue bad.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

OF MICE AND MEN: Burgess Meredith, Lon Chaney, Jr., Betty Field—From our audience reaction, this controversial document that is called "Of Mice and Men," the fewer that are produced the better the industry will be off. The brutal scene of killing the old dog sickened some of our patrons. I don't want any part of this type picture, and the kick-backs that we got from our patrons for running it will hold us for some time. Steinbeck or no Steinbeck, when they have to build a picture around a half-wit, they are damn hard up for subjects.—A. E. Hancock, Columbia Theatre, Columbia City, Ind. General patronage.

RAFFLES: David Niven, Olivia de Havilland—I doubled this with "He Married His Wife" and did quite well. I think the draw was evenly divided between the two films. The trailer on this is extra good for interest's sake. This is nothing exceptional but it is good cop and robber fare. I do think they could have gotten along with a little more light on some of the scenes. Two-thirds of the picture is really a little too dark. Running time, 70 minutes. Played March 23.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

REBECCA: Laurence Olivier, Joan Fontaine, Judith Anderson, Nigel Bruce, George Sanders, Reginald Denny—It's our opinion that "Rebecca" is one of the very best pictures that United Artists has ever released, and that when a better picture is produced that UA will produce it. Intensely interesting from start to finish and enthralling and entrancing with no hint as to ending till the picture ends. Miss Fontaine was superb and exhibited all of the characteristics of a great actress, while Olivier, Anderson and Bruce played their parts with exquisite skill, technique and fine performances. Our hat is off to UA for making one of the best pictures of the year and a picture that is guaranteed to please all classes of patrons, big, little, old and young women and what comes with 'em. Running time, 151 minutes. Played March 28-April 4.—William Noble, Criterion Theatre, Oklahoma City, Okla. General patronage.

STAGECOACH: Claire Trevor, John Wayne, Andy Devine, Thomas Mitchell—While this drew very well, it did not come up to expectations, and some of my patrons were disappointed in it. The photography is extremely good and the picture is well acted. Story is only fair, but the acting of Thomas Mitchell is superb. His characterization of "Doc Boone," an old soak, is very, very good. Summing up, I think that the feature will stand up in most places and go over big in some, so don't be afraid of it. Running time, 96 minutes. Played March 21-22.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Can. Mining community patronage.

Universal

DOUBLE ALIBI: Wayne Morris, Margaret Lindsay—Very unabsorbing. Failed to get the least bit excited about it. Running time, 51 minutes. Played March 25-26.—W. C. Lewellen, Uptown Theatre, Pueblo, Colo. General patronage.

FIRST LOVE: Deanna Durbin, Helen Parrish, Robert Stack, Leatrice Joy, Eugene Pallette—We had our spring fashion show with this picture and really went to town. I doubt if we would have enjoyed as good a business without the fashion show.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

INVISIBLE MAN RETURNS: Vincent Price, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Nan Grey—This one will surprise you because it sure pulls them in. The best midweek business this winter, and the picture satisfied them. Played March 27-28.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

OKLAHOMA FRONTIER: Johnny Mack Brown, Fuzzy Knight, Bob Baker—We have had better westerns than this offering. Too much dark scenes. Rather slow and draggy. Running time, 58 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

UNEXPECTED FATHER: Baby Sandy, Mischa Auer—Very good picture. One of the few received from this company that drew in the customers. Play it. Played March 15-16.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

Warner Brothers

BROTHER RAT AND A BABY: Wayne Morris, Priscilla Lane, Jane Bryan, Ronald Reagan, Eddie Albert, Jane Wyman—Wayne Morris too noisy and silly. Not as good as the first "Brother Rat." However, will please. Played March 18-20.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

DEAD END KIDS ON DRESS PARADE: "Dead End Kids," John Litel—An excellent military school picture that pleased.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

GRANNY GET YOUR GUN: May Robson, Harry Davenport—Good picture that drew exceptionally well. Robson well liked here. Picture too short was the only criticism. Running time, 60 minutes. Played March 14-15.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Ritz Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

INVISIBLE STRIPES: George Raft, Jane Bryan, William Holden, Humphrey Bogart—George Raft gave his usual outstanding performance. A little different type of gangster picture. Failed to draw them as expected. Don't recommend it for all theatres. Played March 22-23.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

Miscellaneous

MILL ON THE FLOSS (World): Geraldine Fitzgerald, Frank Lawton—This drew very well, much to my surprise. The accent is hard to get but the picture is well done. It moves rapidly through a long story by means of very short episodes. A tieup with schools is the natural way to handle this. I am still amazed at the way it drew them in here. Running time, 81 minutes. Played March 26.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

Short Features

Columbia

AWFUL GOOF, THE: Charley Chase—As good a Chase comedy as you will want. Plenty of laughs for our weekend crowds. Running time, 18 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

GLOVE SLINGERS: Noah Berry, Jr.—A nice two-reeler that is not especially funny but moves along at a good rate and maintains interest. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

HAPPY TOTS' EXPEDITION: Color Rhapsodies—Here is a color cartoon that should be saved for Fourth of July. Want to know why? Well, it is appropriate because of a skyrocket in it and also it certainly is punk. There wasn't a Happy Tot in the audience while this was on. Well, anyway, it is very short. Running time, six minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

HISTORIC CITIES OF INDIA: Columbia Tours—Interesting and instructive. Well produced.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MIDNIGHT FROLICS: Color Rhapsodies—Columbia did something a little different on this with an organ background. Really worth playing.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SCRAPPY'S BIRTHDAY: Scrappy Cartoons—Just a waste of film. Nothing to it. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS: NO. 4—I believe these short subjects are as well received as any single reels on the market in this situation.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SCREEN SNAPSHOTS, NO. 5: Art in Hollywood—Excellent for good audience reaction. Always good, so give it when you have a weak feature. They help a lot if properly advertised. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STATIC IN THE ATTIC: Broadway Comedies—If you're looking for a good comedy, take it from us that you really got one in this one.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

U. S. TREASURY: Washington Parade, No. 2—Very good educational short that was tops. Showing the method of making bills in the printing and engraving department of the Treasury. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer

ALFALFA'S DOUBLE: Our Gang—A good comedy enjoyed by everyone.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

BLUE DANUBE: MGM Cartoons—A most beautiful color cartoon showing how the Danube River became blue. It is positively excellent. I preceded this with Paramount's "Blue Danube Waltz," and the two made a perfect combination that the audience still mentions to me. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

DAY ON TREASURE ISLAND, A; NIGHT DE-

SCENDS ON TREASURE ISLAND: FitzPatrick Traveltalk—I tried running these two reels on the San Francisco Fair as a single short and the idea was applauded by the audience. I spliced these two shorts together after removing the end and beginning titles from the middle and they fitted together perfectly. The night scenes are perfect. I get a kick out of experimenting with shorts that go together like this and they always go over well with the crowd. Running time, 18 minutes.—Small college town and rural patronage.

DOMINEERING MALE, THE: Pete Smith Specialties—Not up to Metro standards.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FISHING BEAR, THE: MGM Cartoons—It's a good color cartoon featuring Papa Bear of Goldilocks fame. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

FISHING BEAR, THE: MGM Cartoons—A dandy colored cartoon. Metro has something in these bears.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

FORGOTTEN VICTORY: Passing Parade, No. 11—A splendid subject. The story of American wheat that is a natural for theatres in rural sections.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

MAINTAIN THE RIGHT: Pete Smith Specialties—Story of the Northwest Mounties and excellent.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

MARINE CIRCUS: Pete Smith Specialties—A very smart single describing the aquarium in Florida. This is a very interesting reel and the underwater scenes are good. The color is marvelous. It's worth playing at any time. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining community patronage.

MIRACLE AT LOURDES: MGM Miniatures—Excellent short that should be tied in with churches. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

NIGHT DESCENDS ON TREASURE ISLAND: FitzPatrick Traveltalks—A dandy colored reel of the San Francisco Fair at night. Pictures of the old masters excellent.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

NIGHT DESCENDS ON TREASURE ISLAND: FitzPatrick Traveltalks—Very fine with wonderful color makes this an outstanding short. No one can come up to Jimmie FitzPatrick when it comes to making shorts. Running time, eight minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

OLD NATCHEZ: FitzPatrick Traveltalks—Good traveltalk in color.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

OLD SOUTH, THE: MGM Miniatures—A Metro miniature that does not come up to the standard of the others in this series. Running time, 10 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

OLD SOUTH: MGM Miniatures—This may be a plug for "Gone with the Wind" but don't let that stop you from booking it anywhere you care to. It is interesting and well done. It should be a natural for southern runs. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

POETRY OF NATURE: Pete Smith Specialties—Pete Smith, you did an excellent job on this one. I believe every exhibitor will agree. Play it, boys.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

POUND FOOLISH: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—You can't beat this series and this one is better than the average. Action, interest and a lot of well-known players help this one out greatly. Running time, 20 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

POUND FOOLISH: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—Very good two-reeler of the Crime Doesn't Pay Series. Running time, 20 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

ROMANCE OF THE POTATO: Pete Smith Specialties—I couldn't see much entertainment to this one. Has laugh at end. The poorest Pete Smith Specialty and Pete has been consistently good. Running time, nine minutes.—C. W. Davis, Rockingham Theatre, Reidsville, N. C. Small town patronage.

ROMANCE OF THE POTATO: Pete Smith Specialties—Good enough in general but not up to Pete Smith's usual standard. However, it really is quite educational in a humorous sort of way. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

STORY OF DR. JENNER: Passing Parade, No. 4—This is a dandy historical and biographical sketch on the discovery of a serum to combat smallpox. My audience was engrossed with it and many people told me that they would like to see more of this series. Running time, 10 minutes.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining community patronage.

THAT INFERIOR FEELING: Robert Benchley—Benchley is not at his best in this one, although he ordinarily goes well here. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

TIME OUT FOR LESSONS: Our Gang—The best "Gang" for a long time. The dance sequence is especially good.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

WHAT'S YOUR I. Q.?: Pete Smith Specialties—An interesting short subject, similar to several radio programs, that could have been a lot better.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

WHILE AMERICA SLEEPS: Crime Doesn't Pay Series—A very timely subject, dealing with espionage of airplane factories in United States. Well played and will please most audiences. Running time, 20 minutes.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining community patronage.

Paramount

BLUE DANUBE, THE: Symphonic Series—This is excellent and done in a blue tint. The audience applauded, which is something unusual. I followed it on the same program with MGM's "Blue Danube Cartoon," and the combination made a great hit. Try booking them into the same show and give your patrons a surprise. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

BUSY LITTLE BEARS: Paragraphics—Here is a natural. Three cub bears on the loose and they get more laughs than many a comedy. Swell on any bill anywhere. Play it and bill it. Running time, 10 minutes.—F. O. Slenker, Slenker Theatres, Rock Island, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

CATCHING WHOPPERS: Ted Husing—I would just as soon they would go back to catching minnows. They have run out of new material on these big fish shorts. They are just as good as any but we have had too many of them. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

FEMALES IS FICKLE: Popeye The Sailor—Better than average Popeye cartoon.—N. E. Frank, Wayland Theatre, Wayland, Mich. Small town patronage.

GEORGE OLSEN AND HIS MUSIC: Headliners—This is a very good musical reel. Running time, 10 minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

HERE'S HAL: Hal Kemp and His Orchestra—Above average band reel. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

HERE'S HAL: Hal Kemp and His Orchestra—Good musical reel. Running time, 10 minutes—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

MUSICAL MOUNTAINEERS: Betty Boop Cartoons—A very funny "Betty Boop" which pleased all but not 100%. Why not 100%? Well, it was too, too short. Running time, seven minutes.—J. A. Reynolds, Director of Education and Recreation, Prison Theatre, New Jersey State Prison, Trenton, N. J. Prison patronage.

NEVER SOCK A BABY: Popeye the Sailor—The usual type of Popeye cartoon. Paramount will have to do better by our Popeye if they expect him to maintain his place in the sun.—F. O. Slenker, Slenker Theatres, Rock Island, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

NOT SO DUMB: Paragraphics—An interesting short subject about animals, showing their intelligence or lack of it.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

POPULAR SCIENCE: No. 4—Very good color and interesting items make this worth while. The main part of this is devoted to salmon. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

TED FIO RITO AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Headliners—Excellent musical short. Too bad this type of product does not register with small town and rural patronage.—F. O. Slenker, Slenker Theatres, Rock Island, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

TOUCHDOWN REVIEW: Paragraphics—Very, very good.—Sammie Jackson, Jackson Theatre, Flomaton, Al. General patronage.

RKO Radio

ACRES OF PLENTY: Reelisms—OK reel on migratory farmers. Advertise it if you are near some of them. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

CUPID RIDES THE RANGE: Ray Whitley Comedies—Satisfactory musical western. Fits in well where a touch of horse opera is needed in connection with a doubtful feature.—F. O. Slenker, Slenker Theatres, Rock Island, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

DONALD'S GOLF GAME: Walt Disney Cartoons—This one drew plenty of laughs. Another piece of art from the pen of Disney. Running time, eight minutes.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining community patronage.

FERDINAND THE BULL: Walt Disney Cartoons—Another masterpiece from Walt Disney. How he does it I don't know, but my hat's off to him. He certainly can make cartoons and this is one of the best we have had. Play it by all means, no matter how old. Running time, eight minutes.—A. R. Dakin, Rice Lake Theatre, Bissett, Manitoba, Canada. Mining community patronage.

FIVE TIMES FIVE: Dionne Quintuplets—Dionnes celebrate their fifth birthday. An interesting subject and will bring in a few extra admissions. Well worth playing.—F. O. Slenker, Slenker Theatres, Rock Island, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

INFORMATION PLEASE, NO. 4: Deems Taylor—This series definitely draws them in here. This one is just as good as the others. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

INFORMATION PLEASE, NO. 7: Clarence Budington Kelland—Still going strong on this series. I like them, the audience likes them, and they are one of the few short subjects that have real drawing power. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N .Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

KENNEDY THE GREAT: Edgar Kennedy Comedies—Kennedy, as a magican, gets into a series of laugh provoking situations with the usual slow burn finish. Plenty of laughs and surefire where this star is popular.—F. O. Slenker, Slenker Theatres, Rock Island, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

MARCH OF TIME, NO. 6: Republic of Finland—Timely and interesting subject on a brave little country. It is still appropriate, even though the war is over. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MOLLY MOO COW CARTOONS: These are excellent cartoons in color and well liked.—H. E. Fulgham, Ideal Theatre, Fort Worth, Texas. Family patronage.

OFFICER DUCK: Walt Disney Cartoons—Disney cartoons are always welcomed by applause. This one not up to standard set by "Autograph Hound" but satisfactory and well received by audience.—F. O. Slenker, Slenker Theatres, Rock Island, Ill. Small town and rural patronage.

SKY GAME: RKO Pathe Sportscope—A good reel on duck hunting. Excellent photography and very interesting and pleased.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Twentieth Century-Fox

FASHION FORECAST, NO. 6: Fashions—Good short. Good humor from offside remarks. Entertainment plus beauty. Played on January 8-9. This one not apt if played before hot weather. Running time, one reel.—C. W. Davis, Rockingham Theatre, Reidsville, N. C. Small town patronage.

FIRST ROBIN, THE: Terry-Toons—Just happened to run this the day the first robin actually did appear in town and it was certainly appreciated as being appropriate. It is a good Terry-Toon effort. I just hope they can keep up the pace and not slip back into their previous style. Running time, seven minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

FLYING STEWARDESS: Magic Carpet Series—Only fair. Some pretty shots of planes. Too routine and not enough glamour, if you get what I mean. Running time, nine minutes.—C. W. Davis, Rockingham Theatre, Reidsville, N. C. Small town patronage.

FOLLOW THE HOUNDS: Ed Thorgersen (Sports)—For the color alone this is well worth running. The fall foliage is certainly remarkable. The short in itself is made up of good material but it is the coloring that will attract attention of the audience. To my mind this is one of those outstanding shorts. Running time, 10 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

HOOK, LINE AND SINKER: Terry-Toons—Fair color cartoon that is better than a lot of others in the same series. Running time, seven minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

MOVIETONE NEWS: We like it the best.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

SILLY SEASON, THE: Lew Lehr—Just fair.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

Universal

RHYTHM JAMBOREE: Two-Reel Musicals—Another excellent musical vaudeville reel by this company. Good for the best days of the week. Running time, 19 minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

SCRAMBLED EGGS: Lantz Colored Cartunes—A nice little cartoon but not so good as the Panda series. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

STRANGER THAN FICTION: No. 70—Always good so don't skip it. Running time, seven minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

Vitaphone

ALI BABA BOUND: Looney Tunes—Very good black and white Porky cartoon. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

ALICE IN WONDERLAND: Broadway Brevities—Skip it. A few laughs from the children. Running time, 20 minutes.—C. W. Davis, Rockingham Theatre, Reidsville, N. C. Small town patronage.

BUSY BAKERS: Merrie Melodies—Good cartoon in color. Running time, seven minutes.—E. M. Freiburger, Paramount Theatre, Dewey, Okla. Small town patronage.

CROSSCOUNTRY DETOURS: Merrie Melodies—An excellent Merrie Melodies. This series always good and this one is one of the very best. Adults will enjoy it as much as children.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

DAVE APOLLON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—A very good orchestra short that pleased everyone.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

DAVE APOLLON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—Very good. Running time, one reel.—Gladys E. McArdle, Owl Theatre, Lebanon, Kansas. Small town patronage.

EARLY WORM GETS THE BIRD: Merrie Melodies—A fine colored cartoon.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

EARLY WORM GETS THE BIRD, THE: Merrie Melodies—This series is getting better and better and this cartoon is the best we have played so far. Just a good cartoon. Running time, nine minutes.—A. J. Inks, Crystal Theatre, Ligonier, Ind. Small town patronage.

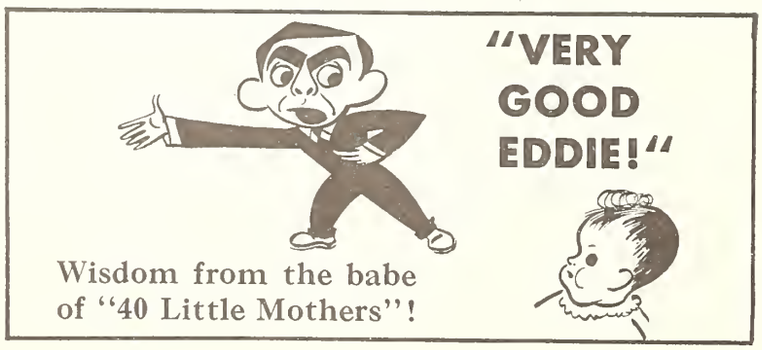
ELMER'S CANDID CAMERA: Merrie Melodies—The wisecracking rabbit of "Har-Um-Scar-Um" fame is back again in this color cartoon. I would like to see a lot more of him. I think Schlesinger has a dandy character possibility here. Let's continue him. As a whole the cartoon is good but not topnotch. Running time, eight minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III, Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.

GOOD EGG, THE: Merrie Melodies—Very good cartoon. Series popular here. Running time, one reel.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

LARRY CLINTON AND HIS ORCHESTRA: Melody Masters—This man Clinton added to our night's entertainment appreciatively well.—Harland Rankin, Plaza Theatre, Tilbury, Ontario, Canada. General patronage.

MIGHTY HUNTERS: Merrie Melodies—Another fine colored cartoon. Good enough for any play date any time.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

REMEMBER WHEN: Eaton Boys, Rags Ragland—Fast moving minstrel show with very good end men and acts. The baseball sequence nearly panicked both the crowd and me every time. They were talking about this rather than the feature as they were coming out. Running time, 18 minutes.—W. Varick Nevins, III. Alfred Co-Op Theatre, Alfred, N. Y. Small college town and rural patronage.



REMEMBER WHEN: Eaton Boys—Good two-reeler, different from the usual trend. Running time, 20 minutes.—Daniel Korman, Palace Theatre, Englehart, Ontario, Canada. Small town patronage.

SWING STYLES: Melody Masters—One of the best of the band acts with excellent vaudeville.—C. L. Niles, Niles Theatre, Anamosa, Iowa. General patronage.

TEDDY THE ROUGH RIDER: Historical Technicolor Featurettes—The most thoroughly enjoyed patriotic short that we have played. This series not liked by majority of my patrons, although this one well received. Running time 18 minutes.—Ritz Amusements, Inc., Park Theatre, North Vernon, Ind. Small town patronage.

Wins English Film Contest

William Wolf of the Allegheny theatre, Philadelphia, won the first award for the exploitation of the English double bill, "The Demon Barber of Fleet Street" and "The Return of the Frog," in a contest sponsored by the International Pictures Exchange of Philadelphia among Stanley-Warner managers in the territory.

New Condenser Type High-Intensity Lamp

A new high-intensity lamp developed by Theodore Hall, formerly of Hall & Connolly, and now head of General Arc Lighting Company of Long Island City, N. Y., is of condenser type using 13.6-mmx22-inch National White Flame positive, and 7/16x9-inch National Orotip copper-coated negative carbon. The new lamp, although described as a straight high-intensity projection light source in the April 6th issue of BETTER THEATRES, was referred to in some copies, representing part of the "run" prior to correction, as a reflector lamp using Suprex trim.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE

An international association of showmen meeting weekly in MOTION PICTURE HERALD for mutual aid and progress

A-MIKE VOGEL, Chairman and Editor GERTRUDE MERRIAM, Associate Editor

DOES IT SELL TICKETS?

During one of our stops on the recent Round Table junket, there was quite a to-do among the members on the value of organizational tieins. Especially taken apart by the dissenters were campaigns aimed for attention from among groups whose interests were centered on the cultural and educational aspects of the motion picture.

The boys sure tore the wind on that one. One man in particular was quite keen. He was distinctly agin' any kind of tiein that sought organizational support or endorsement unless the tiein aimed directly at some point that would interest individual groups enough to bring in extra business that might not otherwise be had. With a wave of the hand, the Round Tabler discounted the boxoffice influence of clubs, study groups, educators, and what have you. His experience, he insisted, proved these hookups of dubious value when effected in the hope that whatever prestige was forthcoming might turn the ticket-machines any faster. The theatreman further dismissed letters to doctors and nurses on pictures with medical backgrounds, letters to school heads and librarians on historical features, letters to lawers on lawyer pictures, etc. The lad certainly was hot.

It went on like that, both sides firing from the hip, when a quiet little chap down the end of the table cooled off the atmosphere by piping up with this:

"Gentlemen, there is only one thing to remember on any tiein, cultural, educational, high up or low down—'Does it sell tickets?' "

The silence that followed immediately was deafening.

Returning to the home plate, your Chairman found two contributions that would bear on the value of organizational tieins. The first was a promotion for "Abe Lincoln", put on with Cornell University journalism classes, and detailed elsewhere in the pages of this section. It was an unique job of work, carried through with discretion and finesse. Business prospered because of it.

The second communication came from Chris Chamales, of the Roxy, in Delphi, Ind. Enclosed was a front-page story of the arrangements effected by Chamales with the local high-school English classes wherein the programs at the Roxy are now used for regular courses. "After months of trial, I have finally convinced the schools of the importance of motion pictures as an educational factor," writes Chris, in throwing his hat in the air to express his complete satisfaction on the new arrangement.

So there you are.

There can be no definite rules about showmanship and the application thereof. This is a business of variables. A panic in one spot can just as easily be the world's champion bust in another. An educational tiein may be fat meat for one date, merely thin hash somewhere else.

If the hookup definitely pushes up the grosses, there's your answer. Anything else is just conversation.

From Manager Paul Jones, of Malco's Saenger Theatres, in Pine Bluff, Ark., comes a campaign, with the following:

"Since I look forward to the Round Table each week, I feel it only fair that I send along a sample of what we are doing—just to keep the old ball rolling."

Jones' admission is prominently printed in the expectation it will meet the eyes of theatremen for whom it is intended.

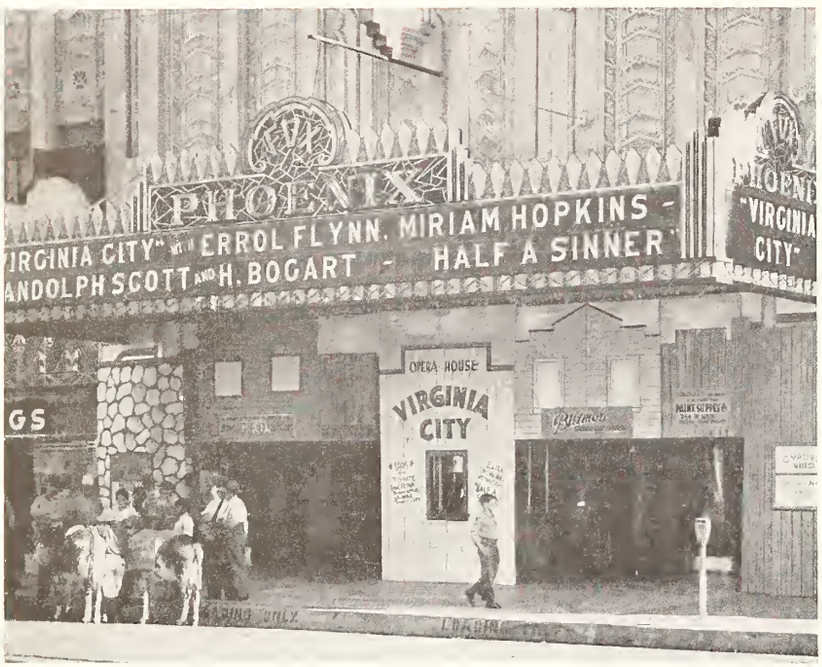
THE MEMBERS ADVANCE



Readers who have been following Lew Bray's meaty reports in the pages will be pleased but hardly surprised to learn of the Round Tabler's promotion to the post of City Manager, in Wichita Falls, for Texas Consolidated. Lew will continue his good works in the spot vacated by George Watson, another ace showman, who moves up to the position of district manager.

There will be additional applause for Round Tabler Ray Wheeler as he mounts to the job of City Manager, in LaPorte, Ind., for Indiana-Illinois. Ray has been hitting the ball right along. He will have opportunity to fatten his batting average in the bigger assignment.

Thus, up they go, and often enough to encourage others hustling for the break and wondering how soon it will come. The good news proves again that the man who has something to say has got to be heard.

Round Table In Pictures

Fronts go co-op, as witness Frank Hollis' "Virginia City" tieup for that date at the Fox, in Phoenix, Ariz., worked out by Lou Christ, division manager. Lumber and paint were promoted, and other merchants paid for construction in exchange for mention. Street bally had old-time prospector and bannered burrows making the main streets. . . . Set up 10 days ahead was Al Hamilton's lobby display for Easter and "Road to Singapore" at the Empress, Norwalk, Conn. Drawing was held for kids at Saturday matinee in connection with bunny give-aways supposed to be donated by Dorothy Lamour.

Highlighting A-Mike Vogel's recent visit to Oklahoma City was the Round Table showmanship conference with home office executives and manager of Standard Theatres. Starting with W. B. Shuttee, general manager, in the immediate foreground, and proceeding counterclockwise, are shown E. A. Patchen, advertising manager; Martin B. Coopersmith, Dee Fuller, Jimmy Burge, Spence Pierce, Julius J. Kirsch, circuit booker; A. L. Smith, circuit treasurer; Robert Busch, Jack Swiger, Paul Townsend and the guest of honor.

In advance of his date on "Geronimo" at the Paramount Theatre, in Atlanta, Ga., Round Tabler Billy Pratt promoted pony and rider from local riding academy. Lad dressed in full Indian regalia with plenty of grease paint rode through streets appropriately bannered.

Colorful Campaign Stresses Welcome Of "Million" Star

For the opening of "One Million B. C." last Friday at Loew's, in Louisville and to celebrate the return of Victor Mature, star of the picture, and local boy, Manager George N. Hunt, Jr., emphasized much colorful exploitation in advance of the date as represented, for instance, by the prologue to the trailer running a week ahead. In this, Hunt had a girl and boy in costume on stage with the house lights dimmed. As girl screamed, 30 seconds of recorded animal cries were projected with a green spot picking up the boy carrying girl on his shoulders across stage, trailer hitting the screen as they exited. For lobby, two weeks ahead a mountain of simulated rock was erected at the peak of which were placed large action cutouts of the star.

The usual radio announcements in advance were emphasized with the four girls in costume making the main streets with portable radios suspended from their shoulders. Broadcasts were tuned in with the spot announcements. In addition, the girls distributed novelty heralds stressing the "flower of romance" angle. Promoted flowers were attached to the heralds.

Animated street float that attracted crowds carried a fabricated 10-foot monster lunging at boy and girl in costume and boy appeared to throw spear down throat of the monster, whose eyes flashed red. For school cooperation, contests were put on with high school science classes for best essays on prehistoric times.

Welcome Party Arranged

Many tieins were arranged on the star's appearance in addition to welcome card planted widely in downtown area. Star was greeted at station by large crowd notified by the newspapers in advance, led by 60 piece band, which Mature conducted through the business section during the lunch hour. Tiein with local college allowed for school sororities to select girl who drew straws to see which one would be escorted by the star while in town. Mature was also appointed Mayor for a day, visited hospitals, orphan asylums, etc., and posed for newspaper shots of different kinds.

Among the most widely publicized stunts was for college geology class to honor the star at a prehistoric dinner which took place in a rocky section outside of town. All attending were dressed as cave men and women with the food being served and eaten in cave man fashion—at least until the newspaper photographers completed their assignment.

Floyd Presents Sioux Falls With "Pinocchio" Volumes

Manager Joe Floyd of the Hollywood Theatre, Sioux Falls, S. D., accompanied two young boys dressed in "Pinocchio" costumes to the office of Mayor John McKee where they presented him with several autographed volumes of the story on which the Walt Disney production is based. The books were later given to the Sioux Falls Public Library.

Buffalo "My Son" Campaign Features Perfect Son Contest

One of the biggest campaigns put on this year at Shea's Buffalo was "Perfect Son" contest arranged with the Courier-Express on "My Son, My Son". Starting two weeks before opening daily art and stories broke newspaper giving 100 per cent support to bring about victory of Buffalo boy seeking scholarship. Picture got another splendid break through local visit of Henry Hull who spent busy day here meeting critics. Making personal appearance, filling radio engagements, etc., Hull seized every opportunity to plug "My Son, My Son" and sure did a swell job.
